Prosecutor, Now Dead, Is Named by Dickman as Giving $2,500.

MRS. HALL'S LETTER CALLS BROTHER BRAVE

Watchman Tells of Seeing
on Fatal Night.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—With other testimony of the long court session almost routine, the closing minutes of the stay on the stand of Henry L. Dickman, former New Jersey State trooper, stood out in the trial today of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Henry and Willie, on a murder charge more than four years old. Dickman testified that the late Azariah Beekman, sometime prosecutor of Somerset county, paid him $2,500 to leave New Jersey when he was engaged, in April, 1923, in investigating the slaying of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

With the testimony of Dickman the sole oasis in the colorless desert of identification of exhibits, consisting of clothing of the slain couple, the oft-displayed articles found about the bodies, and letters, interesting but apparently not conclusive, was a hint of a battle of fingerprint experts to come.

A New York authority on fingerprints again declared that a smudged card in evidence bore the imprint of Willie Stevens' left index finger.

Joseph Faurot Called.

The defense has made no secret of the presence of fingerprint experts in its camp. Joseph Faurot, of New York, was on the witness stand for the State briefly today, as a recalled witness. He will return next week for cross-examination.

Dickman, brought from a military prison at Alcatraz, Calif., where he was serving a sentence for army desertion, told of joining the New Jersey State police in 1921, and beginning an investigation into the slaying of the minister and choir singer in October of the following year. In direct examination he testified that he deserted from the navy and was dishonorably discharged from the army branch of the United States armed forces. Under cross-examination he was asked by Clarence E. Case, defense attorney:

"And you were drunk for 41 days when you got in trouble in connection with the army desertion?"

"Yes."

"And then you deserted the New Jersey State police, leaving three months' pay behind you?"

"Well, I left and didn't wait to get my pay."

Paid to Go, He Says.

The prosecutor, State Senator Simpson, asked a question.

"Why did you leave the New Jersey police?" asked Simpson.

"I was paid."

"By whom?"

"Prosecutor Beekman."

"You mean Azariah Beekman, who was prosecutor of Somerset county then?"

"Yes."

"How much did he pay you?"

"Twenty-five hundred dollars."

"What did he pay you that money for?"

"To leave the State."

"Why did he wish you to leave the State?"

"He didn't say."

Defense attorneys resumed the questioning.

"Azariah Beekman is dead, is he not?"

"So I understand."

"That's all."

Did Not Know of Death.

Prosecutor Simpson took the floor again.

"You didn't know that he was dead when you made an affidavit that you were paid to leave the State, did you?"

"No."

"That's all."

Azariah Beekman, who died two years ago, was prosecutor of Somerset county at the time Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were slain. Later he was made a district judge.

The procedure of the defense in extending what amounted to an in-

OPPOSITION TO FASCISM GROWS MORE DANGEROUS

Linked by Police With Wide Organization.

MISS GIBSON TO BE TRIED

By JOHN CLAYTON.
(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Rome, Nov. 6.—Italy awoke today to the realization that the opposition to fascism, far from being crushed, was more dangerous than ever. Publication of the new laws and decrees in the fascist press this morning revealed how strong and extensive are the underground efforts against the government.

Driven entirely under the ground within the last eighteen months, the opposition turned from parliamentary action to guns and bombs.

There is no longer any doubt in the mind of the fascist authorities that four of the attempts against Premier Mussolini's life were closely connected, one with another, all part of the plans hatched by exiles abroad and the opposition leaders at home to lay low the man who, through his own wonderful personality and diplomacy and far-sightedness, placed fascism at the ruler of Italy.

In the opinion of fascist leaders, the attempts are an admission by

Apologies to France

Rome, Nov. 6.—Facing a rising tide of French resentment at the anti-French outbursts by fascist Italy has formally apologized to France and promised to do all possible to prevent a renewed demonstration. This unexpected conciliatory action on the part of Premier Mussolini's government has relieved somewhat the serious tension between the two nations.

Lost Baby Sleeps in Woods

Pets Drive off Rescuers After All-Night Vigil Over Boy—St. Bernard Prevents Saving of Three Children Who Die in Burning Home.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 6.—Charles, the 3-year-old son of John C. Adams, is back in his mother's sheltering arms tonight after being lost all night in the woods. And so are his three dogs.

If it were not true of the dogs, forsooth, it would not be true of Charles, for they sheltered him through a night's temperature of 30 degrees, and kept off the winds, witches, hags and the realities of the woods.

He was found early this morning, just arousing from a frightened sleep and stretching his tiny frame and weeping. But the boys of his neighborhood who came across him after an all-night community search had to subdue the dogs who were there to defend him. They are really hardly more than puppies, but together with Charles they are the "four musketeers."

Charles wandered away yesterday afternoon. Bloodhounds were placed on the trail last night and although they came close to where the child slept they did not find him.

Frost spread over the ground during the night and the sky held a frigid blanket, but when Charles wept of it all and lay down to sleep, his dogs curled up close around him and gave him the warmth of their bodies. He was little the worse for his experience when found.

The mother was ill when he disappeared and her condition was aggravated during the sixteen hours of his disappearance. Mr. Adams had offered a reward of $500, but the youngsters who found Charles would not accept it.

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—A large St. Bernard dog prevented neighbors from entering a one-story frame shack at Amagansett, Long Island, today, and as a result three small children were burned to death. The dog bit one of the would-be rescuers in the leg.

The children were alone in the shack when it caught fire. Their parents were visiting friends in other sections of the town. The victims were George Beshie, aged 3, and his brothers, Edwin and Louis, aged 2 years and 7 months, respectively.

SENATE DILEMMAS LOOM IN CHALLENGE ON VARE AND SMITH

Democrats Might Block
G. O. P. Organization by Questioning Oath.

DIFFICULTIES SEEN IF ATTEMPT IS MADE

Republicans Are in Position to Dispute Right of Southern Senators to Seats.

By NORMAN W. BAXTER.

The Democratic members of the Senate will not, on the basis of conditions as they exist today, need outside aid to decide whether the exclusion of Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, affords them the opportunity to organize the Senate or presents embarrassing honors they do not seek.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, and Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, have given public notice that they intend to challenge the right of both men to take the oath of office, and when that moment comes the Democrats—barring death or other misfortunes—will have a clear majority of six votes with which to answer the question that will be before the Senate.

Mathematically, the problem is simple. Only 28 of the sitting Republicans will be members of the Senate when the Seventieth Congress is called into being, and there are 33 holdover Democrats. Senatorial practice is to call the new senators forward alphabetically by States, and in groups of four, to take the oath. When it comes the turn of Illinois and Frank L. Smith, the legal composition of the Senate will be: Republicans, 32; Democrats, 38.

Outcome Is Uncertain.

Politically, the answer is indefinite now and may become more so, for neither the Democrats nor the Republicans have decided just how they wish to face the problem, and very probably will not do so until just before the new Congress is ready to assemble.

The Democrats must first decide two major questions.

First, whether they wish to confirm as Senate precedent the right of that body to challenge the fitness of a man elected to the Senate before he has taken the oath of office.

Second, whether it would be to their advantage to organize the Senate, with all the responsibilities that such action would bring, and enable the Republican party to say in 1928 that it was hamstringing through lack of cooperation and coordination between Congress and the White House.

The Republicans will have to decide, if they wish to take advantage of an unpleasant dilemma, and

Hilltop Team, Brilliant, Defeats Syracuse, 13 to 7

Georgetown Eleven Rises to Heights in Victory;
O'Neill Boots Two Field Goals—Gormley Pilots Squad With Rare Skill.

By JACK ESPEY.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The unending stream of 1926 football upsets flowed into Syracuse today with Coach Lou Little's Georgetown University eleven swimming at the front and tonight this city is filled with people who still are dazed at the 13-to-7 victory that the Hilltop team put over on Syracuse university.

Let that tie game with Pittsburgh and the defeat from West Virginia be forgotten, for Georgetown now finds itself standing in the front row of the crowd at the bargain counter of glory and being handed a man's sized package.

There can be no questioning Georgetown's strength after today's triumph. Syracuse, the team which scored 21 points on the Army, showed little ability to crash through the stalwart Hilltop line.

Georgetown's apparent ease at plowing through, around and over the Orange defense came to the eyes of the 20,000 spectators in the very first quarter, even during the first five minutes.

A husky Orange eleven, equally as heavy as Georgetown's famed crew of big boys, at no time threatened to win the decision. In fact only once did Coach Pete Reynolds' men get near the Georgetown goal, and that was when they registered their only touchdown on a forward pass that Hanson carried 50 yards to the final white stripe.

The Syracuse players simply were meeting opponents who in every sense are stamped fit for selection on the all-American teams, and such caliber of opposition is enough to give any club a defeat.

The truth of this assertion could be easily seen as "Babe" Connahnton, the 275-pound guard; Capt. Frank McGrath, Carl Waite and the tackles, Saur and Mosko, piled up the Syracuse plays time after time, refusing to give ground to all attempts of the Orange which failed to make a single first-down by line plunging.

Press box critics said without hesitation that the Hilltoppers named above gave the best exhibition of football that has graced Archibald stadium this year. And no wonder.

Ray Barbuti, the line plunging 190-pound fullback of the Orange, was thrown for a loss more often

MARYLAND CONFOUNDS

Capt. Stevens Runs 70 Yards
With Fumble as Team Surprises Elis.

KESSLER'S KICKS COUNT

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 6.—Yale's football prestige suffered another reverse in the huge bowl this afternoon when little Maryland defeated the Bulldogs, 15 to 0, in a game that always held something of interest for the crowd of about 15,000.

Capt. Stevens, the Maryland right halfback, scored in the first period and, in the second session, added three more points with a pretty goal from the field from Yale's 20-yard line. Thomas, the Maryland fullback, aided the third and last score when he went over the goal line for a touchdown from the 1-yard mark.

Stevens made the first touchdown by grabbing a Yale fumble and racing 70 yards.

Yale was clearly outplayed by the Maryland team, but as a matter of fact, the visitors outweighed Yale in the line by a considerable margin.

The Southerners' line not only was powerful in beef, but also in defensive and offensive play.

Yale did not derive much pleasure in her attempts to gain through Maryland's line. In fact, the Bull Dogs appeared from the start to be destined to a lean afternoon.

Kessler did the kicking for Maryland and Garvey for Yale, and here again the advantages rested with the visitors. Phalling, who went in for Garvey in the second period, did the punting for the Blue thereafter. Garvey, Brown and Phalling performed well in Yale's backfield, but they did not have the support that the Southern backs enjoyed.

After Maryland had carried the ball down the field to Yale's 20-yard line and then lost it when a forward pass was grabbed by a Yale man, Phalling's punt from the 20-yard line was blocked as the Maryland line charged fiercely

PRINCETON TRIUMPHS
OVER HARVARD, 12 TO 0

Tigers Make Capital of Crim-son's Mistakes as 55,000
See Contest.

SLAGLE BACK IN FORM

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6 (By the Associated Press).—Harvard's dream of a return to "Big Three" championship heights this year was shattered today by Princeton's alert, aggressive eleven in a bitterly fought and raggedly-played battle.

The Tigers, staging a comeback, lawed their way to victory by taking advantage of the Crimson's misplays and rolling up a margin of 12 to 0 that was composed of a touchdown, a safety and field goal.

Most of the vast and colorful crowd of 55,000 spectators jamming Harvard stadium came in expectation of seeing the rejuvenated Crimson forces avenge the sting of two overwhelming setbacks at the hands of old Nassau. Instead they saw the Cambridge eleven, in spite of a gallant stand, beaten largely by its own mistakes—"breaks" which a fiercely charging Tiger attack was quick to capitalize.

It wasn't a rout, as Harvard's last two games against Princeton have been, but it was a stunning setback nevertheless to the forward surge of Crimson hopes of a return to gridiron greatness.

For Princeton it was a sensational return to winning form, a victory that starts the Tigers on the road to successful defense of the "Big Three" crown with Yale to be met next Saturday in the decisive test.

The Tiger stars who have been out of action most of the season, Dan Caulkins and Jake Slagle, returned to play leading roles in bringing about the downfall of the Crimson. Caulkins, on a brilliant 13-yard end run, scored the touchdown that put Princeton in the front in the second quarter, while Slagle, constantly a triple threat as he ran, passed and kicked with dazzling skill, booted a field goal in the final quarter for the concluding Tiger points.

A safety in the second quarter, gained when Clem Coady, Harvard

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).

The storm cloud that has hovered over Queen Marie's train for several days passed away tonight with the departure of Samuel Hill, eccentric millionaire who has been Marie's host on the Western part of her trip and the expulsion from the train of a reported representative of the Ford Motor Co.

At the same time it was officially denied that Queen Marie was confined to her bed by illness and that plans for the remainder of her tour had been changed. The queen passed a tiring day and late this afternoon retired to her private car to rest for a few hours before attending a dinner as the guest of Mr. Hill.

A call upon the queen by Dr. William D. Kirkpatrick, who met the queen while he was a war Red Cross worker, led to a report that she was under a physician's care.

J. A. Ayres Is Dropped.

The reported Ford representative, who was expelled from the train on order of Col. John H. Carroll, official host to her majesty, is J. A. Ayres, of New York. The colonel's action followed published stories quoting Ayres as saying that Ford was spending nearly half a million dollars to provide transportation for the royal party, and that Ayres himself was loaning money to members of the entourage with which to pay incidental expenses.

In a statement Col. Carroll said Ayres had presented himself in New York before the tour started, asking for permission to ride on the train on the basis of an agreement which he said he had with the Roumanian legation in Washington by which he was to have automobiles made by the Ford company ready for the queen at every city she visited.

Ayres was denied a seat on the train until Ottawa was reached, several days ago, having followed the train by automobile. At Ottawa, Col. Carroll said he took Ayres aboard out of sympathy because of the long jump from that city to Winnipeg and Ayres' inability to hire an airplane with which to make the hop.

Ayres was taken aboard, Col. Carroll said, with the understanding that he would remain inconspicuous while arranging for transportation.

TYPHOON IN PHILIPPINES
DESTROYS MANY TOWNS

Flooding of Calumbang River
Drowns 30; College at Los Banos Damaged.

TIDAL WAVE IS REPORTED

Manila, Nov. 7 (Sunday) (By A. P.).—A typhoon which swept over the southern provinces of Luzon and Samar Friday night caused heavy loss of life and property.

In addition to the storm in these provinces, the flooding of the Calumbang river, in Batanes province, cost the lives, it is estimated, of 30 natives. The insular agricultural college of Los Banos was badly damaged and structures there made of light materials were blown down, the damage being estimated at $40,000. Many towns in Laguna, Batanes and Tabayas provinces were destroyed.

It is impossible to ascertain the total loss of life or property in the storm areas because of the prostration of telegraph lines. Reports of the submergence of the town of Bauang by a tidal wave could not be verified.

CROWD IS THRILLED WHEN SADDLE CLUB GIVES HORSE SHOW

Expert Riders Add Zest to the Event Staged by Wardman

WILL BE HELD TWICE YEARLY, GHEEN SAYS

Ponies Ridden by Children
blage Lines Bridge.

Thrilling performances by expert riders added zest and interest to the picturesque exhibition of nearly 100 horses in nine classes at the field day and horse show yesterday held under the auspices of the Wardman Park Saddle Club in the Rock Creek equitation field at the north end of Connecticut avenue bridge.

The show proved such a success, according to John O. Gheen, proprietor of the club and director of the event, that it will be held each spring and fall hereafter, he said. The large assembly of mounts and riders presented a colorful scene and a large crowd lined the bridge to witness the show.

Among the features were the two classes of saddle ponies, the first up to 12-2 hands, to be ridden by children under 12 years old, and the second up to 14-2 hands, to be ridden by children under 14 years old.

Six silver loving cups were awarded the winners of the first three prizes in these classes. The cups were presented by John R. McLean, Emily B. McLean and Edward B. McLean, Jr., children of E. B. McLean.

By Grant's Permission.

The show was held under permission of Maj. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and public parks. The judges were John Walker, of The Plains, Va., and Maj. C. L. Scott, head of the remount department of the United States army.

The show became a real contest in the touch-and-out class, won by Herman Gardner, on Viking, owned by Miss Frances Saul, on the first attempt. He made a perfect jump of four difficult hurdles. Others were required to jump-off in order to determine the winners. The results of the jump-off were: winner, Miss Ostra Gault, riding Happy Days, owned by Mrs. Oscar Collican; winner of third prize, Raymond Norton, on King Joy, and fourth winner, Lucky Find, owned by Miss Mattie M. Stevens.

Twenty-six entries were made in both the women's saddle horses class and the open saddle class. The winners of the other classes are as follows:

Women's saddle horses—First, Sir Thomas, owned by Thomas P. Bones, and ridden by Miss Marie Lewis; second, Skylight, owned by W. S. Johnson, and ridden by Miss Margaret Bailey; third, Lyngayne, owned and ridden by Mrs. Charles H. Carlick; and fourth, Smartie, owned and ridden by H. R. Quinter. Saddle ponies up to 12-2 hands—First, Beauty, ridden by Meade Palmer; second, Firefly, owned by Charles H. Carlick; third, Lady Betty, owned by Richard Bates, and fourth, Man o' War, ridden by Dion Kerr.

Open hunters—First, King Joy, owned and ridden by Raymond Norton; second, Murad, owned and ridden by M. J. Lewis; third, Brownie Girl, owned by E. B. McLean and ridden by Stanley Greene; and fourth, an entry by Dr. E. C. Montfort.

McLean and ridden by Ostra Gault; second, Rabbit, owned by the Riding and Hunt club, and ridden by Hubert Mosley; third, Virginia, owned by the Wardman Park Saddle Club and ridden by Sheila Vite; and fourth, an entry owned by Admiral Carey T. Grayson and ridden by Hugh Kerr.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF TRACTION LINES HERE TO BE URGED

District Committee Members
Consolidation.

HOLD FORCED MERGER WOULD HURT PUBLIC

Predict Inferior Service or Bigger Bill for Public to Pay.

With the House District investigating subcommittee scheduled to resume its work tomorrow, it became evident yesterday there will be a strong effort at the next session of Congress for public ownership of the local traction companies. These members of the full District committee who have been most active in connection with the traction problem for the last several years made known they have abandoned hope of a voluntary merger, and three of the members say that inasmuch as drastic legislation seems necessary, Congress just as well may go all the way and direct the government to take over the properties.

Legislation forcing the companies to merge against their will would in the long run result in the public receiving the short end of the deal, they contend, and no amount of regulation or supervision could forestall it. There either would be inferior service or an increased bill for the public to pay, in their opinion.

No Kid Gloves for Trams. A call for the subcommittee meeting at 10:30 a. m. in the House caucus room was issued yesterday, and representatives of citizens' associations, trade groups and school organizations have been invited to be in attendance. Representative Gibson, of Vermont, chairman, is en route to Washington from Vermont by automobile and is expected to arrive in time for the meeting. Representative Reid, of Illinois, however, will not be able to return from Chicago until later in the week, and other members of the subcommittee are expected to be late in making their appearance.

For this reason the subcommittee sessions are first to be devoted to hearing the civic representatives.

Many reports making recommendations and discussing defects in this or that branch of the local government, including the schools, have been drafted by organizations, notably the Board of Trade, since the last meeting of the subcommittee.

It is not intended to go into the traction problem until there is a more complete attendance of the committee, but at that time the committee members say it is to be handled without kid gloves.

Shelves of Information. While withholding formal comment until they have heard the traction officials, the committee members privately expressed themselves as unable to comprehend the reasoning that although the companies are satisfied to go along on present fares as separate companies, if they merge, effecting a reduction of trackage, officials, clerical work, maintenance and other overhead costs, they will have to have higher fares.

The full committee has shelves stacked high with information on the traction companies, compiled from hearings year after year, yet no bill considered as inimical to their interests ever has gone very far. The tendency has been to let the matter rock along in the hope that the companies would cooperate more.

Aside from the House committee, Senator Capper, chairman of the Senate District committee, has expressed the opinion that something definite must be done at the next session. To this end he has been gathering information and making a thorough study of the matter.

Marine Corps Anniversary. Wednesday will be the 151st anniversary of the marine corps, and Maj. Gen. John A. LeJeune, corps commandant, has expressed hope that marines and former marines will hold local celebrations all over the country.

Man Hurt as Autos, In Crash, Hit His Car

In a triple collision yesterday at Eighth and Rhode Island avenue northeast Frank Minnen, 20 years old, 2915 Twelfth street northeast, received cuts on the head and severely bruised legs. He was taken to Sibley hospital.

Minnen was sitting in his car, parked at the curb, when two other colliding automobiles crashed into his car, police said. Policeman William Greenfield, of the Ninth precinct, received cuts on the hand that on June 21 she stumbled over a depression in the sidewalk on Fifth street northwest caused by a sunken manhole.

DISTRICT DRY CORPS JOLTED AS BUDNITZ QUITS DIRECTORSHIP

Follows Dismissal of Deputy Leader and Trio in Halt Car.

ANDREWS ORDERS MEN TO OPERATE LAWFULLY

Agents Shall Not Stop Autos
Without Unquestionable Reasons, He Says.

Another jolt was handed the District prohibition enforcement corps yesterday when Brig. Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, announced his acceptance of the resignation of Edmund Budnitz, of Baltimore, as prohibition director for Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Named district chief when Gen. Andrews organized the country into 22 enforcement districts in September last year, the resignation of Budnitz yesterday follows the ousting of Robert L. Livingston, deputy chief in charge of Washington work, Friday, and makes a clean sweep of directing officials for this territory. Livingston was asked to resign and three of his agents were dismissed Friday for conduct unbecoming a Federal officer, when they stopped the automobile of Charles R. Nash, assistant commissioner of internal revenue, near T. B. Md., more than a week ago. Announcing his action, Gen. Andrews was sharp in his criticism of the agents' actions and served notice that he will dismiss any other agent guilty of similar conduct.

22 District Chiefs. While there was no comment or explanation of the resignation of Budnitz, except that made by him that he desired to return to his private law practice in Baltimore, it has been known for some time that the District chief's work was not satisfactory to Andrews.

His resignation is to be effective at the convenience of Gen. Andrews and his service will end with the appointment of a successor. A new chief has not been selected. It was said, nor has it been determined who will succeed Livingston, except that a man will be brought here from another section.

The passing of the two enforcement chiefs follows precedence. With few exceptions every man who has been responsible for attempting to dry up Washington has fallen into difficulties which culminated in his dismissal, resignation or transfer. The passing of Budnitz adds another to the several of the 22 district chiefs who have been removed or resigned since the district scheme was organized, a little more than a year ago.

Budnitz has been under fire for some time, but he has been a close friend of Senator O. E. Weller, of Maryland. Senator Weller's defeat by Millard Tydings, Democrat, in the elections Tuesday, however, put a new light on the matter, and Budnitz's resignation ends five years' service in the prohibition enforcement ranks.

Deardorf Acting Chief. A sharp statement was made public by Gen. Andrews explaining the resignation of Livingston and the dismissal of E. K. Fitzpatrick, J. A. Carter and Leroy Cook, prohibition agents, working under Livingston's direction.

Edward E. Deardorf was named acting chief of the Washington prohibition enforcement district pending appointment of a permanent chief.

The fact that it was the automobile of Nash had nothing to do with dismissal of the men, Gen. Andrews said, and declared prohibition agents throughout the country must not stop private automobiles except "for unquestionable reasons," and then must conduct themselves politely, courteously and as becomes the dignity of a Federal officer. His sharpness was emphasized by contrast with the decision of the United States Supreme Court, handed down by Chief Justice Taft, in the case of Carroll vs. The United States, some time ago, that agents had the legal right to stop and search private automobiles on the road.

Bearing out his statement that Nash's official position had nothing to do with his dismissal of the agents, Gen. Andrews made public a letter written September 19, 1925, ordering dismissal of Prohibition Agent Thompson by O. D. Jackson, prohibition administrator at New Orleans, because he had made Federal enforcement "obnoxious and cheap." Thompson forced a man and woman to travel 168 miles under arrest after he found a pint flask, one-third full, in the handbag of the woman, on search of their automobile.

That case, Gen. Andrews said, should serve as an object lesson to all enforcement officials and his dismissal of the Washington officers was in conformity with his policy.

which, he added, he intended in similar cases.

That the prohibition agents, however, do not intend to accept their dismissal without protest was indicated yesterday when they made known their purpose to take their fight to the Civil Service commission with an affidavit giving their side of the story. There were nine agents in the party which held up Nash's automobile, but the exact part each played will be made in the affidavits which Fitzpatrick said is to be signed by all of the dismissed men.

The men were charged with having held up the automobile of Mr. Nash near T. B. Md., with drawn revolvers, using a smoke screen on their automobile, using abusive language, failing to make known their identity as Federal agents and stopping the automobile without reason.

Their conduct easily might have resulted in a shooting had the Nash party been armed, Gen. Andrews said.

His statement follows: "When asked the reasons for dismissing prohibition agents Fitzpatrick, Carter and Cook from the Washington Federal forces yesterday, Assistant Secretary Andrews stated it was because their conduct in stopping and searching a civilian automobile recently showed such disregard of instructions that he considered them unfit for Federal office."

"It is Mr. Andrews' practice, as the head of an organization, to use occasions like this as object lessons for his whole organization. In directing the discharge of these agents and the relief of the deputy administrator under whose personal direction they were operating at the time, he therefore comments upon their conduct and the action taken by him in a communication sent to all his field officers, as follows:

"The whole incident, in all its particulars, shows a serious lack of conformity with our instructions and general policy for the conduct of law enforcement. The deputy administrator showed a deplorable lack of leadership and sense of responsibility, and furthermore during the investigation was far from exhibiting the qualities of frankness and straightforwardness which should characterize an officer in our service."

"Agents Fitzpatrick, Carter and Cook, who participated in the actual stopping and search of the car, are equally guilty of inexcusable conduct. They used drawn revolvers and threatening and insulting language and methods absolutely without cause or excuse. They did not announce themselves as Federal officers or show their badges. They easily might have been mistaken for bandits and had the occupants of the car been armed their ridiculous conduct

APPEAL FOR SINCLAIR IS DISMISSED BY COURT

Tribunal Is Based on Walsh Bill.

SEEK STAY OF MANDATE

The District of Columbia court of appeals yesterday dismissed the special appeal allowed Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate, from an order of the lower court which overruled his demurrer to an indictment charging him with contempt of the Senate.

Mr. Sinclair appeared before the Senate committee on public lands and surveys and refused to answer questions which the committee was investigating the oil lease cases. The lower court overruled his demurrer as to six of the questions and sustained it as to the other four. He appealed.

The motion to dismiss the appeal was based on the Walsh bill, which did away with appeals from interlocutory orders of the lower court in criminal cases. The Walsh bill also was responsible for the dismissal of the appeals allowed in the oil lease conspiracy cases in which Mr. Sinclair also figures.

In neither instance did the appellate court assign any reason for the dismissal except to state that the motion of Gordon, Pomerene and Roberts, counsel for the government, to dismiss on the strength of the Walsh bill was granted.

The appellate court had heard arguments on the Sinclair contempt appeal, but had deferred decision, due to the fact that the United States Supreme Court had not decided the Daugherty case, which involves the same question of law, but entirely different questions of fact.

The contempt case now is back in the criminal court, but it is not likely to be tried for some time as the court is not disposed to tie itself up with the Fall-Doherty conspiracy case at the same time or anywhere near the same time. If the government should lose the Daugherty case it stands to follow that the Sinclair contempt case would be dropped. However, it may be that the highest court will decide the Daugherty case in such a manner as to leave the Sinclair contempt case "hanging in the air"—that is, on a question of jurisdiction or some other technicality.

George P. Hoover, of counsel for Sinclair, stated he would ask the appellate court to stay its mandate in the contempt case to allow time for him to apply to the highest court for a writ of review.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (By A. The agents invaded the city and county building, which houses the mayor's office, a dozen courts and scores of municipal and county departments and posted guards at every exit from the long room occupied by the tax extension department.

Then after ransacking every locker and finding the liquor, they arrested Arthur McVeady, for 16 years a clerk in the office; William Denson, a special assessment clerk and Fred Haverkamp, a former clerk, discharged three weeks ago. Agents said they had purchased liquor from all three.

CREDITS ON INCOME TAX OF 1926 URGED BY TREASURY CHIEFS

Would Cost Less Than Rebates, as Advocated by Coolidge, Officials Say.

SMOOT IS SURPRISED; ASKS DELAY FOR STUDY

Simmons Calls Proposal Humiliating Surrender; Wants Straight Cut in Levy.

(By the Associated Press.)
The sudden declaration of President Coolidge for a refund of 10 or 12 per cent of this year's income taxes caused a scratching of heads yesterday both at the Treasury and at the Capitol.

Surprised Treasury officials directly suggested that the President's proposal be accomplished through a credit on income taxes to be paid next year, rather than through a straight-out refund at this time.

Equally surprised Democrats, suspecting that Mr. Coolidge was trying to take the political play away from them, called the President's action a "humiliating surrender," and demanded again that the taxpayers be given a straight-out reduction in taxes rather than the refund.

Generally, in Republican and Democratic circles alike, the move was taken to mean that the session of Congress beginning one month from yesterday would have the issue thrust upon it from opposing camps—the Democrats holding to their demand for straight-out tax reduction, and the President's followers countering with the plan for rebates.

Secretary Mellon, genius of the administration's finances, was not in town when the official White House spokesman dropped the words setting forth the President's approval of the rebate idea. The Secretary has planned to return to apply the $250,000,000 surplus for this fiscal year on the retirement of the public debt. Treasury spokesmen explained, however, that the idea was entirely the President's and that the proposal could be accomplished without embarrassment to the Treasury.

Credit Plan Urged.
It was emphasized that the Treasury would urge that the refund be accomplished through the credit plan, which would spread the benefit over next year's income tax payments.

About 3,000,000 individuals and corporations would benefit by the program, and it was estimated that if immediate refunds were ordered by Congress rather than credit on next year's taxes it would cost much in routine expenses to return $200,000,000 to the taxpayers.

Senator Simmons argued in a statement given out yesterday that the surplus of $377,000,000 at the close of the last fiscal year also should have been returned to the public. He insisted proper relief would not be accorded through a refund, holding that it would permit partiality.

Only income taxpayers would benefit from the refund, he said, whereas the other taxpayers, besides the individuals and corporations, are as much entitled to consideration.

Rebates Are Unpopular.
"The President," he continued, also leaves out of consideration the deep-seated objection in this country to rebates and refunds. This objection exists for the reasons, first, that the party entitled to relief rarely gets the benefit of it through rebates and refunds; secondly, because of the wrongdoing and partiality always incident to the distribution by this process.

"I am grateful, however, and I am sure the Democrats of the country, who stood so solidly behind our demand, in the last campaign for an immediate tax reduction; and the millions of Republicans, who felt the same way; and the great body of honest American business will share in the feeling of gratification that the President and the Treasury Department have at length consented that a bill for some sort of relief from the existing overtaxation may be introduced and passed through the House; because we have been threatened—even since the election—that the Republican majority in the House would not permit a bill to pass that body and come to the Senate. With the assent of the administration, it is, therefore, I think, assured that a bill will pass the House and will come to the Senate."

League Demands Repeal Of U. S. Inheritance Tax

The American Taxpayers league in session at the Raleigh hotel yesterday adopted a resolution demanding that Congress repeal the Federal inheritance tax at the cent session. The meeting, called by Arthur A. Sherman, president of the Rhode Island State legislature, was attended by officials representing 20 States.

In addition to the resolution to be presented to Congress by this committee, asking for the repeal of the Federal inheritance tax, it was stated that the various State legislatures would be asked to formally protest to Congress against this measure.

According to the delegates at tending the meeting it is felt that the Federal joint inheritance tax is one of the most drastic invasions of States' rights that Congress has ever passed into a law.

The special committee designated to present the resolution to Congress asking for the repeal of the inheritance tax consists of: Edgar A. Brown, speaker, South Carolina legislature; A. P. Frymire, State legislator of Louisiana; William H. E. Aggett, tax commissioner of Connecticut; William Haskell, State senator of Iowa; and W. Cecil Nell, speaker, Georgia State legislature.

SENATE DILEMMAS LOOM IN CHALLENGES

counter by challenging the right of every Southern Senator who comes up to take the oath, on the ground that full and equal franchise is not enjoyed by the negroes in the solid South.

Burden on Democrats.

The burden of the decision rests with the Democrats, for the established facts are now that a challenge will be made when time comes for the two Senators, charged with having made excessive expenditures in their primary campaigns, to take the oath.

Senator Ashurst may change his mind. Considerable Democratic pressure already has been brought to bear upon him in an effort to have him abandon his announced position, but if he does, it is hardly likely that Senator Norris will be governed by any outside influences.

It may be said with equal positiveness that the Republicans are prepared to counter with their challenge against the right of Southern senators to take the oath, and that Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, will be the one, if others do not reach a similar conclusion, to take such action.

There is one way in which the Senate, if its members choose, may dodge the immediate issue. Once before the right of a member has been challenged prior to the administration of the oath. On this occasion his case was passed until the Senate had been fully organized and then his status was referred to a committee.

Whipland With Democrats.

This could be done again, but the Democrats holding the whipland as they will, could, if they choose, appeal from such action by the chair and force a vote of some kind. If they did this the first test of the right of the two men to take the seats to which they have been duly elected would come within the first few minutes of the new Senate's life, while Democrats had complete control.

Should the policy of delay be the course decided upon the Democrats will, of course, have surrendered the right to rule in their own might as to what shall be done in respect to the two senators and the organization of the upper body. With Smith and Vane passed aside the organization of the Senate would be Democrats, 47; Republicans, 46; Farmer-Labor, 1.

The vote of Senator Henrik Shipstead would perforce become the most important in the nation. He could, if he so desired, insure Democratic control or else cast his lot with the Republicans, and let that party break the tie that would exist through the vote of Vice President Dawes.

Investigation Held Certain.

Due to this line-up there will never be any trouble in pressing the investigation of the qualifications of Smith and Vane. The aid of enough progressives in the Republican party has already been pledged to give the coalition a majority in the prosecution of the inquiry.

The opportunity to organize the Senate may not arrive, however, in the later stages of the battle. Democrats who will support the Republicans in virtually every step they may choose to take against Smith and Vane will not vote against their party organization, involving as it does the capture of committee chairmanships and control of Senate business.

The aid of Shipstead is a gamble which both sides must take, and there is a strong suspicion that the Democrats are careless of the outcome. Old heads within the party are said to be against any effort to take control of Congress away from the Republicans, even in part. They realize that with the progressive block in action it will not be a hard task for the minority party to strip the gears of the Republican legislative machine, a line of action which these leaders are inclined to think will prove more profitable in the next campaign than any division of responsibility which they would have to assume once they gained Senate control.

May Dodge Issue.

It is obvious, therefore, from the maneuvers that are already being made, that the Democratic party may choose to dodge the issue in its inception. The doctrine of States rights will no doubt be invoked in many instances, especially by those members of the minority party who come from below the Mason-Dixon line and are anxious to do nothing that might involve the integrity of the white primary, grandfather clauses and other expedients that have been adopted to prevent the negro vote from being used at the polls.

This, it is expected, will also be the chief argument used by those Republican senators who intend to cast their votes in behalf of the two challenged men, for the right of States to designate their representatives is certain to be the focal point around which the battle will be fought.

McADOO INDIGNANT WHILE TESTIFYING IN "SLUSH" INQUIRY

Joke, He Says, When Politician Can Bring Reputable Citizen Into Case.

DEMANDS OPPORTUNITY TO QUESTION CAMERON

Denies Saying $1,600,000 Had Been Raised to Educate People of Arizona.

Los Angeles, Nov. 6 (By A. P.). William Gibbs McAdoo, indignant at being called as a witness here to face before Senator William H. King, appointed to investigate the alleged Arizona slush fund, declared on the stand that "it is making a joke out of the government and Senate when any politician can bring reputable people before the Senate on grounds such as these."

McAdoo, called as the first of seven witnesses subpoenaed to testify at the hearing, adjourned here from Phoenix, Ariz., replying to questions by Senator King, testified he had no knowledge, directly or indirectly, of any money having been sent from California to influence the recent election in Arizona.

Ralph H. Cameron, defeated Republican candidate for reelection to the Senate, charged that California money was sent to Arizona to defeat him. Cameron was not present at the hearing.

Thomas J. Croft, counsel for Cameron, asked the former Secretary of the Treasury if he had not stated in a speech recently at Long Beach, Calif., that about $1,600,000 had been raised for the purpose of educating Arizona regarding the Colorado river and other industrial developments and the political situation in that State.

"Imagination," He Replies.

"I made no such statement," McAdoo replied. "It is purely imagination. I never thought of such a thing."

McAdoo, asked by Senator King if he wished to make a statement, demanded that Cameron be brought before the hearing and compelled to state why he had "hailed up a reputable citizen" to testify in the matter.

"It is an absolutely indefensible thing in which he (Cameron) knew I had no connection. I want to cross-examine him and find out on what grounds I was subpoenaed."

Senator King said there was no implication that McAdoo had been connected with any fund in Arizona.

In addition to McAdoo, the witnesses called were: Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times; S. C. Evans, of Riverside, executive secretary of the Boulder Canyon Dam association; R. H. Ballard, vice president and general manager of the Southern California Edison Co.; Mark Rose, director of the Imperial Valley Irrigation district; W. B. Matthews, special counsel for the Los Angeles water and from the Republicans, even in part. They realize that with the progressive block in action it will not be a hard task for the minority party to strip the gears of the Republican legislative machine, a line of action which these leaders are inclined to think will prove more profitable in the next campaign than any division of responsibility which they would have to assume once they gained Senate control.

power department, and Will Irwin, a magazine writer.

Knowledge of Fund Denied.

Rose followed McAdoo to the stand and was equally firm in denying that he knew of any slush fund. Matthews likewise knew nothing that would support Cameron's charges. Ballard testified the Edison company had taken only a purely academic interest in the Arizona campaign. He admitted on cross-examination by Thomas J. Croft, counsel for Cameron, that his company had several applications for power sites on the Colorado river pending and that final decision probably would affect the company's interests.

Chandler's testimony centered about a series of articles printed by the Los Angeles Times under the by-line of Will Irwin, who is expected to testify next week. The publisher said the articles were offered by the North American Newspaper Alliance, and that after deleting portions and checking the remainder, he passed them for publication. Croft, cross-examining Chandler, elicited only denials when he attempted to show that the publishers obtained the items for political purposes. Chandler also denied knowledge of the alleged slush fund.

The hearing will be resumed here Monday.

WOMEN'S STATEMENTS CAUSE ROW IN LEAGUE

Mrs. C. H. Sabin Resigns for "Unfair" Tactics in Organization Bulletin.

"FUNNY," SAYS EDITOR

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.). Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Republican national committeewoman from New York, has resigned from the Nonpartisan League of Women Voters because of what she regards as "totally unfair" tactics in printing on the same page of the organization's bulletin statements by Democratic and Republican women.

The statements, about women in politics, were from Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, of the Democratic national committee, and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, jr., wife of the Republican senator from New York. Mrs. Sabin said that the latter "was a woman who has never held office or even taken an active part in politics."

Mrs. Wadsworth's statement said: "Men have not taken women in politics seriously enough for them to wield any powerful influence."

Mrs. Blair said of the men that "We find them fighting animals and we find their organization based on competitive and contest methods."

Miss Evelyn Brainer, editor of the bulletin, said she picked up the statements from the daily press because "I thought they were funny so I used them because I get tired of printing serious things. They really were not intended to apply to the campaign."

by Directors.

WILL SERVE EASTERN SECTIONS OF CAPITAL

Big Sum Promised on Condition Like Amount Be Raised for Construction.

Casualty hospital officials will have a drive for $250,000 beginning January 17. This money will be used in the construction of a 200-bed hospital, according to Dr. Joseph D. Rogers, president of the board of directors of Casualty hospital.

The building will be on the site of the present hospital on Massachusetts avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets northeast. The building will be of the latest construction and will compare favorably with any hospital in Washington for its size.

Hospital officials already have a substantial sum to apply to the project. The funds were left to them through legacies, with the provision that they be used in the construction of a new building, providing they could be matched with a smaller sum.

Casualty hospital officials, since its acquisition from Emergency hospital, have planned to give to the people of the Northeast and Southeast sections a hospital that has been needed for a long time. The new building will be a fulfillment of their hope.

To Serve Large Section.
It will serve the medical and operative needs of not only the Northeast and Southeast sections of the city, but also will be in a position to adequately care for the hospital needs of nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The committee making the preliminary arrangements for the drive will report to the directors at a meeting Tuesday night, at which time final arrangements for the drive will be discussed.

Citizens and church organizations have indicated their desire to aid in the drive.

RUDOLPH IS HONORED AT MUSICAL DINNER TO MRS. E. S. KELLEY

District Commissioner Presented With Resolutions of Regret at Leaving Post.

DOUGHERTY ADDRESSES
FEDERATION OF CLUBS

National President Invites the Capital to Send Chorus to Biennial Convention.

Commissioner Cuno H. Rudolph, retiring District commissioner, was presented with resolutions of regret at his leaving the District post at the dinner given last night in the Raleigh hotel by the District Federation of Music Clubs for Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, of Oxford, Ohio, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

The three District commissioners were among the 200 guests representing not only the musical world of Washington, but civic and organization activities as well, assembled to pay honor to Mrs. Kelley.

In a brief talk to the audience Commissioner Proctor Dougherty called attention to the fact that his first practical experience in music was pumping the organ at his father's church, and he urged the development of good music as an aid in civic welfare.

Miss Esther Linkins, president of the District Federation of Music Clubs, presided.

Compliments Capital Branch.

Mrs. Kelley talked on the work of her organization. She complimented highly the Washington branch of the federation and invited it to send a chorus to the biennial convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs to be held in Chicago, April 18.

Mrs. Kelley pointed out the value of poets, artists and composers in interpreting the soul of America to its people, and said music was the universal language which eventually would do much to bring about the universal brotherhood of man.

She urged Americans to cultivate their native musical talent and to spread music throughout the land. At the close of the speeches the contestants who recently won in the contests for the Sesquicentennial finals for this district gave a musical program.

TWO GIRLS ARE KILLED BY GAS FROM HEATER

Sisters of One Victim Narrowly Escape When Overcome by Fumes.

Gas escaping from a defective heater in a rear room at 30 P street northeast, caused the death last night of Mary Stewart, 21 years old, and Catherine Mercer, 11, both colored, while two sisters of the Mercer girl narrowly escaped a similar fate when overcome by the fumes in another room of the house.

Gertrude Mercer, colored, mother of the three children, had them in the care of Mary Stewart, a roomer at the P street address, while she went to her place of employment, the Grace Dodge hotel. Returning shortly after 9 o'clock, she found two of her children overcome by gas in the front room. She dragged them to the street, calling for help. Hearing her cries, Louis Lombardi, 315 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, joined the woman, and together they broke in the kitchen door and window, admitting air to the rear room of the house. When the air would permit they entered, finding Catherine Mercer dead on a table and Mary Stewart, also dead, lying face downward on the floor. Dr. Anthony Sindoni, who responded in a Casualty hospital ambulance, stated the two children found in the front room of the house had suffered no ill effects from their experience.

JEWISH VETERANS FORM LOCAL POST WITH 40 MEMBERS

Charles Kohen Elected as Temporary Commander; Will Do Welfare Work.

INTENSE NATIONALISM
URGED BY GEN. FRIES

Jews as Race Are Praised by Bishop Bristol, of Methodist Church.

A local post of the Jewish Veterans of Wars of the Republic was organized last night at the Jewish Community Center with a charter membership of 40, and with Charles Kohen, leader in local American Legion circles, as temporary commander.

The temporary officers will serve until January 1. Other officers chosen were Samuel Berlin, senior vice commander, Jacob Orken, junior vice commander, and N. H. Laden, adjutant.

The organization is largely devoted to welfare work, but extends its work to all creeds and nationalities. Morris J. Mendelsohn, of New York, national commander in chief, was present, and explained this activity of the Jewish veterans' organization.

Need for Loyalty Stressed.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, chief of the chemical warfare division of the United States army, stressed the need for loyalty to one flag, "to God and country," as he explained. He pointed out that an "intense nationalism" is the thing most needed. He declared that "I am for a multitude of veterans' organizations as long as they work toward a common end."

"There is no prejudice toward Jews here," Isaac Gans reminded the audience of Jewish veterans. He added: "It is altogether the man, therefore, get it out of your heads that there is any prejudice toward Jews. If you will look through the records of the important organizations of this city you will find that nearly all of them have at some time had a Jew at the helm of leadership."

Addressed by Bishop.

Bishop P. M. Bristol, of the Methodist church, declared that "there are more things to bring us together than divide us." He avowed that "Jews have never been known to form an organization to do some other faith."

Commander Kohen declared that the post would be "American first and Jewish second." Charles Riley, commander of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars, declared that school children of this country should be taught to have respect for the flag as children of other countries have for theirs.

Piano selections were given by Sylvia Altman. Her brother, Julian, played the violin.

Business men are offering use of their trucks to transport the clothing received. Boy Scouts have been placing placards in store windows, spreading the news of "bundle day." Donations will be received at the local headquarters in the Bond building, Fourteenth street and New York avenue northwest.

JOHNSON SEES PERIL IN REMOVAL POWER

Partisan President Would Bring Sad Disaster, Says
California Senator.

(By Associated Press.)
Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, is one of those who sees the shadow of a potential Old World dictator looming over Washington as the organization of a recent court decision in the Myers postmaster case. He said yesterday that in holding the President could remove Postmaster Myers from Portland, Ore., and put uncontrolled and uncontrollable power into the hands of a steaming, unbridled, unbridled power ever felt into the grasp of a political Warwick, the result would be "a sad disaster."

"If the will of the executive shall ever degenerate into mere caprice or blind partisanship," he said, "the agencies which have been established by Congress for the protection of the people will become the mere rewards of 'deserving' and active political henchmen."

Retirement Checks Out.

Paul Jones, secretary of the fellowship of reconciliation of New York, and the Rev. Warren H. Wilson, director of the town and city department of the Presbyterian Church, will be the principal speakers at the opening session. Dr. Oscar J. W. Scott and the Rev. J. C. Olden will discuss the attitude of the world toward the negro Tuesday afternoon.

STOCKS FOR CHRISTMAS TO BE DISPLAYED EARLY

Merchants and Manufacturers
Anree on Nov. 26 as Aid

OLD-TIME RUSH PASSING

At a meeting of local merchants held yesterday at the call of the Merchants & Manufacturers association, it was agreed to make forward this year the date of displays of their complete holiday Christmas stocks. The date agreed on was November 26, the day after Thanksgiving.

In the past it has been the custom of merchants here and elsewhere to defer the display until early in December. This year the local merchants decided to take advantage of the nation-wide trend toward earlier holiday buying. An analysis of last year's Christmas shopping records in several representative cities made by Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants & Manufacturers association, disclosed a marked tendency in the last two or three years on the part of buyers to do their shopping well in advance of the usual Christmas rush season.

The merchants' organization attributes this change largely to the energetic campaign in behalf of early Christmas shopping launched a few years ago by the various women's clubs. This movement was started by the women primarily in behalf of the women employed in the retail stores, who were subjected to such wearying strain during the Christmas week shopping rush.

The shop-early movement received further support from shoppers when it became apparent that by earlier shopping they could obtain a far better choice of gifts and could shop with more comfort. The real Christmas shopping period, it was said, now extends over a period of six weeks, instead of the six or eight day rush of former years. The merchants predicted an unprecedented holiday gift-buying business this year, basing the prediction on the current prosperous condition of the country.

Suppe Opera Given Here on Wednesday

Announcement of a fifth production of "Pygmalion and Galatea," a one-act opera composed by Suppe, by his Washingtonians, was made yesterday by Rollin Bond, director of the organization. No tickets are sold to the performances which are given in small halls and admission may be had through application to Mrs. Genevieve Bond, 1411 Massachusetts avenue northwest, to Dr. Eliza C. Polkner, 1730 H street northwest, or members of the company, Mr. Bond said.

BUREAU GIVES OUT DATA ON TAXES IN 247 CITIES

$63,584,524,863 Property Is Subject to Assessment in 1925.

LEVIES AVERAGE $47.51

(By the Associated Press.)

Property subject to general property taxes for city purposes had an assessed valuation in 1925 of $63,584,524,863, or a per capita of $1,560.07, in the 247 cities in the United States having a population of more than 30,000, the census bureau announced in a municipal finance bulletin.

Total levies on the property in these cities for the governments of the cities, counties, States, school districts and all other governmental units for all purposes amounted to $1,936,343,361, or an average for each person of $47.51.

Total revenue receipts of the 247 cities were placed at $2,508,924,366, or $570,755,502 more than the total payments of the year, exclusive of payments for permanent improvement, but $403,066,594 less than the total payments, including those for permanent improvements. In only 44 cities of those tabulated was there sufficient revenue to meet all payments. Payments in excess of revenue receipts were met from proceeds of debt obligations.

Of the total cost of city government, $2,911,990,860, the cost for operation and maintenance of the general departments, constituted 52.4 per cent of $1,528,556,704; outlays for permanent improvements, 33.4 per cent, or $973,822,096; interest on debt, 9.1 per cent, or $265,009,821; and operation and maintenance of public service enterprises, 5 per cent, or $146,602,539. Gross indebtedness of the 247 cities outstanding at the close of the year was $6,650,938,844, per capita, $63.17, and net indebtedness (funded or fixed debt less sinking fund assets), $4,659,629,234, per capita, $144.33.

Twelve of the 247 municipalities had assessed valuations of more than a billion dollars each on their taxable property. New York led with $12,944,481,000, with a total levy in general property taxes of $317,715,000.

The other eleven in order of their valuations: Philadelphia, valuation $3,967,810,000, levy $84,727,000; Detroit, $2,757,664,000 and $63,356,000; Cleveland, $2,168,243,000 and $50,108,000; Chicago, $1,873,922,000 and $152,054,000; Boston, $1,862,800,000 and $46,653,000; Baltimore, $1,476,386,000 and $26,644,000; Los Angeles, $1,374,751,000 and $33,550,000; Washington, $1,329,709,000 and $14,925,000; St. Louis, $1,194,633,000 and $26,744,000; Cincinnati, $1,018,498,000 and $21,297,000; Pittsburgh, $1,014,117,000 and $36,722,000.

GORILLAS DECLARED NEARING EXTINCTION

Fewer Than 1,000 Remain,
C. R. Aschmeier Tells Biological Society.

C. R. Aschmeier, of the National museum, expressed the belief that there are fewer than 1,000 gorillas in existence in a lecture on gorillas last night at the meeting of the Biological Society of Washington in the Cosmos club.

"I have killed gorillas," Mr. Aschmeier said, "but I do not like to dwell on it, or to think about it. To kill one is like killing a man, and in killing them I have felt the same reaction as if I had killed a man."

The gorilla lives in comparatively circumscribed areas in Africa, Mr. Aschmeier explained. They are confined to the higher mountainous sections that are still misty and damp in the remotest jungles, he said.

He made a plea that the great apes be spared, being so few. There are usually about 60 or 70 in each hunting region, he said. Unless they are spared by the rifles of hunters, he declared, the gorilla faces extinction. According to natives, the average age of the gorilla is 30 years, he said.

NAVY FLIERS TO TRY FOR SCHNEIDER CUP VICTORY THURSDAY

Win Over Italians Would Give America Permanent Possession of Trophy.

NEWPORT NEWS COURSE CHARTED FOR CONTEST

Seven Laps Over Triangular Airway Will Complete Race of 300 Kilometers.

Thursday the United States has the opportunity of winning for all time the Jacques Schneider cup, international trophy for racing seaplanes, when three United States naval aviators compete with Italian fliers at Norfolk, Va.

American teams have won the cup in the last two competitions, and rules governing the award provide that permanent possession of the trophy goes to the country winning it three times in a five-year period. The course at Norfolk has been charted by the National Aeronautic association and, while in the usual triangular shape, its turns will be sharper than those of other years. These will test pilots' skill to the utmost and may also reduce speed of competing fliers.

The course runs from the southern end of the Newport News wharf to the northern end of the naval operating base at Hampton Roads, then northeast to a point 15,906 kilometers from the operating base and back southwest to Newport News wharf, a length of 50 kilometers. There are seven laps over this course to complete the race of 350 kilometers.

Pulitzer Plane Entered.
United States entries in the race will be the R3C-1, with a Curtiss V1400 engine which won the Pulitzer race and the Schneider race of 1925. It will be piloted by Lieut. C. Frank Schildt, marine corps. The second plane is the R3C-3 with a new Packard 1500 engine, piloted by Lieut. George T. Cuddihy, U. S. N., and the third, an R3C-4 with a new Curtiss 1550 engine, flown by Lieut. Carleton C. Champion, U. S. N., who succeeded Lieut. Frank H. Conard, 2d naval flier, killed in a recent plane crash. All the American planes are sister ships having been built at the same time for last year's racing events.

Italian entries are three Macchi-Fiat monoplane equipped with twin pontoons and 800-horsepower engines giving them a reported speed of about 250 miles an hour. Maj. Mario de Bernardi, Capt. Arturo Ferrarin, Capt. Gasconci and Lieut. Adriano Bacula, all of the Royal Italian air force, from the team.

The Schneider race is the only international aviation competition for the year. The Gordon Bennett cup was the first international event and this was won by the French after three victories in succession. Following came the Deutsch cup, offered by the late Henri Deutsch de la Meurthe, also taken by the French in successive contests. Gallie fliers also won the Beaumont cup, presented by Commodore Beaumont, an American.

Competition Has Been Keen.
The Jacques Schneider maritime cup was presented in 1912, to the Aero club of France by M. Schneider, a Frenchman. It is a magnificent creation of gold, silver and bronze and for the three races, M. Schneider also offered a cash prize of $5,000 to be distributed among pilots finishing first, second, and third.

Competition for the cup has been particularly spirited in Italy, near to winning it in 1922, having won two previous races for it, but English airmen captured it that year. The first competitive race was held at Monaco August 16, 1913, and was won by M. Prevost of France, in a Deperdussin float seaplane with a 160-horsepower engine.

The rules providing that a country winning the contest for the following year, the second competition was also held in Monaco, April 20, 1914, the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany and Switzerland having entries. Howard Pixton, British flier, won this race with a Sopwith float seaplane with a 100-horsepower Gnome engine.

Italian Alone Finished.
The world war suspended the annual competitions which were resumed at Bournemouth, England, in 1919, but this contest was annulled because of heavy fog, only one flier, M. Janello, Italy, finishing the course and the fog being so dense that the observers in the finish stake boat could not see the plane as it flew over the line. In courtesy to the sportsmanship of M. Janello, however, the 1920 race went to Venice, Italy, and was won by Luigi Bologna, Italian entry, in a Savoia flying boat with a 250-horsepower engine.

Italy again won in 1921, at Venice, with G. De Briganti as pilot in a Macchi seaplane with a 200 Isotta engine, but its chance to win the cup permanently was lost at Naples the next year, Capt. H. C. Baird, British flier, in his supermarine Sea Lion II, defeating the Italian entries.

In 1923, Lieut. David Rittenhouse, U. S. N., won the contest for this country at Cowes, England, in a Curtiss float seaplane. The 1924 contest was canceled for lack of foreign entries, but was resumed in 1925, at Baltimore, and won by Lieut. James Doolittle, U. S. A., over British and Italian aviators. This victory gave the United States two "legs" of the necessary three for permanent possession of the cup, and its chances Thursday are the same as those of Italy in 1922.

Rules Provide Tests.
The general rules for the race necessitate a navigability test of two days' duration immediately preceding the race. This test

Capitol to Display War Flag on Armistice Day

At the request of Mrs. H. H. McCher, national president of the American War Mothers organization, the United States world war service flag will be flown on Armistice day from the dome of the Capitol, occupying a position immediately below the Stars and Stripes that day.

It will be flown there by the joint consent of Vice President Dawes, Speaker of the House Longworth and David Lynn, Capitol architect, giving collective recognition to the country-wide spirit of service and supreme sacrifice.

For several months the War Mothers organization has been encouraging display of the once familiar service flags bearing the blue and gold stars, in homes and elsewhere, and in making announcement of national recognition for the emblem.

which may be held in rough water, is over a five-mile course and requires pilots to taxi over the starting line, take off, land, taxi a half mile between two buoys at a speed of over twelve miles, take off, land, taxi another half mile between a second set of buoys; then take off again, land, and taxi over the starting line.

After this, the plane must remain at anchor for six hours, and the above test requires a seaworthy type of racing seaplane in which speed can not be obtained solely by sacrificing weight or strength in landing structure.

No change in the seaplane, other than shifting propellers, are allowed between the navigability test and the race, and under these rigid rules, the Schneider competition has proved an important stimulus in developing seaplane flying of high speed, the average speed of seaplanes having been raised from 45.75 miles an hour in 1913 to 232.573 miles an hour in 1925.

Veteran of 2 Campaigns.
Maj. De Bernardi, of the Italian team, was born at Venosa, Italy, in 1893, and is a veteran of the Italian-Turkish campaign at Misurata in 1912, and the world war, in which he won two military valor medals and two war crosses.

Capt. Ferrarin is a native of Thiene, Italy, born in 1895. He won a silver war medal and two war crosses and the Ministro Guerra aviation cup at Amsterdam in 1920, made a Rome-Tokyo flight in 1920, the Torino-Bucharest flight in 1921, the Torino-Warsaw flight in 1924 and the European capitals flight in 1925. He has flown with King Albert of Belgium.

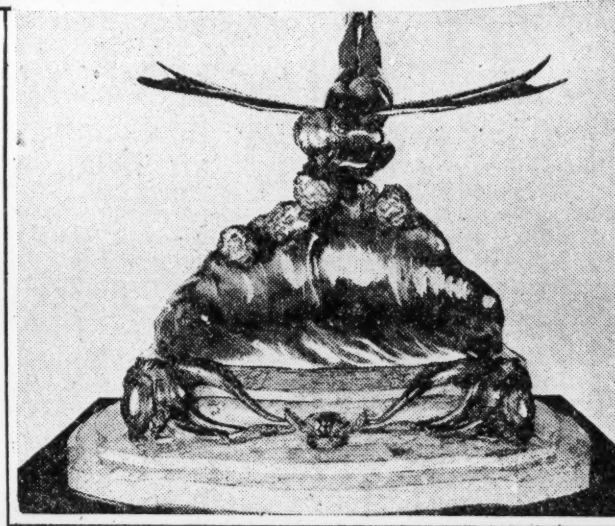

Capt. Gasconci, born in 1897, at Spezia, fought in the Italian-Turkish and world wars; has flown over the Alps and over northern and eastern Europe with torpedo planes. He also developed the catapult for launching seaplanes in the Italian navy.

Lieut. Bacula, a Neapolitan, born in 1894, carried out many successful raids during the world war and has won numerous war medals and aviation trophies.

MT. PLEASANT GROUP FOR ZONING CHANGES

Abolition of the 25 per cent clause governing the purchase of school sites, revision of the zoning law to eliminate certain injustices to property owners and the approval of the proposed bond issue for permanent improvements in the District, were the three recommendations to the subcommittee of the House approved by the Mount Pleasant Citizens association, meeting last night at the Carnegie branch library, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest.

The recommendations will be sent to the subcommittee investigating the District government tomorrow. The association voted to cooperate with the Federation of Citizens Associations in the membership drive. Nearly 100 members attended the meeting and 12 new members were admitted. John De La Mater, president, presided.

EDWARDS PICKS SMITH AND LONGWORTH IN 1928

Senator Propheesies That Prohibition Will Be Outstanding Issue of Race.

SEES FORMER AS VICTOR

(By the Associated Press.)
Propheesing that prohibition will be an outstanding issue in 1928, Senator Edwards, of New Jersey, yesterday nominated Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Speaker Nicholas Longworth as the Democratic and Republican presidential candidates, and picked Gov. Smith to win.

The voters were angered this year because prohibition was given so little attention as an issue, he said, and two years hence President Coolidge will have to give way to a "more liberal-minded candidate." Analyzing the results of Tuesday's election from the standpoint of a wet Democrat, Senator Edwards made these observations:

"Massachusetts—The right arm of Mr. Coolidge was cut off because it refused to point the way to either prohibition reform or prohibition enforcement.

"Pennsylvania—A most able and fit legislator was sacrificed on the altar of prohibition because he talked wet to his constituents and wrote dry in his platform.

"Maryland—An opportunist wet was defeated by a consistent, unafraid wet.

"New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nevada and Montana—By majorities of from 4 to 1 to 2 to 1, said Volsteadism was a failure.

"One-fourth of the people of the United States," said Senator Edwards, "said 'no' to the cry of Wheelers and Volsteadism when their names were counted."

Promotions Board Of Navy Corps Named

288 EGGS IN YEAR WIN HONOR FOR LEGHORN HEN

Brinklow Entry Victorious in U. of Maryland Agriculture Station Contest.

FLOCK OF 10 LAYS 2,312

A leghorn hen that laid 288 eggs in a year has been acclaimed "high hen" in the annual egg-laying contest conducted by the University of Maryland agriculture experiment station.

The industrious little bird that came so near to the egg-a-day mark was in the leghorn pen of the Brinklow farm, of Brinklow, Md. For city folk who do not know what a pen is, it should be explained that, in an egg-laying contest, it is an aggregation of ten hens entered by a breeder.

White leghorns triumphed in the egg-laying contest, winning all three ribbons for pen production. A Maryland pen, entered by John F. Wineke, of Reisterstown, Md., captured the blue ribbon and the highest honors in the contest, the ten hens in this pen laying a total of 2,312 eggs.

The Pennsylvania pen of Guy A. Leader, of York, carried off the red ribbon for the second best production by all breeds with 2,288 eggs. The third ribbon went to George B. Ferris, of Grand Rapids, Mich., whose ten birds presented him with 2,250 eggs for the 52-week period.

The hen of "high hen" honors which won "high hen" honors was a bird of the Michigan State college and one from the Pine Crest poultry farm, of Fullerton, Md. Each laid 288 eggs in the year. However, the Michigan bird was awarded second place on account of having laid three more "standard eggs" than her Maryland rival.

A total of 38 hens laid 250 eggs or more in the year, and 21 pens broke the 2,000 mark.

Bartlett Gives Date For Panama Flight

On word from Lieut. Commander H. T. Bartlett, commanding officer of the proposed flight of the two PN-10 planes from Hampton Roads to Panama, Capt. J. J. Rhy, commander, aircraft squadrons of the scouting fleet, has advised the commandant of the Canal Zone naval district that the earliest date for the flight start will be November 13. The final test will be November 11.

FLIERS ESCAPE INJURY AS PLANE LANDS IN MUD

Army Men Forced Down Near Benning Power Plant by

ARE RESCUED BY HUNTERS

Capt. Oliver Echols and Lieut. William J. Flood, United States army air service, attached to Cook field, Dayton, Ohio, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when motor trouble forced their plane down in the marshes about 500 yards from the Benning power plant. The aviators were rescued by hunters who saw their plane land.

The plane was piloted by Capt. Echols, who was flying from Cook field to Bolling field on an official mission with Lieut. Flood. While passing over the city a light of several hundred feet Capt. Echols told officials at Bolling field, the motor stopped.

Realizing he would be unable to complete the flight to Bolling field, Capt. Echols circled over the marshes endeavoring to locate a suitable landing place. He finally was forced to land a short distance from the Anacostia river. Immediately after striking the ground the undercarriage of the plane struck a small hole concealed by a thick growth of rushes and the plane fell over with its nose in the mud.

The plane, a D-14, will be taken from the marsh today by mechanics from Bolling field. Although an examination has not been made, officials at Bolling field said they believed it was damaged badly.

GUATEMALA CABINET OUT; NEW ONE SWORN

of United States Minister for His Post.

(By Associated Press.)
The Guatemalan cabinet, with the exception of Gen. Miguel Larraive, minister of war, has resigned, and a new one, understood in Latin-American quarters here to be a coalition of liberals and conservatives, has been appointed by President Pro Tempore Chacon.

Names of the new ministers were contained in a cablegram received yesterday by Francisco S. Latour, Guatemalan Minister here, and immediately it was recalled that Arthur H. Geissler, American Minister to the Central American country, had been ordered by the State Department to cut short his vacation in this country to return to Guatemala. He left Washington Thursday for New Orleans, and while officials have declined to explain his hurried departure, there have been rumors in Latin-American circles of impending trouble in connection with the presidential elections set for December 3.

Besides Gen. Larraive, the new cabinet is composed of Eladio Mendez, justice minister; Baudilio Palma, finances; Carlos F. Mora, public education; Felix Castellanos, agriculture; Jose Matos, foreign affairs, and Daniel Rodriguez, public works.

DAVIS TO HELP START IMMIGRANTS' MOVIES

Americanization Idea Sends Labor Secretary to New York Today.

(By the Associated Press.)
Secretary of Labor Davis will depart today for New York to meet the Leviathan when it docks tomorrow and participate in the inauguration of a new moving picture Americanization service for immigrants.

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers' organization, and Dr. John H. Finley, chairman of a council on education for foreign born, and others interested in the attempt will join Davis.

By the arrangement now going into effect on the United States Lines, pictures specially made or selected for the purpose of introducing immigrants to their new country and its history will be shown free to the steerage passengers during the voyage. A number of the larger producing companies have donated film for the purpose, and it is hoped to extend the service to all the liners which bring large numbers of immigrants. Parts of a production entitled "Abraham Lincoln" and a special one-reel picture, "Immigration," have been furnished the Leviathan for introduction of the scheme.

ATLANTIC NAVY FORCE MAY GET REDUCTION

(By the Associated Press.)
Naval forces on the Atlantic are facing a reduction if the department is unable to find any other source from which to draw enlisted personnel to man the new aircraft carriers, Lexington and Saratoga, now under construction.

This problem is understood to have been the subject of conferences in the White House last week attended by navy and budget bureau officials. No sign has been given that any increase in the navy's budget to make provision for manning the carriers is contemplated.

While no official exposition of the navy's plans has been made, it is expected that four, and possibly five, of the six battleships now assigned to the scouting fleet, stationed in the Atlantic, will be reduced to skeleton crews and put out of active commission to provide the 3,650 men needed for the aircraft carriers. Whatever solution is reached, however, it is regarded as unlikely that the personnel of the battle fleet, in the Pacific, will be affected.

CAMP BUILDERS FREED OF FEDERAL CHARGES

Jury Clears Firm of Allegations of Waste in Erecting Lee Cantonment.

MAY DROP OTHER SUITS

Richmond, Va., Nov. 6 (By A. P.)—Rhinehart and Dennis, Inc., contracting firm of Charlottesville, Va., was exonerated of the charges of waste, negligence, extravagance and infidelity to their contract in the building of Camp Lee, as preferred by the Federal government, in a verdict rendered last night in the United States district court here. The verdict announced by the jury following a consultation of only three minutes, was said to have been the quickest ever given in the United States in a case of such magnitude.

The collapse of the government's allegation against the firm is expected to bear materially upon similar cases concerning cantonment construction in the early war period said to be pending in other sections of the country. It is believed likely that many of these suits will not be pressed.

The trial here opened before Judge D. Lawrence Groner on October 19. Originally the government is said to have contemplated a $7,000,000 suit against Rhinehart & Dennis, alleging existence of fraud. No intimation of fraud, however, was contained in the charges which resulted in a trial after three years of preliminary litigation.

AMERICAN BRAVES DUTCH NEW GUINEA PAPUAN CANNIBALS

Dr. Matthew D. Stirling Leads Expedition Through Depths of Unknown Jungle.

AIRPLANE CHARTS PATH
IN UNEXPLORED AREAS

Scientist, With Small Party, Now Deep in Fastnesses of Snow Foothills.

Though each step forward presents a new danger, the little group of scientists and explorers comprising the Dutch-American expedition is slowly pushing its way over mountain and valley, through uncharted waters and the thickest of jungles in an effort to learn the secrets and unravel the mysteries of the world's greatest unknown land, Dutch New Guinea, according to reports received at the Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. Matthew W. Stirling, the American scientist and explorer who inaugurated the expedition and who gained the cooperation of the Dutch East Indian government, with Mr. Le Roux of the Batavia museum, was deep into the foothills of the Snow mountains when last heard from in August.

All but a few of the 400 officers, soldiers, Dyak carriers, Malay and convict laborers comprising the expedition, were left behind by Dr. Stirling after penetrating the jungle lands, while the doctor, his two Dutch companions, and a little band of Dyak boatmen proceeded into the Snow mountain foothills.

The almost nightly rains, which send the expedition to bed in soaking blankets and occasionally maroon the camp for days at a time; the mosquitoes and other insect pests, the fevers and blood-sucking leeches are exacting a heavy toll on the expedition.

Cannibals Impede March.

The greatest obstacle to the expedition, however, are the unfriendly tribes of Papuan cannibals, encountered every few miles by the expedition.

It is fortunate for the expedition that the Papuans are people of the stone age, who know nothing of metals, let alone firearms. Their implements are stone axes, their weapons bows and arrows and spears made of human bones. These cannibals used to catch their fish by shooting them with arrows before members of the expedition taught a few of the more friendly natives how to use fishhooks.

H. H. Hoyte, an American aviator, is the eyes of the expedition. Dr. Stirling took with him from America an all-metal plane. Hoyte, with Dr. Stirling as observer, flew over the jungle lands, over the Memberamo and Rouffaer rivers and other routes to be followed later. Altogether, the plane spent about 30 hours in the air, several times making landings in the interior.

Dr. Stirling and his little party explorers have had several narrow escapes from death or serious injury as the result of unexpectedly coming upon little bands of Papuans in battle array.

Papuans Attack Camp.

Several times the cannibals have attacked convoys of Dyaks. One night messengers reached Dr. Stirling from the Dutch sergeant at a rendezvous up one of the many rivers crossed, reporting an attack on the camp by a band of 100 or more Papuans, who fired arrows and threw their spears into the Dutch camp.

Dr. Stirling and his party went to the rescue of the Dutch sergeant and his little command, and went in search of the marauders, but found their camps hastily deserted.

The cannibals have tried various ways to destroy the expedition. Besides attacking them they have tried to lose them deep in the jungle depths.

Dr. Stirling reports an extremely rich and varied bird life. The land is also rich in ore. Dr. Stirling discovered a piece of coal on the banks of the Memberamo river, which, he declared, is an indication of the general condition.

Rare Plants Discovered.

The explorers are making many discoveries of rare plant and animal life which will be brought back to America and turned over to the Smithsonian Institution.

The American scientist contradicts the common belief that there is nothing to eat in the jungle lands of Guinea. Leaving out the fish and wild game and domesticated plants, Dr. Stirling reports one finds in addition to the breadfruits and figs, many species of palms, the upper part of the stalks of which are excellent eating.

A sort of wild cane which grows abundantly all along the rivers is

A New One-Profit Value —most powerful sedan of its size Studebaker Standard Six Custom Sedan

F. O. B. FACTORY

THE Studebaker Standard Six Custom Sedan is a signal example of the benefits of One-Profit manufacture.

In this new custom creation, Studebaker stamina and performance are cloaked in luxurious beauty. The long, low-swung steel body—full-vised for safety—is custom in line and symmetry, and custom in its color scheme of gleaming duotone lacquers.

Its custom interior is a symphony of soft color tones—carried out in rich Chase mohair upholstery, broadlace trim, silken curtains—even in its two-tone lacquered instrument board.

To assure a custom total, Studebaker has added over $100 worth of extra equipment without extra cost. An exclusive feature is the patented Studebaker ventilating windshield—draftless, rainproof even in a severe storm, but insuring a constant circulation of fresh air.

The Standard Six motor is of the quiet Studebaker L-head type with vibration reduced to a minimum by Studebaker's big crankshaft fully machined and dynamically balanced. This famous motor is the most powerful in any car of its size and weight, according to the ratings of the Society of Automotive Engineers—and its long-life is attested by more than 900 Studebaker owners who have driven their cars from 100,000 to 300,000 miles.

Until you have ridden in this Studebaker Custom Sedan, you will never know how much your automobile dollar will buy. Come in now and see this crowning triumph of Studebaker One-Profit value.

TWICE-A-DAY

TO CLEAR CLOUDY TEETH—DO THIS

Remove the Film Which Dulls Them, and to Which Many Serious Tooth and Gum Disorders
Now are Traced, This Simple Way

MODERN dental science ascribes many tooth and gum disturbances, and most cases of dull or "off-color" teeth to a viscous film that forms on teeth. Run your tongue across your teeth, and you will feel it—a slippery sort of coating that ordinary brushing fails to combat successfully.

Film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why, according to leading dental opinion, teeth look dingy and "off color."

Film clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It invites and breeds the germs of decay. And that is why it is judged so grave a danger to the teeth by authorities.

Film is the basis of tartar. And tartar, with germs, is the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why regular film removal is urged as probably first in correct gum protection.

Most dental authorities urgently advise thorough film removal at least twice each day. That is, every morning and every night.

For that purpose, obtain Pepsodent, the special film-removing dentifice which leading dental authorities favor. Different from any other tooth paste.

Pepsodent curdles the film, then removes it; then polishes the teeth in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay and scientifically

PACT WITH TURKEY VITAL TO BUSINESS. O'LEARY DECLARES

President of United States Chamber of Commerce Demands Ratification.

HOLDS TRADE HAMPERED BY LACK OF AGREEMENT

Points Out That 25 Foreign Powers Have Accepted
Similar Treaties.

Prompt ratification of the Turkish treaty in the interest of American commerce was urged in a statement yesterday by John W.
O'Leary, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.
By agreement the Senate will consider the treaty immediately after the holidays.

"In this country," said Mr.
O'Leary, "there is a real business interest in Turkey as a present and promising export market for American products, and further interest in many of the materials of industry available in Turkey. The lack of treaty relations between the United States government and Turkey is a handicap to American trade with Turkey and the Near East. This trade today is not making headway. Business men are slow to invest capital in countries where their rights are not assured by definite and favorable treaty provisions.

"When difficulties are encountered and formal or informal representations are required before a foreign government, an ambassador duly qualified, speaking on the basis of treaty rights definitely set forth, is much more effective than a 'commissioner' or 'representative' proceeding without the benefits of a treaty basis.

Trade Rivals Aided.

"It would be unfortunate if the opportunity for cultivation of mutually profitable trade relations between this country and Turkey should be sacrificed because of minor disagreements on certain provisions of the pending treaty. If the treaty should be rejected, present unsatisfactory conditions would be made worse.

"Some twenty-five foreign governments including all of the great powers, have entered into treaties with Turkey on terms no more favorable than those offered our government. Proceeding under treaty arrangements gives to the nationals of our leading competitors in trade certain advantages. Continued delay in ratifying the Turkish-American treaty will give to our European rivals the cumulative benefits of an early start and continued development of business relations which will become increasingly hard to overcome.

"If this treaty is rejected what is the alternative? Can the American government ask Turkey for better terms than are given to all other countries? Such a stand would not be consistent with the American policy of the 'open door' and equality of opportunity for all foreigners, and would be destined to be fruitless. Rejection now simply means continuance indefinitely of the present unsatisfactory status of relations between this country and Turkey."

Chairman Selected

For $8,000 Drive

Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of public schools, it was announced Friday night at a banquet at the Twelfth Street branch Young Men's Christian association concluding "father and son" week, will be chairman of the campaign committee of the "Y" drive for $8,000 during the week of November 10 to 17. He will have in charge 60 campaign workers.

Speakers at the banquet last night were Perry W. Howard,
Charles H. Houston, Joseph L.
Douglass and Dr. William Stuart Nelson.

Accountant Class Elects Officers

Officers of the senior class of the Washington School of Accountancy were chosen last Tuesday evening, with the following result: John F. Feeney, 105 Maryland avenue northeast, was chosen president;
Thomas S. Durham, 2210 First street northwest, vice president; O.
V. Rowe, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, treasurer, and Miss Mabel McKinley, 1909 Q street northwest, secretary. Leon C. Higginbotham presented Mr. Feeney's name for nomination.

After the election of officers the students voted favorably upon the question of the yearbook, and a committee composed of the class officers was appointed to take up the question with the school of law.
The yearbook officers will be appointed at a joint meeting of the senior classes of the schools of accountancy and law.

DISTRICT WILL APPEAL IN MISS MANNING'S CASE

Woman Is Awarded Damages for Injuries Caused by Safety-Zone Marker.

MADIGAN WILL OBJECT

An appeal in a damage suit, in which the District government feels that it did not get fair treatment from a circuit court jury, will be presented to the Court of Appeals this week by Frank W. Madigan, assistant corporation counsel, who will object to the District having to pay $1,750 for its good efforts to protect the lives of street car passengers from careless motorists.
This case is in the nature of a boomerang. It originated in an action filed in the circuit court by Miss Fraud Manning, 1330 Columbia road northwest, who stumbled over a "turtle-back" located on the corner of a street car safety zone on H street northwest, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

A "turtle-back" is a disk in the street at the end of a white line, inside of which motorists must not venture in order that the street car passengers might not be run down.
Miss Manning stumbled over one of the markers November 8, 1923, and was injured. The jury awarded $1,750 damages and the District government appealed.

According to Mr. Madigan, the marker was not defective and that it was a legal obstruction, subversive of the use of the streets. By inference, he says that, according to the Manning verdict, a person stumbling over a fire plug, an awning post, electric light pole, patrol box stanchion, watering trough, carriage block or a mail box might sue for damages and recover. All these things are legal obstructions, he contended, and have to be where they are.

105 VACANCIES AMONG SECOND LIEUTENANTS

No Promotions Made in Ranks of Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel and Major.

TWO BECOME CAPTAINS

During the last week no promotions were made in the army to the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel and major. Lieut. Col. J.
M. Kimbrough, infantry, and Maj.
Levi G. Brown, cavalry, are seniors in their grades and next due for promotion on occurrence of vacancies.

There is one vacancy in the grade of major, to which Capt. J. K. Cockrell, cavalry, is entitled, and upon his promotion Capt. William Spence, field artillery, will remain as senior in his grade.

First Lieut. W. H. Donaldson, jr., coast artillery, and D. G. Mc-Gregor, ordnance department, have been promoted to captain. Two vacancies are left in the latter grade, to which First Lieut. T. J. Heavey, cavalry, and H. M. Black, chemical warfare service, are entitled. Their promotion will leave First Lieut.
W. F. Safford, cavalry, senior in his grade.

The following have been promoted to the grade of first lieutenant: Second Lieut. W. P. Campbell, cavalry; H. S. Aldrich, coast artillery; H. P. Adams, field artillery; C. E. Archer, air corps, and T. E. Moore, field artillery. Two vacancies are left in the grade of first lieutenant, to which Second Lieut. R. D. Warring and S. Y.
McGiffert, field artillery, are entitled. Upon their promotion Second Lieut. John O. Hyatt, infantry, will remain as senior in his grade.
There now are 105 vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the army.

MASTER MOTOR BUILDERS

The Packard Eight four-passenger coupe illustrated below is one of the most beautiful and popular of the many available body types

LEADERSHIP in power plant engineering cannot be bought with money.

Packard has paid the price of supremacy in this field through twenty-six years of pioneer work—over a quarter century devoted to the development of specialized knowledge, experienced skill, perfected facilities.

And Packard power has been proven supreme wherever motors vie in moving men—through the air, over the road, or on the water.

At the recent National Air Races, planes powered with Packard engines won both the free-for-all Military Pursuit Ship Race —with a speed of more than 180 miles an hour—and the Trophy Race for light bombing planes—at a speed above 123 miles an hour.

Racing boats equipped with Packard engines again this year won the Gold Cup

Race and the Sweepstakes Race, the two great annual marine classics.

The new Packard cars, both Six and Eight, are establishing undisputed leadership on boulevard and highway the world around.
The improved Packard motors in these fine cars give a range of performance hitherto unknown.

Packard knows but one standard. Packard designs and builds with but one aim. And Packard's standing today as Master Motor Builder to the Army, the Navy and the American Public is but a measure of Packard's success in achieving that superlative perfection which is its constant goal.

Prices of the improved Packard cars have not been increased. For example, the Packard Six five-passenger Sedan is still $2,772.31 delivered at your door. Our payment plan makes Packard ownership surprisingly easy. May we explain it to you?

MRS. HALL'S COUSIN, TALL AND DIGNIFIED, IMPRESSES JURORS

Natural, Says She, for Widow of Rector to Have Her Coat Dyed Black.

SAW NO BLOODSTAINS
ON OUTER GARMENT

Display of Singer's Dress Shielded by Lawyers From Defendants.

By GRACE F. ROBINSON.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 6.—A challenge was hurled at the grave today in the Hall-Mills murder trial in progress here. And the Hall lawyers were obviously puzzled as to what measure they should take to refute testimony against a dead man.

Henry L. Dickman, former State trooper, testified that the late prosecutor of Somerset county, Azariah Beekman, gave him $2,500 to get out of the State police organization after he had worked one year and seven months on the Hall-Mills murder investigation.

"I was given inducements to leave the State police," Dickman announced.

"How much?" asked Senator Simpson, the prosecutor.

"Two thousand five hundred dollars."

"Who gave the inducement?"

"The former prosecutor."

Later Simpson drew from Dickman the admission that the prosecutor he referred to was the late Azariah Beekman, prosecutor of Somerset county, who conducted the futile investigation into the tragedy four years ago.

Legend Disputed.

The old legend of suspicion, which has grown up about the coat Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall had dyed a few days after the famous murders was disputed by the widow's cousin, Mrs. Anna K. Bearman.

When Mrs. Bearman left the stand the State produced its long-heralded witness, Dickman.

The former State trooper failed to tell anything damaging about the defendant on the morning session, except that Henry Stevens "shook and was evasive" when Dickman asked him about his whereabouts on the murder night.

Mrs. Bearman was impulsive. She was the first of the aristocratic coterie of Mrs. Hall's relatives to make an appearance on the stand.

A tall, dignified woman, in a simple blue satin gown, and a wide gray hair, she made a visible effect on the jury. She was the type of woman to whom family solidarity is the rule of life. And yet she told her story so simply, with so little show of resentment toward the State which is trying to send her cousins to the electric chair, that it was difficult to suspect her of going beyond fact to aid Mrs. Hall.

Wholly Natural Act.

To her it was a wholly natural move on Mrs. Hall's part to have her coat dyed for mourning wear. If Mrs. Bearman suddenly became a widow, she would go through with her mourning in the prescribed Emily Post manner, with no deviation from the ancient rule of full black for a specified time, then black and white, and on down the scale until she reappeared once more in her old habiliments. Anything else, to Mrs. Bearman's mind, would be unthinkable.

Just so, she made it apparent, that Mrs. Hall was doing only the expected thing when she sent a coat to a Philadelphia dyeing establishment a few days after the murder. As to Mrs. Hall's selection of a Philadelphia firm—that, too, was not exceptional, since her family and friends had been sending things to this firm for a long time.

There were no stains on the coat. Oh, no, not on the scarf, either, which was dyed at the same time. Both were in normal condition. Yes, it was a cheap coat—cost about $45 or $50—but Mrs. Hall had bought it that summer.

Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall late in the day was confronted with the blood-stained garments which Mrs. Mills wore when her throat was cruelly cut by those who killed her and her lover, the Episcopal rector, Dr. Edward Wheeler Hall.

Singer's Dress Shown.

Sensor Simpson, with a dramatic gesture, flung up the lid of a large pasteboard box and tossed out the garments in full view of the whole courtroom. There was the cheap, blue dress with its garish bloodstains and the inexpensive little blue hat the choir singer wore when she met the rector for the last time.

Dr. Hall's Panama hat, which lay over his face when the bodies were found, also was exhibited.

Simpson threw the dress over the witness stand with as much gusto as if the memento of tragedy were a thing of richness and beauty.

Timothy K. Pfeiffer, one of the eight Hall lawyers, immediately walked over and stood in front of Mrs. Hall and Willie.

Senator Clarence E. Case also attempted to protect his client from the hideous show. He walked to the witness stand and obscured Mrs. Hall's view of the grim garments strewn on the floor before the witness box.

"Why don't you move out of the way?" shouted Simpson. "Probably these defendants want to see these things. You're obstructing their view."

Case folded his arms and said dramatically: "That is my purpose in standing here."

William Phillips, who, four years ago, worked as night watchman near the Hall home, came to the stand to tell what he observed about the fashionable Nichol avenue premises on the night of the double killing.

Early in the murder inquiry he invitation to the State to bring out the statements from the witness that he was paid by Beekman to leave the State seemed to be based on a conviction by defense attorneys that the testimony would not be accepted by the jury and would serve to discredit Dickman's previous statements.

He had said that in February, 1923, he had gone to the home of Henry Stevens at Lavallette, N. J., to question the man who now is a defendant, as to his movements on the night of the murders. Stevens told him, he said, that he was fishing on the beach at Lavallette. Stevens was quoted by the witness as saying he at various times owned "guns" of .32 and .38 calibers. An effort to identify more definitely these "guns" as revolvers, rifles or other firearms, failed. Dickman also feared that Stevens seemed "nervous" and "evasive."

Dickman Cross-Examined.

Sensor Case's cross-examination of Dickman was directed at showing that Dickman could not remember any details of his trip to Lavallette from New Brunswick by train, that he could not describe the town of Lavallette, that he talked with Henry Stevens for only a few minutes and made no attempt to reduce Stevens' statements to writing and have him sign it.

Defense counsel pressed for description of the pier on which Dickman said he saw Henry Stevens at the beach, for details of whether Stevens had submitted all reports to headquarters of the State police as well as to the office of the late Azariah Beekman. Dickman's assertion that Henry Stevens was "nervous and evasive" received particular attention on cross-examination.

"Was it evasive when he told you he was on the beach fishing on the evening of the killings?" asked Case.

"No."

"Well, then what was evasive?"

"He kind of stuttered and his hands shook."

What did Mr. Mellenger tell you when you asked him if he had seen Henry Stevens fishing on the evening of the killings?" asked Case.

"No."

ing bushes, and were facing in that direction.

You turned around to look at them?" Case asked.

"Yes."

"Why did you look?"

"I thought they were holding a meeting at the Parker House and that one party had missed the other."

The State contends that Gorsline, a vestryman, and member of the choir of Mr. Hall's church and Mrs. Clark, the pianist, spied upon Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills as they carried information to Mrs. Hall. The defense was battling against Senator Simpson's use of Mrs. Demarest to prove this.

Warning By Judge.

Another clash occurred between Simpson and Case, when the latter tried to question Mrs. Demarest as to whether there was a friendly feeling between her and her cousin, Mrs. Clark. Simpson retorted that neither of the cousins was on trial, and that the question of whether there was a "friendly" feeling between them had nothing to do with the case.

During this phase of the testimony, Justice Parker warned Case: "The court thinks counsel is misquoting testimony and should not do it."

The testimony referred to was given by Mrs. Demarest yesterday. Reverting to Mrs. Demarest's story of having seen Gorsline and Mrs. Clark "spying" on Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills, Mr. Case asked the witness:

"What day of the week did you see them?"

"I can't recall," answered Mrs. Demarest.

The defense attorney brought out the fact that she could describe the automobile by which she saw Gorsline and Mrs. Clark, but could not remember the description of the automobile in which she said she saw Henry Stevens on the morning after the double slaying.

Willie Stevens Chukled.

Charlotte Mills, daughter of the slain choir singer, was on the stand for a few minutes to identify handwriting of Mrs. Hall in a letter written by the widow of the late Henry Stevens, her brother, last August.

In this letter Mrs. Hall wrote of the refusal of bail for her son, William Stevens, and as prosecutor Simpson read to the jury a paragraph in which the defendant wrote "Simpson insulted me outrageously and Willie jumped up to go for him." Willie Stevens chukled as he sat across the room from the prosecutor. The letter later referred to Willie Stevens as a "brave gentleman," and Willie smiled again.

Mrs. Hall's letter to her brother Henry showed her affection for the brother who was about to be "cooped up for weeks."

The letter found some solace for Willie Stevens in the fact that a fellow prisoner was a former marine who had "seen the world" and was equipped to relate some interesting experiences.

Mrs. Hall wrote that this former marine, however, had appropriated a camp chair sent to him and was sitting in it most of the time, was eating the extra food provided and reading his books. She was afraid, she wrote, that he might get out of jail and leave Willie Stevens without his cheerful companionship, but later thought that as he was comfortable he might remain.

Took Coat to Cleaner.

Mrs. Anna Bierman, cousin of Mrs. Hall, testified that she, while visiting at Mrs. Hall's home shortly after the tragedy, took away a brown coat and blue scarf which she sent to Philadelphia to have dyed black. On cross-examination the witness said that she volunteered to attend to this matter for her cousin. The apparel was normal, she said, with no "spots" or other discolorations on either.

The illness of Mrs. Jane Gibson will now cause a change in the trial procedure was indicated today when Special Prosecutor Simpson said he had enough witnesses in readiness to proceed without readjustment of his plans until Wednesday.

Mrs. Gibson today was "about the same," which has been interpreted to mean that she is not critically ill, but too weak to testify.

The court adjourned in the late afternoon until Monday.

The trial was resumed today with Mrs. Mary Demarest on the witness stand for continuation of cross-examination.

Clarence E. Case, of defense counsel, immediately began questioning her concerning the story she told yesterday of having seen Henry Stevens, one of the defendants, in New Brunswick the morning after the slaying of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills. Mrs. Demarest's testimony was introduced by the State in anticipation of an alibi defense for Stevens. The murder occurred not far from New Brunswick.

Mrs. Demarest said she could not recall the description of the automobile in which she saw Stevens. She met Senator Case's questioning with a bristling glare. At times she almost snapped at him. One emphatic "No" in a loud tone brought Case and Simpson into the first heated clash of the day.

Details Are Sought.

Case pressed for more details of Mrs. Demarest's testimony that she had seen Ralph V. M. Gorsline and Mrs. Minna Clark "spying" upon Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills in Buckingham Park, not far from the scene of the killings, three months before the rector and his choir singer met death.

He attempted to prove that Mrs. Demarest first thought the four were gathering in the park for a short religious service at the Parker house for incurables nearby and was halted by Simpson's objections.

The usual clash followed, with Simpson and Case both trying to speak at the same time.

She testified that Mr. Hall had a book that looked like a hymnal, that the actions of the lovers were perfectly proper and that Gorsline and Mrs. Clark sat in an automobile some distance behind intervening bushes, and were facing in that direction.

You turned around to look at them?" Case asked.

"Yes."

"Why did you look?"

PRINCESS SCRUBS FLOOR; COOKS HER OWN MEALS

Better Than Potsdam Court, Says Former Wife of Kaiser's Son.

MAKES LIVING BY ART

Berlin, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Scrubbing floors as an avocation is infinitely preferable to sitting in the princely halls of Potsdam, says Princess Alexandra Victoria, the divorced wife of Prince August Wilhelm, the former Kaiser's fourth son.

The princess, now the wife of former Commander itzemann, of the imperial navy, recently was found cleaning floors by a prominent Berlin lawyer who unexpectedly called upon her at her home in Munich.

"No doubt you are surprised to see me doing housework," the princess said with a beaming smile, "but believe me I am a thousand times happier managing my own home and supporting myself than I ever was when breathing the muggy air of the Potsdam court."

Princess Alexandra, who is a Princess of Schleswig-Holstein by birth and is a niece of the late Empress Augusta Victoria, depends on her artistic skill for her livelihood. Her husband, who is a simple bourgeois, has no fortune but merely his officer's pension. Her skill as a painter of landscapes and portraits is considered unusual. At a recent exhibit, at a fashionable Berlin hotel, she brought favorable comment from critics.

Her Munich home is a snug, comfortable apartment, in which, as a typical German housewife, she does her own housework and cooking. Since her divorce in 1920 and her marriage in 1922, the only cloud that has marred the happiness of the princess, who is almost 40 and is still famed for her beauty, is a longing for her only son, 13-year-old Prince Alexander. The boy was awarded to Prince August Wilhelm by the court in accordance with German custom and is being raised with the third and fourth sons of the former crown prince at Potsdam.

Edgar Lee Masters

WEDS SECOND TIME

Author of "The Spoon River Anthology," at 57, Takes a Bride of 27.

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Edgar Lee Masters, lawyer and author of "The Spoon River Anthology," and Miss Ellen F. Coyne, of Kansas City, were married yesterday at the municipal building by Deputy City Clerk McCormick just as the office was closing for the day, it became known today.

Mr. Masters was divorced from his first wife, who was Helen Jenkins, of Chicago. He is 57 years old. His bride gave her age as 27.

Chicago, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Edgar Lee Masters, poet and lawyer, who was married yesterday in New York, is descended from a family of Illinois pioneers, although he was born in Garnett, Kans.

He once related that his grandmother, wife of a Spoon River justice of the peace, refused to allow Abraham Lincoln to try a lawsuit in her house because his witnesses were chewing tobacco.

Masters is said to have met his present bride while writing "Fourteen Sonnets" to his former wife, Helen Jenkins Masters.

Kobe, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—The capital of Japan is emulating American cities in more ways than one. The metropolitan police bureau announces that crime has shown a tremendous increase in Tokyo during the last twelve months, more than 50,000 persons having been convicted of offenses during that time.

Concrete Landing Fields and Hotels Planned for Planes Crossing Oceans.

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

London, Nov. 6.—The British Empire will dot the seas with concrete floating islands to serve as ports for transoceanic airplanes if plans now before the imperial conference are carried out. Drawings of the proposed floating island airports are before the air communications committee and are being studied in connection with the program for inter-empire air routes suggested last week by Sir Samuel Hoare, the air secretary.

The mid-ocean's stopping places would be a quarter-mile long and a half-mile wide, with a 985-foot harbor cut in the understructure to provide a landing entrance. Caissons, water ballasts and giant gyroscopes would insure equilibrium and flotation at the desired level. The islands would be built of reinforced concrete, "electric cement" being used to resist the action of the sea water.

They would have hotels for air travelers, meteorological and administrative offices, repair shops for planes and light houses.

Brussels Is Prepared

Religious Ceremony Wednesday to Follow Civil Rites at Stockholm.

Brussels, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Belgium's capital today was putting the finishing touches on its preparations to give a truly royal welcome to its newlywed Crown Prince Leopold and his bride, Princess Astrid of Sweden, who are en route here from Stockholm for Wednesday's religious ceremony.

A wireless message was received this afternoon from the steamship Marie Jose and reported that the Belgian royal family, including Prince Leopold, was enjoying the voyage home. Princess Astrid, who is traveling to Belgium with her parents, left Malmoe yesterday aboard the Swedish cruiser Frygia.

Wednesday's religious marriage ceremony, which follows upon the civil ceremony performed in Stockholm on Thursday, will be brief. According to Le Soir, this is due to the fact that it will be a mixed marriage, Leopold being a Roman Catholic and Princess Astrid a Protestant. There will be no celebration of mass with a formal benediction afterward.

Instead, the couple merely will exchange the usual marriage vows, after which there will be a brief benediction.

Wedding presents continue to arrive at the royal palace. The Maharajah Karpthala sent a splendidly chased solid silver tea service. The Rotary clubs of Belgium have decided to offer the couple a bronze statue symbolizing Rotary international. The national wedding fund has reached $60,000 francs.

Chemist Found Guilty

Of Mailing Poison

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Alva W. Estabrook, Denver chemist, was found guilty in Federal court here today of sending poison through the mails to the home of Judge E. E. Porterfield, of Kansas City circuit judge. The conviction carries a maximum sentence of twenty years in prison.

Members of the Porterfield family were made ill from eating pan-cakes made of flour sent to the Porterfield home. This was analyzed and found to contain a quantity of poison. Testimony developed at the trial showed that Estabrook became bitter toward Judge Porterfield when the judge awarded Estabrook's son to his mother, following a divorce here.

"Honor Bilt" Homes are planned on the money-saving skyscraper construction principle. All material is carefully and accurately cut and fitted before it is delivered on the job. Our Ready-Cut System saves the cost of skilled labor and makes for stronger and more solid construction.

In the building of skyscrapers every modern means of rigid, permanent construction is employed; every method to save waste material, time and labor is strictly enforced. The steel beams are ready-cut and swung into place; no confusion, no cutting, and no waste. All framing material is cut to fit; the same as in our Ready-Cut "Honor Bilt" modern homes.

Over 37,000 "Honor Bilt" Homes Sold 24,500 Were Built by the Owners Themselves

The Ready-Cut System enables you to build at the lowest possible price. Only the highest principles of building construction are rigidly followed as recommended by the Building Code Committee, Bureau of Standards, Dept. of Commerce, Washington, D. C. "Honor Bilt" Homes embrace the best points of the hand cut frame construction and, in addition, save you from $500 to $2,000 on a permanent, substantial house.

The illustration at the right shows exactly how our "Honor Bilt" Ready-Cut System makes it easy for you to save money on the construction cost of your new home. The cutting and fitting of the lumber and millwork is done at our factory by modern machinery instead of by the old-fashioned hand saw method, thus saving high priced skilled labor. Our certified method of construction insures a better and more permanent building at a lower cost. The lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" Homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing. Clear Cypress for outside finish, and clear siding. Oak, Birch, Fir, or Yellow Pine (as specified) for interior finish, the kind of material that will prove to be a little better than generally used in home construction.

Here Is Proof of Your Saving!

A test made on August 2nd showed a saving of 40% in hours of carpenter labor, on a four-room house. Ready-Cut System has in many instances saved our customers as much as $1,000 on carpenter labor alone.

TCHAIKOVSKY NIECE, RUSSIAN REFUGEE, WORKS IN CAPITAL

Mme. Rimsky-Korsakoff Lost Everything She Possessed in Soviet Revolution.

NERVES ARE WEARYING FROM PLYING NEEDLE

Wants All Her Children Here; Noted Composer Is Giant, She Says.

Mme. Natalie Rimsky-Korsakoff, niece of Peter Ilitch Tchaikovsky, composer of the opera "Pique Dame," which will be presented at the Washington auditorium, December 6, for three years has endeavored to support herself by working at garments in Washington, where she took refuge following the Russian revolution, she revealed in an interview yesterday. Having lost everything she had in the world, faring the worse in proportion to the nobility of her name, Mme. Rimsky-Korsakoff waded out of the wild tempest to the sunny harbor of these shores, bearing only herself, her excellent education and noble training, and the glorious recollections of a civilization that passed with her fortunes.

Upon her arrival here she industriously put her hand to a partial means of support while living with her daughter, in Chevy Chase, who lost by the revolution as well as her mother, although she and her husband have been here for seventeen years. Mme. Rimsky-Korsakoff has worked at the garments at home, playing the needle at embroidery for fashionable dress-makers, turning to a means of livelihood as far as the means will allow, an art which was merely one of her many accomplishments of olden time.

Nervousness Increased by Work. But the work has begun to pain her eyes, she says, and to aggravate her natural nervousness. This nervousness, she explains, is a kind of heirloom of her family, possessed before her by the great Russian composer, her uncle.

She speaks three languages—Russian, French and English. Apart from her needlework, she has given a number of talks, she said, during her residence in Washington. Mme. Rimsky-Korsakoff requested that nothing be said of her experiences in Russia, owing to the fact that two of her children are now in that country, and any statement of hers which would throw an unfavorable light upon the bolsheviks might cause her children to suffer.

Her children are a son, Serge Rimsky-Korsakoff, now in Moscow, and a daughter, Alexandra Rimsky-Korsakoff, who married a cousin of her own name, living in Leningrad, and another son, Vladimir Rimsky-Korsakoff, who, with the aid of a fund for Russian students and his own efforts, is studying agriculture at the University of Wisconsin, she said. She declares that she hopes to bring her two children now in Russia to this country, and that the only barrier is the quota.

Wants All Children Here. If she could bring her children to this country, she declared, she would be at ease. The anxiety to which the bolsheviks went was largely a reproduction of the extremes that marked the French revolution. It was dangerous for persons who might be suspected of being aristocrats to make a casual remark on the streets.

Just as in the French revolution, persons were sentenced by the enraged and irate extremists to death. Madame Rimsky-Korsakoff was finally allowed to leave Russia. However, she did not wish any details published of the terrible times of this period because of apprehension for her children.

She is the widow of Admiral N. A. Rimsky-Korsakoff, of the Imperial Russian navy, she said. Her husband was at one time a director of the Russian naval academy, and later held other important posts high in the government service. She is descended from a Tartar prince, she said, and counts among her ancestors a Russian prince and princess.

REFUGEE HERE

Mme. Natalie Rimsky-Korsakoff.

Her fondest recollections, however, go back to the composer, Tchaikovsky, whom she regards as the giant of her family. He lived for some time with her mother near Kiev, Russia, and by his intimate associations with the children exercised a great influence, she declared, on her moral training.

Knew Emperors and Princes.

She has known emperors and princes, she avowed, and has had an acquaintance with all which the nobility of old Russia, drawing solely from the resources of its own production. However, she declared that no one of them was comparable to Tchaikovsky, and were plain individuals enough beside him. "When he entered a room, it was as if a light had entered," she avowed.

She related in detail how, when the opera "Pique Dame" was first presented in various places, he was feted and honored. The opera was first presented in St. Petersburg in 1890. A few days later it was presented in Kiev, and so enthusiastic was the reception given it that students, unhitherto Tchaikovsky's horses from his carriage while he was on his way to the hotel from directing the presentation and drew the carriage to the hotel themselves, cheering in ecstasy. When the opera was presented in Odessa, Russia, Tchaikovsky was carried about in a chair, she said, which he avowed was "much to his discomfort."

She described the composer as "kind," a man of keen intellect, who nevertheless liked to play with her and the rest of the children. He played with the children, however, because he took an interest in them, and was always looking for any talent they might have, seeking to aid them in their development. He had a hard time himself, for his father opposed his ambition to become a musician, she declared. He was educated in law, but when given a clerkship, proved so absent-minded that one evening he chewed up and scattered on the floor his entire day's work without realizing what he was doing.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. I tried to play it good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no loss of time, no trouble. I have nothing to tell, but will give full information about the cure if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 123 N. Maryland Avenue, Manassas, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

The festival is part of the nation-wide celebration of American education week, of which the final day has been set apart for the "cultivation of common interests in music, art and other fields for the improvement of civic unity."

Scenes of the festival will depict harvest time in ancient Greece and Palestine, present-day China, the Balkans and the United States. Much of the festival will be in dance form, created and directed by Carolyn McKinley and presented by members of the McKinley studio. The dramatic committee of the Arts club will sponsor and present the Greek scene under supervision of Maud Howell Smith and Henry K. Bush-Brown. Estelle Wentworth will appear in the Greek chorus throughout the festival. Mrs. Smith appearing as the queen of the harvest in the finale of the universal harvest, in which groups representing Friendship house, Columbia Heights and Petworth Community centers will appear.

The Chinese tea harvest will be given by members of the O. E. Mor Dramatic club, of Central High center, directed by Laura J. Bogue and sponsored by Mrs. Edith H. Hunter. The Balkan scene will be given by members of the dramatic and rhythmic clubs of Southeast center, directed by Evelyn Davis and sponsored by Mrs. M. W. Davis. Feast by Clubs.

The feast of ingathering in ancient Palestine will be presented by clubs of East Washington Community center, including the National Capital Players, Metropolitan Baptist basketball team, Washington Athletic club, Bryan and Buchanan Athletic club and the Washington Boys' Independent band. Mrs. L. W. Hardy is sponsoring the scene which is being directed by Bees Davis Schreiner and E. Arthur Griffith.

The first Thanksgiving in America will be given by members of the Improved Order of Red Men, F. A. Madison, great sachem, and of the Degree of Pocahontas. Mrs. Lulu Y. Mastin, past Pocahontas, and by members of the dramatic clubs of Thomson and Park View centers, directed by Pauline Oak and sponsored by Mrs. A. C. Driscoll.

Marie Moore Forrester is general director for the harvest festival, with Harold Snyder in charge of lights and Louise Wynne in charge of costumes. The symphonette of the United States Army band will play. A community dance in the armory of Central High center will follow the harvest scenes, and community games in the girls' gymnasium. The East Washington Community orchestra will play for the dance.

Reserved seats for the festival may be had by application at the Franklin administration building, in the community center's office, and these seats will be held until 8:15 p. m. Saturday. The various centers in the city also will furnish reserved tickets on request without admission charge.

For Head Colds

THERE are many ways to treat a cold in the head, but only one DIRECT way, and that is with vapors that can be inhaled.

The easiest and most satisfying way to get these vapors is to sniff a little Vicks VapoRub well up the nose, or melt a little in a spoon or tin cup and inhale.

The medicated vapors reach immediately into every corner of the air passages, soothing and healing with every breath.

For other forms of cold troubles just rub Vicks over the throat and chest at bedtime. It is then the body heat which releases these vapors.

AGENTS OF POLICE TO KEEP CLOSE EYE UPON ALL IN ITALY

Janitors and Housekeepers to Be Chosen Carefully and Commissioned.

BANISHMENT TO ISLES FOR THOSE SUSPECTED

Mussolini, in Person, Adds Touch to Code—Paris
"Wants No Quarrel."

Rome, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Enemies of the fascist regime, suspected of serious opposition but not committing overt acts punishable by imprisonment, will be liable to indeterminate terms of forced residence on four lonely islands by the black hand, suspected opponents of Mussolini against further attempts to assassinate him.

The islands of Lipari and Ustica, between the Calabrian and Sicilian coasts, near Stromboli volcano, Tremiti, in the Adriatic off the Apulian coast, and Pantelleria, in the Mediterranean, between Tunis and Sicily, will be utilized for this purpose.

The entire territory of the kingdom will be divided into police zones similar to those established successfully in Sicily in the recent struggle to wipe out the Mafia and black hand, suspected opponents of the regime being compelled to live from one to five years in a certain zone. Severe penalties will follow any attempted evasion.

No Possible Appeal.

Banishment to the islands will be reserved for persons considered most dangerous to national peace. Special provincial committees, presided over by the prefects, acting on police information will impose the sentence in these cases, no appeal being possible from their decision.

One of the most important instruments of the new vigilance system will be the janitor, for whom strict rules respecting competence and faithfulness will be drawn up. Latch keys being virtually unknown here, the janitor acts as guardian, seeing and knowing everyone who enters the building over which he holds sway. It is the present intention to make janitors and housekeepers semipolice.

Another innovation which will be speedily realized is the issuance of cards of identity, renewable at short periods, to every citizen and visitor to the country.

Police Code Amended.

Other plans were arranged at a meeting today under the presidency of Premier Mussolini, acting for the first time as minister of interior, of a special interparliamentary committee of nine senators and nine deputies, who put the finishing touches on the laws amending the police regulations and legal codes. These will be presented in the chamber on November 9 and in the senate November 16. Mussolini probably will make a speech on the former occasion explaining the reasons for the drastic measures, amounting almost to martial law.

The case of each Italian now abroad will be examined separately to decide whether to confirm the passport he now holds or withdraw it. In the latter event, the holder will be forced to return to Italy or suffer heavy penalties.

One of the most important aspects of the purification of the fascist party ranks ordered by the fascist grand council is the restriction of membership to men actually engaged in productive occupations. This will be arranged by obliging each member of the party to be a member also of some category of the fascist syndical organization.

Nine Seized on Border.

Aosta, Italy, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Nine well-known antifascists, believed to have been connected with the recent attempt to assassinate Premier Mussolini in Bologna, were arrested today as they tried to cross the frontier into Switzerland.

The band left Frosinone October 28 and arrived here several days ago. They offered guides 300 lire to conduct them across the border, but the guides demanded an additional 200 lire. This being refused, they gave the men up to the police. The arrested men had 15,000 lire and $200. They carried no documents by which they could be identified.

More Arms Found.

Paris, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—France has no quarrel with Italy and wants none, was the only comment in official circles in Paris today where there was a tendency to minimize the conspiracy to obtain autonomy from Catalonia. The plot was uncovered by the arrest of many alleged conspirators, both Spanish and Italian at the Franco-Spanish border.

Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian liberator, declared to have been one of the leading Italians concerned in the affair, is said by French newspapers to have admitted he received 500,000 lire from the Italian police. They draw from this the inference that the Italian government was aware of his intrigues. Some of the papers are inclined to see an Italian conspiracy to embroil France with Spain and provoke such reaction on the part of France as would discredit the country.

Further stores of arms for the now disbanded liberators of Catalonia were discovered today in the region of Perpignan. The examination of Ricciotti Garibaldi, who was brought here from Nice, seems to have established a direct connection between fascist activities along the French frontier and the attempt to wrest Catalonia from Spain.

Rooms—and More Rooms. Rooms that mean the comfort of real living to many a for-the-time-being Washingtonian who's thinking longingly of the comforts of real homes many a long mile to the West or South or North. And they're advertised under the caption "Rooms for Rent" in The Post. Turn to them and read content.

ENEMIES OF FASCISM GROWING IN POWER

the opposition leaders that they can do nothing unless Premier Mussolini is removed. Perchance the severity of the measures directed against these plots was not conceived to control isolated acts of a but to crush the dangerous, wide-spread criminal net whose object is death to fascism and the duce.

The discretionary powers given to the police to deport for political offenses or opinions are similar to those existing in Russia before the war. The police deportation act will be rushed through parliament, to become later part of the new police laws.

Article 5 of the safety of state law provides for the punishment of any persons guilty of spreading abroad false, exaggerated or malicious reports concerning internal conditions of Italy. This measure touches also newspaper correspondents on duty in Italy. Previously, correspondents of foreign newspapers could be invited to leave the country at the discretion of the government. Now they can be punished with jail sentences of five to fifteen years.

The state attorney decided today that Miss Violet Gibson must be tried for her attempt against the life of Premier Mussolini last April, despite the opinion of experts that she is totally irresponsible and is suffering from chronic paranoia. She will come before the new military court. The evidence gathered is conflicting. Miss Gibson at one time accusing a high political personage of a noble family of having given her a revolver. She now adopts the attitude that she will not betray her accomplices, no matter what is done to her.

The police of Bologna found a school notebook of the lad Zamboni, who was killed after shooting at Premier Mussolini last Sunday. In this notebook was written: "Caesar came, saw and conquered, but he was assassinated. I do not know whether I will live, but I will assassinate him."

Fascists declare evidence has been uncovered connecting the Grand Orient of the Masons with the attack.

McCARL RESTRICTS EXPENSES IN TRAVEL OF CITY OFFICIALS

CREATED BY RULING

Allows Only One Account;
Moller May Not Get $200
Spent on Trip.

District officials who have taken trips out of the city on official business since June 30 were caused uneasiness yesterday when Comptroller General John R. McCarl ruled that no expenditure for travel would be allowed out of general departmental appropriations, dating from the beginning of the present fiscal year.

The ruling came in the case of O. E. Fern, superintendent of machinery of the fire department, whose expense account for visiting Louisville, Ky., and Indianapolis, Ind., to inspect new types of fire apparatus, in 1925, has been held up. Some weeks ago McCarl ruled that Fern could not be reimbursed for his expenses, but yesterday he changed the verdict. He permitted Fern's expense account to stand approved, saying:

Allows One Account.

"In view of the long-standing practice of charging traveling expenses to departmental appropriations, this account will be allowed, but no credit will be permitted against such appropriations after June 30, 1926. For this year Congress appropriated funds for travel, and so there is no further warrant for charging travel to general appropriations."

This ruling created a confused situation. The appropriation for travel expense was only $1,000, including all District departments. The fund was apportioned to the several departments and in addition some extra trips were authorized. The most expensive of these was one by L. C. Moller, assistant director of traffic, who went to several cities, being authorized by the commissioners to spend $200, with a proviso making reimbursement contingent on McCarl's favorable ruling. It was not known yesterday whether all the $1,000 had been used by the departments to which it was allotted, or whether there was $200 left with which to reimburse Moller. Other officials who have traveled and whose expense accounts may become involved, are Maj. W. E. R. Covell, Warren B. Hadley, electrical engineer; Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst and Leonard Robertson.

Headquarters, District of Columbia national guard, has been advised by the civil service commission that five candidates from the local guard passed the competitive examination for selection of one man to be designated to take the regular entrance examination to West Point next March.

These guardsmen and their ratings are Edward D. Andrus, 1000 E street northwest, Company E, 121st engineers, 92; Percy Hayes Skinner, 2038 Eighteenth street northwest, Company E, 121st engineers, 85; Robert B. Father-and-son week will be observed in Washington beginning today and ending Saturday, in conjunction with the national observance of the week. For 20 years the movement has been growing throughout the country, sponsored by the International Council of Religious Education and the Young Men's Christian association.

Today churches of all denominations in the city have been requested to have a service for fathers and sons with special sermons, and tomorrow night is being emphasized as a stay-at-home night, when fathers and sons should get together in a discussion of problems and needs.

Harry Hoskinson has been elected chairman of the general committee of the Y. M. C. A., observance. Others cooperating are Earl B. Fuller, secretary, Dr. G. F. Dudley, the Rev. W. O. Waltemeyer, the Rev. Henry H. Ranck, the Rev. H. H. Melton, the Rev. W. L. Darby, H. J. Odenthal, Vergne W. Potter, E. D. Shaw, F. V. Thompson, Linn C. Drake, Dr. P. A. McLondon, Thomas M. Stearn, Martin A. Leese, J. Harry Cunningham, A. L. Baldwin, Frank N. Pierce, the Rev. J. Phelps Hand, the Rev. R. V. Nicholson, L. W. De Gast Earl B. Fuller, C. G. Morgan and Alton L. Wells.

QUEEN MARIE'S BALLET RECEIPTS ARE $17,000

Mothers' Memorial Alliance
Treasurer Lays Small Returns to Attacks.

UPHOLDS FULLER DEAL

(By the Associated Press.)

Wayne Kendrick, certified public accountant and treasurer of the Woman's Universal Alliance for the Mothers' Memorial, declared in a statement yesterday that gross receipts at the Metropolitan Opera house performance in New York October 24, which was attended by Queen Marie, amounted to approximately $17,000.

The entertainment feature was a ballet, "The Lily of Life," based on a fairy story written by Queen Marie and presented by the Lole Fuller troupe. Some of the boxes were said to have been sold for $1,000 or more.

Net proceeds were dedicated to a fund being raised by the alliance, and they probably would have been greater than they were, Kendrick said, if "unexcused" attacks on the entertainment had not caused many boxholders to cancel their reservations and take seats in the orchestra.

"Miss Fuller had the expense of bringing her entire troupe from Europe and their upkeep and overhead in New York," said Kendrick. "In the arrangements for the entertainment, as no guarantee could be given her, it was believed by the executive committee to be equitable and just to allow her 50 per cent of the proceeds. The alliance, to offset Miss Fuller's heavy expense, assumed the expense of the opera house, the orchestra and the publicity. It is my opinion the committee could not have got any other of the great ballets on such a basis."

"The president of the alliance, Mrs. Clarence Critchfield Calhoun of Washington, made the conservative statement that, judging from the advance sales, there should be $30,000 or $40,000 at least in the situation estimated the house at $50,000 or $60,000, which probably would have been the case but for the unexcused attacks on the entertainment."

"Many box holders, after these attacks, cancelled their reservations for boxes and took seats in the orchestra. The boxes were later filled for the entertainment, but at much reduced rates."

Referring to attachment proceedings against the receipts filed in New York by V. E. Scott and Suzanne Stuart to satisfy claims for publicity against the alliance, Kendrick said: "The part of the proceeds that was attached is being released on bond and so far as the suit of Scott and his claim for publicity is concerned, the alliance has not the slightest fear of the outcome."

Dr. Bowne operated on Boehman and succeeded in extracting two of the seven shots. While Boehman was being treated the two girls were brought in. They never had met each other before, they said.

FORD AGENT OUSTED FROM QUEEN'S TRAIN

portation for the royal party at the various stops. "He had no authority," Carroll said, "to make any statements and because he has broken his agreement with me he leaves the train tonight."

"We have made every effort," Carroll said, "to make this journey a dignified one and to divorce it entirely from any suggestion of commercialism and advertising. To that end no one has been permitted to come aboard the train except those necessary to the comfort and safety of her majesty."

The differences between Mr. Hill and Maj. Stanley Washburn, special aid to the queen, were removed to night when Mr. Hill left the train after the dinner he tendered to the queen and which Maj. and Mrs. Washburn attended, along with Gov. R. H. Hartley, Mayor Bertha K. Landes and members of the party.

The trouble began with the assumption by Mr. Hill of the role of host when he boarded the train at Spokane. He was in charge of ceremonies at the dedication by Marie of his unfinished and empty museum of fine arts at Maryhill, Wash., and his plans ran counter to those of Washburn and Carroll. Allegedly insulting remarks by Hill to the major when the party was in Portland led to an open breach, and Maj. Washburn remained with the train only at Marie's request.

Ayres was a figure in the program followed today by Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana. After motoring with their mother from Bellingham to Burlington, the children completed the journey to Seattle by motor, driving cars provided by Ayres, while Marie remained with the train. Ileana drove an open car with Ayres beside her.

At Seattle they drove to Washington stadium to see the Washington-California football game. Although the princess' lady-in-waiting and the prince's aid were in the party, Ayres acted as host and guide, and presented several local persons to the royal children.

There was no indication tonight that any change will be made in the itinerary for the remainder of the journey which calls for a two-day stop at Detroit and a visit to the Ford plant. It was understood on the train that automobiles would be given to the royal visitors by the Ford company.

Ayres today stated at Vancouver that the Detroit manufacturer was defraying the incidental expenses of the royal party and giving them the use of cars of his manufacture while they were on tour. Ayres said that even chewing gum and cigarettes were being purchased for the Roumanians and that the total bill for the trip would be $500,000 by the time they reached New York, where he said Marie would find a specially built sedan awaiting her use.

Officials of the Ford company in Detroit denied knowledge of Ayres or arrangements for paying the queen's expenses, said reports from there. Ford representatives said, however, that they had extended the courtesy of the use of their cars to her.

Having said farewell to Canada by a brief visit at Vancouver, B. C., Queen Marie and her suite returned to Seattle again today to be entertained once more at the home of Samuel Hill, her North-western host.

The return visit of the queen was not marked by elaborate ceremonies, but Mayor Bertha K. Landes and other prominent persons were invited to the Hill home for a brief reception. From Seattle the party will start to New York tomorrow morning by way of Spokane. With her the queen will carry memories of many unusual experiences, even for a queen, and some of them will not be wholly pleasant.

Following the reported dispute between members of her party recently in Portland came the announcement today from Gov. Friend W. Richardson of California that he would not officially invite the Roumanian ruler to that State. The governor's announcement was in response to a question put to him by newspaper men after Mrs. Alma De Brettville Spreckels, formerly a member of the queen's party, had returned to San Francisco and said she believed Marie would visit California if the governor officially invited her.

Would Welcome Any Ruler.

"If any king, queen, potentate or executive of any foreign country should come to California, I know they would be cordially welcomed by our citizens," said the governor. "Many potentates have visited California during the past four years. Many have called at my office to pay respects of their countries. In no case have I invited the head of any foreign country to come to California. The Roumanian case is the only one in which it has been suggested. All visitors are welcome to come to California, regardless of whether they are queens or kings, or just plain, honest citizens."

Rabbi Critchfield Roumania.

From Portland today came declarations of Rabbi Max J. Merritt, of Temple Beth Israel, in an address before his congregation that the Roumanians were "still clinging obstinately to the oppressive tactics of the barbarous past in their treatment of the Jews," and that he hoped the queen would learn on her American tour "what Jews can give to a country that gives them opportunity for advancement."

On her return to Seattle, Queen Marie's train stopped at Blaine, long enough for her to officiate at a ceremony at the peace portal on the American-Canadian border there.

YAKIS AGAIN DEFEATED; FEDERALS HOLD PASSES

Indians Reported Worried
Over Plan to Hem Them Within Their Hills.

FOOD SUPPLY IS SHORT

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Guaymas, Mexico, Nov. 6.—A strong band of Yaqui Indians, fleeing November 3 from the destruction of the towns of Bacatete and Bacatito by airplane bombardment attempted to run the blockade of federal soldiers stationed at Pilares to prevent the Indians from issuing through the mountain pass into the lowlands in search of cattle and grain. The comparatively small federal forces held their ground. Skyrockets sent up brought reinforcements from Ortiz and airplanes from the base at Lamisa. After half an hour of severe fighting the Indians were driven back into the Bacatete hills.

This was the third time in the last week that the Indians have attempted to enter the rich grain valleys, undoubtedly hunting provisions, since most of their supplies were reported destroyed when airplanes wiped out the Indian capital of Bacatete in the North Bacatete mountain range.

Reports from the Indian country say that the Yaqis are becoming worried over the preparations to hem them in completely and because of the shortage of food. Parties passing through the Cananea copper mining region, south of the United States border, report that the Yaqis following the mountain range all the way from Bacatete constantly are coming and going to the United States border for arms and ammunition. They seem to be well supplied with money and it is believed revolutionary interests in the United States are backing them.

Twenty-two American army automobile trucks of the latest model reached Ortiz, headquarters of Gen. Manzo, commander of the war against the Yaqis, this week. Fifty more are coming.

Another party of Yaqis entered Las Rastras Wednesday, carrying off a supply train. They left a receipt for the grain and a promise to pay and a carefully typewritten letter, which said:

"People of the district, do not be afraid. The Yaqis will not hurt you. We take your grain because we need it. We will pay you for it. We are fighting for the liberty of conscience."

party during their American tour. It was revealed here today by J. B. Ayres, personal representative of Mr. Ford, with the party. Ayres estimated the queenly tour would cost Mr. Ford about $500,000.

Expenses have included "loans" to members of her majesty's retinue for everything from cigarettes and chewing gum up to limousines. It was said.

Ford has been paying all automobile transportation and baggage expenses and all costs of the party, wherever the queen has stopped.

Mr. Ayres said automobiles had been the largest expense. Everywhere the queen stops and is moved in cars there have been only sedans and limousines furnished on orders of Ford, who pays for the time of the men used as drivers and for approximately $1,000 less expected on each car when it is sold. To date 168 automobiles have been used.

Ayres said that when her majesty arrives in New York she will find a specially built sedan awaiting her, trimmed in dark blue with royal purple wheels and the royal arms on the sides, the private gift of the automobile manufacturer.

Baptists Charge Religious Persecution in Roumania

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—A million Baptists will protest to the League of Nations against religious intolerance in Roumania. Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Baptist World Alliance, said today. He has just returned from Europe. The executive council of the Baptist World Alliance, he said, is now preparing a petition to be circulated throughout the world, memorializing the league to restrain religious persecution in Roumania.

Dr. Mullins declared Roumania to be the "darkest spot on the continent" and "ten times worse than Russia" in the matter of religious liberty.

New-born children can not be officially registered there unless they belong to the State church or conforming sects. Churches have been closed, ministers restrained from preaching and religious sects prevented from buying property for churches or cemeteries," he asserted.

"While the government is not so culpable as the Greek orthodox church, which dominates it and instigates the persecutions, it will not act until world-wide sentiment is aroused through the league and elsewhere against the condition."

"Roumania is indifferent to individual petition, but fears public opinion."

20 Packards at Service
Of Marie in Washington

During the four days that Queen Marie was the guest of the United States government in New York and Washington, the Packard Motor Car Co. placed 20 specially built automobiles at her service. Six of these were utilized by the queen and her party on arrival in New York, while 14 were sent directly to Washington from the Detroit factory.

The six cars used by the queen in New York later made the trip to Washington by night to join the royal party here.

M'CONVILLE'S PETITION TO END FATHER'S WILLS

Brothers Contend He Was Mentally Unable to Understand Act.

ESTATE SET AT $450,000

Arthur H. McConville and his brother, Paul B. McConville, two of the executors under the will of their father, Daniel McConville, who died August 5, and their brother, Donald C. McConville, petitioned the probate court yesterday through Attorneys O'Donoghue and Alexander to reject the three wills of their father and issue letters of administration.

The testator died at George Washington University hospital two days after executing the third will, by which disposition of the estate ordinarily would be governed. The estate is valued at approximately $450,000, and the debts amount to $272,270.

The petition attacks the mental capacity of their father to execute a valid will August 3. Ten affidavits to that effect are attached to their petition and they are signed by the brothers, the attending physicians and the witnesses to the will of August 3.

It appears from these affidavits Daniel McConville suffered from pernicious anaemia, and therefore, the affidavits declare, he could not have been legally able to understand the nature and quality of his act in executing the will.

Announcement was also made that the interschool orchestra of fifty pieces would play during the dinner, under the direction of Dr. Manley.

Y.M.H.A. WILL PRESENT ALL-JEWISH PICTURE

Most Dramatic of Its Kind;
Showing at Community Center Next Sunday.

The most dramatic all-Jewish photoplay ever brought to the screen, "The Law of Israel," will be presented next Sunday night in the Jewish Community center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest, under auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew association.

The association, which in the past has fostered the showing of native Jewish pictures, sponsors the local showing as the greatest of films it ever has presented in the Capital. The title of the picture has been changed from Yiddish into English, although the American editors were careful to use the Yiddish idioms whenever possible.

The cast of the picture includes many of the favorites of such films as "The Golem," "Yiskor" and "The Wandering Jew." Many traditions of the Jewish race are pictured in the film, which won praise in England, Germany, France and Italy.

PRESBYTERIAN PENSION REPORT UP TOMORROW

Meeting of Campaign Workers Will Be Held in Franklin Square Hotel.

GOAL IS SET AT $135,000

The first report on subscriptions obtained in the campaign now in progress among Washington Presbyterians for a fund of $135,000, the local quota of a national drive for $15,000,000 needed to put into operation the new service pension plan of the Presbyterian Church, will be made at a meeting of all workers at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Franklin Square hotel.

The solicitation locally started Wednesday and will continue through November 15, when a final banquet session will be held during the campaign.

John B. Lerner, chairman of the laymen's executive committee for Washington, announces that every penny pledged during the campaign will go into the retirement budget, the entire overhead expenses having been guaranteed privately.

The new pension system of the church, which was approved formally by the last general assembly, calls for the payment of stipends ranging from $600 to $2,000 annually to those paid servants of the church retired after 35 years of service.

The $15,000,000 budget is needed to care for those who will be retired before the plan becomes self-sustaining, in about ten years. Under the plan, ministers and missionaries are to pay into the retirement fund annually 2½ per cent of their salaries and their congregations are to pay 7½ per cent.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

Why these Bonds are desirable Investments

Back of every bond, there are millions of dollars worth of the very best kind of security—a plant ranking among the best in the country today, with over 650 miles of main, and serving more “manufactured gas” customers than there are in any one of 32 States of the Union.

You become a security owner in Washington's oldest public utility, with a record of 78 years of unbroken service and an annual volume of business which has nearly doubled in the last ten years.

GAS is a necessity, and the output of the Washington Gas Light Company must consistently increase in proportion to the growth of the city.

The popular denominations of these bonds make them desirable investment security.

225 ORTHODOX JEWS TO OPEN CONVENTION OF MIZRACHI TODAY

Weizmann and Berlin to Address Both Sessions at Community Center.

REBUILDING PALESTINE WILL BE CHIEF TOPIC

Leaders Recently Returned From There Will Give Vivid Pictures of Conditions.

With more than 225 leading orthodox Jews of the country in attendance, the twelfth annual convention of the Zionist Mizrahi organization in America will open this afternoon for a three-day conference in the Jewish Community center. Problems incident to the rebuilding of Palestine as the Jewish national refuge and homeland will be the chief topics.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the world Zionist movement, who reported to President Coolidge last week on progress being made by the Jews in Palestine, and Rabbi Meyer Berlin, head of the Mizrahi organization, will address the afternoon session and a general mass meeting tonight. Both of these leaders returned recently from Palestine and will paint an intimate picture of the Jewish pioneers in that country.

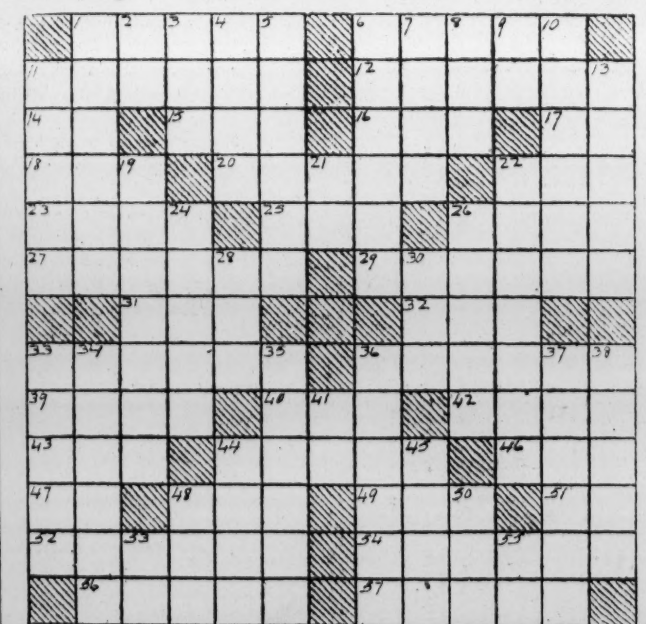

The program tomorrow includes addresses by Rabbi Morris Magnes, of New York, general secretary of Mizrahi; Abraham Cohen, treasurer, and Rabbi Julius Silver, of Chicago. The delegates will be received at the White House by President Coolidge at 12:20 p. m., after which the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and other national shrines will be visited. A kosher banquet will be held tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the community center. The Mizrahi movement, it was explained by Rabbi Magnes, represents Zionists of the orthodox Jewish faith interested in the rehabilitation of Palestine as the Jewish homeland based on the orthodox principles of Judaism. There are approximately 30,000 active members in this country, and they have contributed to the establishment of 52 Mizrahi schools and various commercial, industrial and educational enterprises in the new Palestine colonies.

The movement over the world embraces approximately 100,000 Jews.

Tax Collector Issues Appeal to Delinquents

Chatham Towers, collector of taxes, issued a final appeal yesterday for property owners who have not yet paid the assessments on their real estate for the fiscal year 1925-1926, to do so this month and thus keep their names off the list of delinquent taxpayers soon to be published and save their property from being put up for tax sale in January. "Delinquent taxpayers ending in their payments now should state on the outside of the envelopes, in the upper left hand corner, that 1926 taxes are contained therein," said Towers. "During the month of office will be swamped with mail of those paying 1927 taxes. This mail will accumulate and much of it will not be opened until nearly January 1. So there should be an indication on the outside of the envelope that the letter should be opened at once."

GALLAUDET SCORES OVER AMERICAN U. GRIDMEN

Kendall Green Team Wins, 20 to 7

March in Final Period Saves American Shutout.

Coach Hughes' Team Sets Fast Pace Throughout.

THE Gallaudet eleven scrambled over American University yesterday at Kendall Green to run up a 20 to 7 victory before a large gathering of fans. In the opening quarter the heavier Kendall Green eleven started under full speed and maintained the pace until the final whistle. While Gallaudet experienced little difficulty in penetrating American University's line, it found itself held on numerous occasions when within striking distance of the goal.

Gallaudet opened by kicking to American University. The ball glided past the upstarts and American University started from the 20-yard line.

However, after a few line plunges that failed to net any yardage, Birthright punted. Rose and Zieske, of Gallaudet, ran the oval for a goodly number of yards, but a fumble, which was recovered by American, put an end to this charge.

After a series of punts, together with a few fumbles on the part of American University, Rose galloped around right end on a 70-yard run that resulted in Gallaudet's first touchdown. In the try for point, Rose's boot was a little wide.

The second quarter found American University trying the air route with no little success. A pass from Birthright to Sawyer netted 60 yards. Birthright tried three passes in succession with no results, but a fourth fling to Sawyer gave American University a gain of 20 yards. With the ball on Gallaudet's 3-yard line and only a few seconds to go, Birthright passed again, but the throw was intercepted.

The Gallaudet eleven opened the third quarter with a rush that brought it from midfield to within a foot of going over. In this charge Rose, Zieske, Byouk and Dyer all tore off good gains. While just a foot from going over, American University's line held on two plunges, but Byouk was not to be denied and he wiggled through for Gallaudet's second marker. Dyer collected the extra point with a placement boot.

The final quarter opened with Gallaudet camping on American University's 20-yard stripe. A rush by Zieske gave Gallaudet 5 yards, and a left end run by Byouk for 15 yards chalked up another 6 points for Gallaudet.

American university started its overhead attack again with a pass from Birthright to Crist that went for 25 yards. A double forward, Sawyer to Dare to Birthright, went for another gain. With the aerials working to perfection, soon American university was down on Gallaudet's 3-yard line, from where Birthright tossed the ball to Dare for American University's only touchdown.

Silverstone and Sawyer proved to be the high lights of the vanquished. The former made many brilliant tackles, while the latter was unusually adept at grabbing passes which he managed to carry for long gains.

Alexandria Pirates Meet St. Stephens

The St. Stephens eleven will invade Alexandria today, seeking the scalp of the Pirates. The game is scheduled to start at 3:30 o'clock on Hayden field.

V. P. I. LOSES TO SOUTH CAROLINA

Gamecocks Surprise by Downing Polly Eleven, 19 to 0.

RICHLAND, Va., Nov. 6. (By A. P.)—South Carolina upset all predictions here today when they defeated Virginia Tech. 19 to 0. The Gamecocks put up a game fight and took the tilt from the Techmen easily. The Gobblers fought hard, but were unable to penetrate the South Carolina line. Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and Gov. Thomas D. McLeod of South Carolina were in a box, as was Mayor J. Palmer Bright and other city officials.

South Carolina threatened Tech's goal line early in the first period when a pass, Wilberly to Wingfield, netted them 45 yards. Rogers tried for a field goal, but missed. Tech bucked the line after recovering the ball, but failed to gain. Peake punted out of danger. For the rest of the quarter both teams worked up and down the field.

South Carolina scored twice in the second quarter. Early in the period, after battling their way down the field, a pass from Rogers to Cooper put the ball on Tech's 1-yard line. Rogers hit the line for the touchdown. A bad pass from center rolled along the ground, and Boyd had no chance to make the placement.

The second touchdown came when Wilberly passed to Burke 49 yards for a touchdown. Rogers dropped-kicked for the extra point. The third encounter was marred by penalties against Tech. Tech was penalized 35 yards for clipping, and then 5 more for off-side play. Tech was making a valiant effort to score, but their efforts were halted by the dogged defense of the Gamecocks.

The Gamecocks added to their score early in the fourth period when a pass, Rogers to Wingfield, put the ball across the goal line. Rogers' dropkick for the extra point was blocked. Tech worked hard to get across the South Carolina goal, but the Gamecock line and second defense held them.

Marines Defeated, 14 to 7, Near Finish at Cleveland

John Carroll Eleven Uses Aerial Play to Gain Lead—Intercepted Pass in Final Quarter Paves Way for Touchdown.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 6. (By A. P.)—John Carroll's eleven gridiron brigade told it to the Marines from Quantico today. Told it best by coordination of wit, muscle and speed that made the most of every break. Told it by lion-hearted courage that saved the day when the day looked darkest. Told it by the superior type of football morale one would expect to find in a collegiate eleven as compared with an outfit of service men away from the barracks on a holiday. Told it, finally, as twilight shadows danced about the stadium at Luna park, in the figures of 14 to 7.

Outweighed by well-nigh a score of pounds to every man, out-rushed by a first-down count of 17 to 6, the Irish Brigadiers tossed those and other handicaps beyond the off-side lines and proceeded to bomb the hope that had sent them into battle on the light end of the betting odds of 2 to 1.

A spectacular southpaw pass, "Rags" Plummer to "Pat" McDonnell, brought about the first touchdown of the day in the opening period. The Marines came back via a crashing, consistent advance to deadlock the count in the third session.

The last quarter had not so far to go, with the Leathernecks again on the offensive, when an intercepted pass, a lengthy penalty and a relentless Carroll counterattack combined to place the ball on the Quantico 3-yard line, whence Capt. "Jiggs" Marrie juggernauted across for the score that decided the game.

John Carroll's eleven used aerial play to gain a lead in the final quarter. An intercepted pass in the final quarter paved the way for a touchdown. The Marines came back via a crashing, consistent advance to deadlock the count in the third session.

Marshall High Wins Over Petersburg, 37-7

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 6.—Fully 1,000 football fans, a large number from Richmond, witnessed the game played this afternoon between the football team of John Marshall High School of Richmond, and the Petersburg High School eleven.

The Richmond team won by a score of 32 to 7.

Lynchburg, Nov. 6.—Lynchburg College here this afternoon defeated Guilford College, 20 to 6, the game being hard fought throughout.

Guilford scored in the last two minutes of the game when the locals had a freshman backfield at work. Gray fumbled a punt on Lynchburg's 11-yard line and Marshall picked it up and ran for a touchdown. Snyder blocked the kick for a goal.

Lynchburg gained 226 yards for 12 first downs, and Guilford advanced the ball 73 yards and made 4 first downs, one of which was on a 15-yard penalty. Lynchburg outweighed the visitors, and the latter's line played an unusually stubborn game.

VA. CADETS EASY FOR N. C. U.

Tarheels Swamp V.M. 1. Eleven by 28-0 Score.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Nov. 6.—The North Carolina University eleven presented a dazzling running attack on Emerson field here today and swamped the V. M. I. Cadets under a 28-to-0 score. The Tarheels circled the Cadet ends and slashed at the tackle almost at will and scored in every quarter except the second.

Ferrell, Carolina halfback, broke away for a 64-yard run for the first score soon after the game began, but Tom Young's brilliant play for the feature for the North Carolina eleven.

Young advanced the ball for a total of 140 yards during the game and played a great defensive game throughout. McPherson, substitute for Carolina, scored the fourth Tarheel touchdown on a 50-yard sprint off tackle near the end of the contest.

The officials may have had private reasons that could not be understood from the stands for allowing Princeton five downs in the time Slagle kicked the field goal in the fourth quarter, but from the rim of the bowl it appeared that they just lost count of the downs.

Navy's Princeton already had four downs when the teams fell in again. Then, to the surprise of the on-lookers, Princeton still had possession of the ball with about 9 yards to gain.

At this point, Slagle felt back and drop-kicked over the bars from the 22-yard line. Between much questioning between puzzled experts in the press row and those who were keeping charts of the play could only give Princeton the extra down and let it go at that.

The referee was Wilmer Crowell, late of Swarthmore. One that Princeton scored, the play was set in motion by one of Harvard's numerous fumbles.

It was Elliott Putnam, Harvard's juvenile quarterback and one of the surest men on the team ordinarily, who executed what might be called the touchdown fumble. A punt bounced out of his arms in the second quarter and Lawlor, of Princeton, came along, running low and fast to recover.

But Lawlor, not to be out-fumbled by any Harvard gentleman, fumbled the ball himself, and, with the ball down, bouncing on it for a recovery at Harvard's 26-yard line.

Davidson Is Routed By Hampden-Sydney

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 6.—The Hampden-Sydney Tigers completely bewildered the Davidson Wildcats for four periods this afternoon and decisively defeated the North Carolina Presbyterians, 12 to 0. The Tigers began the game with a rush, and did not slacken their pace for the entire time. The first touchdown for the Virginians came after a punt had touched a Davidson player, the Tigers recovering on Davidson's 4-yard line. It took four smashes before Edmunds hurried a pile of players for the touchdown.

The second 6-point counter resulted from a pass, Brinzer to Adkins, for 29 yards. Featuring the game was the clock-like precision with which the entire Hampden-Sydney team functioned. It completed passes unannounced, broke through the Davidson line for good gains and smothered the Wildcats throughout. Davidson missed a chance to score when it advanced the ball to the 1-yard line.

Signals were mixed and no one received the pass from center. This was practically the only time the Wildcats had a chance to score. Palmer, Sevy and Adkins featured for Hampden-Sydney, while McConnell, Pinkney and Dick Grey were outstanding for Davidson, Grey making a 45-yard run for the outstanding play of the game.

Alex. High Gridders Beat Warrenton, 6-0

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 6.—Alexandria High School's light but plucky football team outgamed and outplayed the heavier Warrenton High eleven here this afternoon and won, 6 to 0, in a Second Athletic district series contest, played on the Dreadnaught park grid.

Bill Travers, the star of the Maroon and White, was the hero of the day, scoring the only touchdown on a short line play in the third quarter in addition to playing a great defensive game.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 6 (By A. P.)—Percussion came from behind and won the $7,500 added Latonia cup at 2 1/4 miles at Latonia today by two lengths from Helen's Babe. Alloy was third. Four others started.

Time for the race was 3:56 2/5.

VA. EPISCOPAL IS BEATEN, 26 TO 3

Alexandria Episcopal Surprises in State Prep Race.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 6.—The Virginia State prep school championship race was considerably upset this afternoon when Episcopal high school, of this city, accomplished the unexpected and walloped Virginia Episcopal school, of Lynchburg, 26 to 3, on Hoxton field in one of the big games on both schools' schedules. It was the most surprising upset of the year among the preparatory elevens of Virginia.

Breaks of the game counted in all but one of the four Episcopal touchdowns, but it was a clean-cut victory, for the Maroon and Black clearly outplayed the visitors at every stage of the game, even in the first period when Virginia Episcopal scored a field goal following a fumble.

Virginia Episcopal kicked off to the local high school, but the kick was fumbled and recovered by Virginia Episcopal.

A series of rushes put the ball within the shadows of Episcopal's goal posts. Episcopal Maroon and Black held and Goldsmith dropped back on fourth down and made a neat 20-yard placement for the game's first points.

Episcopal's front line tore through Virginia Episcopal's first-line defense of the second quarter and blocked Goldsmith's attempted punt on the visitors' 20-yard line. Line plunges took the ball to the 3-yard line, and from that point Chelchister scored. Day added the point.

In the fourth quarter Episcopal went on a scoring spree and counted three touchdowns.

SOCCER TEAMS IN FIRST "CUP TIE" TOURNEY TODAY

League Race Unaffected By Games

English Custom of Keeping Interest Adopted Here.

British Uniteds Play German-Americans in Feature.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

THE Washington Soccer league will step out in real big-time stuff today when the first cup-tie tournament in the history of soccer in the District will be played. Native of foreign shores will readily comprehend the term "cup tie," but there are many of local birth who will be puzzled.

It is a custom in England, particularly, to take teams entered in the various associations and pit them in elimination play other than the regular league games, and the tournament is given the name of the cup tie. Two purposes are served in a cup-tie tournament or elimination, as it really is. First, it increases the interest for teams that have started poorly in the regular league play, inasmuch as they start on even terms in the cup tie.

Secondly, it has the whirlwind, survival of the fittest tone, that has such a strong appeal to American sportsmen, as when a team is defeated it is out of the cup-tie play. Consequently the twelve Washington Soccer league teams will play today in six games, and providing there are no ties but six games will remain in the eliminations to be played at a date to be set by William G. Birch, president of the Soccer league.

Unlike regular league games the matches today will go into extra periods in event of a tie at the end of the regular 90 minutes of play. Two 15-minute periods will be played first, and if a tie still exists, two more 5-minute periods will be played; and if the contest is tied then, another day will be set for the play-off.

In regular league games no extra periods are played if a tie exists, instead 1 point is given to each team in the league standing. Incidentally the games that will be played today come at a very opportune time, as the majority of the teams have been inactive, due to inclement weather, for three weeks and the cup tie games will serve to get them back in trim without endangering their standing in the league. All games will start at 2:30 o'clock in order that suffering time will be had to play off possible ties.

Drawings were made early in the season to decide which teams will meet in the first round today and on the whole some worthwhile contests should result judging from past performances the British Uniteds and German-American tilt on the Monument grounds should be the banner attraction.

Weakened by injuries, the German club will start the match on a par with the Uniteds, in so far as can be judged before the tilt, but the dopesters figure that they still have enough to conquer the British eleven.

On the new Monument ground field, just across the road from the original one, two of the youngest teams in the league will meet in Rockville and Monroe. Both are equal in years but Monroe has one year of league play while this is the Marylanders' first season. Monroe figures to win.

The champion Walford club will not be extended to win from the German-American Reserves in a match on the Barracks field.

The Concord-Fort Myer tilt at Fort Myer will be a real battle between two teams that seem to be about even, although if there must be a choice it looks as though the

HOLY CROSS, Two Battles Listed Today FORDHAM IN TIE

Jesuit College Teams Battle to 7-7 Score Before 12,000.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Fordham and Holy Cross fought a 7-to-7 tie in the fifteenth gridiron meeting of these Jesuit college rivals before a crowd of 12,000 at Pittsfield here today.

Sammy Drais, sub halfback, gave Holy Cross its score when he intercepted a Fordham pass and shook off three tacklers to get away for a 68-yard run to the goal in the second period. Wise kicked the goal.

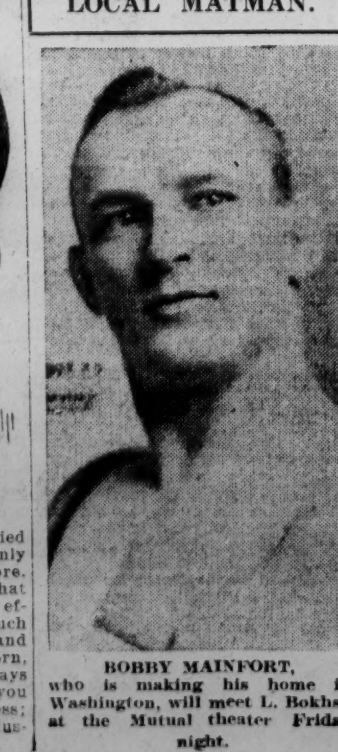

Fordham marched 37 yards to a score in the third period after playing Clon MacClenahan on its home field, about the only edge the Marylanders seem to have over the Scotsmen.

A keenly-contested game should result from the Rosedale-Army Medical Center match at Walter Reed. The Soldiers are a little more experienced than the Rosedale boys but are not as fast.

Bob Mainfort Meets Boksh on the Mat

Wrestling fans are promised another real bout Friday night at the Mutual when Bobby Mainfort meets L. Boksh, light-heavyweight champion of the South, after the regular show. Last Friday, in one of the most sensational bouts seen at the Mutual, Bobby threw John Taylor in two straight falls, and throughout the bout had the fans on their feet cheering his exhibition of fancy holds.

Two Battles Listed Today In 150-Pound Title Series

Northerns Meet Wintons, Knick Preps Face Southern Preps; Both Games Booked for Washington Barracks; Opener at 1 P. M.

THE Capital City league's 150-pound football race reaches an important stage today. The two battles listed will make or break the contesting teams.

Both games are scheduled on the Washington Barracks gridiron. The Northerns and Wintons, leaders in the race, will clash in the first game at 1 o'clock. Following that battle, the Knick Preps will tackle the Southern Preps. Charlie Guyon, popular Eastern High coach and former Carlisle player, will referee both games.

The Wintons defeated the Northerns in their clash last season by a 3-to-0 score in a hard-fought battle on the Fairlawn field. That defeat was the only one against the record of the Northerns, and put them out of the running for the 155-pound title.

It was in view of the fact that the Northerns played the Wintons on their home grounds last year that the Capital City league officials decided on a neutral field for this year's game.

In insisting that the game should be played at Fairlawn, the Winton threatened to withdraw from the league. Last night, however, the Wintons showed good sportsmanship in announcing that they would go through with the game.

The Knick-Southern game should be every inch as interesting as the battle. The Knicks outplayed the Brookland A. C. eleven throughout their only start, although the game ended in a 6-6 score, while the Southern Preps bowed to the Wintons last Sunday only after a sensational game.

Both prep teams will probably profit by dry fields. This is particularly true of the Knicks, who number the lightest players in the series.

Women's Golf Event At Congressional

The Congressional Country club's women's golf tournament will be held Tuesday starting at 10 o'clock. Entries will be received until tomorrow at 4 o'clock and drawings will be made that night.

No qualifying rounds will be played. Finals in men's championship starts today at 1 o'clock.

California Humbled By Washington, 13-7

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—With a football team averaging three pounds heavier per man, the University of California lost, 13 to 7, to the University of Washington on a field of mud here today. Jabs, Golden Bear fullback, saved California from a whitewash by breaking through the Husky line in the last period, and skidding in the mud to a touchdown.

Eugene Cook, left guard, made seven of Washington's points, kicking two placement goals and one point after touchdown. The Washington touchdown came at the end of the first five minutes of play when Capt. George Gutersmen broke away for a 35-yard run.

Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana, of Roumania, witnessed more than half the game. The attendance was 29,000.

PALACE FIVE HOLDS TWO DRILLS

Candidates in Fight for Center Berth, Now Open.

THE Washington club of the American Basketball league worked out twice yesterday, enabling the players to relieve the stiffness in their muscles preliminary to settling down to the steady training grind tomorrow.

Capt. Ray Kennedy took his men to the Epiphany gymnasium in the afternoon, where the professional tossers warmed up for two hours. The practice consisted mostly of basket tossing. No hard work was ordered due to the long session held the night before at Business high school.

In the evening, however, the men let loose on the Terminal Y. M. C. A. court. Two lengthy scrimmage sessions marked the drill from 8 until 10 p. m.

The twelve men on the squad must give everything they have, in order to land a permanent berth with the local club. Scrimmages so far have been hard and speedy, with no individual giving any quarter.

The steadiest fight is between the several tall boys on the squad, since the center position is the only one open. Washington has present three veterans of their winning combination last year, which gave Cleveland a run for the championship.

These include Russell Saunders and George Glasco, forwards, and Kennedy, a guard. It is a foregone conclusion, practically, that the other guard position will be held down by Elmer Ripley, Ripley, who is due in Washington tomorrow, started last year with Brooklyn.

Two of the tall boys who are battling for center are Hayward Marsh, aged 20, from Topeka, Kans., and Gaze J. Chizmadia, aged 26, from Perth Amboy, N. J. Jumping against one another last night, they divided the tosses and appeared evenly matched.

German Bike Team Leads Berlin Race

Berlin, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Persistent sprints in the six-day bicycle race completely changed the field so that at the forty-ninth hour, 11 o'clock tonight, the German team of Behrendt-Tietz was leading with 58 points and a distance of 828.3 miles.

Wambst and Laeuchay had 21 points.

A lap behind were Knappe and Rieger, with 32 points. The American pair, Horder and Horan, were pedalling steadily, holding eighth place in the field, which now comprises eleven teams. Horder, who was thrown from his bicycle in a sprint last night, was loudly applauded when he resumed the grind this morning. He had been unconscious for two hours and it was first believed he had been seriously injured.

Rockne Star, Injured, In Critical Condition

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Arthur Parisien, Notre Dame star forward passer, injured in the first quarter of today's game with Indiana, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital here, where it was said his heart had been affected by the injury and that his condition was critical.

The exact nature of the injury could not be immediately determined. Officials at the university said tonight that Parisien had apparently been hurt in the ribs which would probably have affected the blood circulation.

Most of Washington's offensive tactics were successfully blocked in yesterday's game by Helen Turnbull and the two Corning sisters, Katherine and Dorothy, who were all over the field. The local players carried the ball into the circle many times, but could not get it through the posts for a score. Miss Katherine Whitfield was the outstanding player in the local line-up.

Players who participated in yesterday's match were: Washington R. Perry, M. Brown, M. Faries, A. Nicholl, Mrs. Tubman, M. Wylie, L. Hays, E. Whitfield, M. Gorman, K. Whitfield and V. Hopkins.

Baltimore—M. Millard, L. Lehman, Mrs. Willis, M. Winand, B.

The Sportswoman

By DOROTHY E. GREENE

Rifle League Planned. D. C. Hockeyists Lose. Net Finals Tomorrow. G. W. Hockeyists Out.

THE constantly increasing interest in rifle shooting as a sport in girls' schools and colleges is reflected in the annual gallery program which has just been issued by the National Rifle association for the 1926-27 season. The program provides for an intercollegiate championship for women's teams, an interscholastic championship for girls' teams, and in addition, opens to women all of the individual gallery matches and the gallery qualification course.

C. B. Lister, secretary of the National Rifle association, with headquarters in Washington, states that "the gallery shooting game offers an opportunity to conduct truly national championships without the competitors having to go to the expense of traveling to some central point in order to participate."

"Targets," Mr. Lister continues, "are of a size which can be readily sent through the mail. Official targets are accordingly prepared and mailed to all of the individuals or teams, from the headquarters of the association."

"The firing is then done in the presence of properly authorized judges, and the targets are sent back by mail to Washington, where they are scored, and a schedule will be prepared calling for the firing of matches so that each college in the conference will fire one match with every other college. The teams will be ranked weekly according to the victories they have won, in the same way that big league baseball is ranked."

This plan has been in operation for several years with the men's teams and has resulted in a great increase in interest.

The Washington Field Hockey club failed to score against the Mount Washington club of Baltimore, in their hockey match played yesterday afternoon in Baltimore. The score was 2 to 0.

The local players have sustained two defeats at the hands of the Mount Washington club this season, but won from the Baltimore Country club and will attempt to win today's match with the same team on the Ellipse with the hope of evening their score in games at 2 all.

Washington expects a stiff game today, as it has been learned that Mary Adams, former right inner on the All-American, will play in that position with Baltimore and her side of the field will undoubtedly see some of her famous speed.

Captains have been chosen for the Chevy Chase Playground Basketball and Dodgeball leagues, which will start play on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The initial basketball game will be played Tuesday, featuring the SA and TB grade teams of the E. V. Brown school. The recently appointed captains, as announced by Miss Maude N. Parker, of the municipal playground department, include: Basketball, Hannah Anderson, Helen Tewksbury, Virginia Williams and Myrtle Williams; Dodgeball, Kathryn Wells, Dorothy Sherwood, Emma Condit, Kathleen Selby and Helen Hackworth.

A 3½-mile hike through the wooded hill country of Virginia has been planned for this afternoon by the Red Triangle Outing club.

3 GOOD BOUTS AT ARCADIA TUESDAY

Gardini and Maloney Feature in First of Weekly Cards.

WITH a new ring in position, seats on the main floor and in the balcony set in ascending tiers and some of the most entertaining of the wrestlers in Jack Curley's string matched for three bouts, everything is in readiness for the mat show Tuesday night at the Arcadia auditorium that will mark the opening of a series of weekly programs of wrestling in the establishment at Fourteenth street and Park road.

For the main go in this initial bill that will be presented by John Bick, with the assistance of Curley, Renato Gardini, Italian who won an Olympic championship before taking up the sport professionally, has been paired with Jimmy Maloney, a son of Erin, known among the matmen as the Irish wildcat.

Supporting this headline are bouts which will bring into action head-spinning talent that has scored signally in all appearances during the past year. For the semitwilight there will be offered Alexander Garkawicko, holder of the championships of Poland, Russia and his own Ukraine, and Tommy Drake, rugged Hollander, who long has been strutting his stuff in this country.

The opening engagement will see in action a couple of wrestlers practically unknown to followers of the game here, but who are famed about the metropolitan district of New York. Giovanni Ralevich, who hails from Trieste and won many decorations while serving with the Italian army during the world war, was a noted grappler before he arrived in the United States, and in all his engagements about New York he has added to his fame. And his opponent, Arthur Boganz, proved a terror to other wrestlers in his native country, Poland, for some time before seeking more laurels in Uncle Sam's domain.

Penn State to Lose 6 Varsity Gridmen

State College, Pa., Nov. 6.—Six Penn State varsity grid warriors will play their final game on New Beaver field next Saturday when the Lions face Bucknell in the big Pennsylvania day game, the final home contest of the season. Following Bucknell, there remains but the game with the University of Pittsburgh on Thanksgiving day.

The six seniors who will bid farewell to the home field are Capt. Weston, end; Greene and Pritchard, fullbacks; Flak, Bergman and Munz, tackles.

The game is attracting particular keen interest in central Pennsylvania for the two institutions are situated but 60 miles apart. A crowd rivaling that of the Syracuse game of Alumni-Home-Coming day is anticipated. Neither team has made an outstanding record to date, but the rivalry between the two institutions goes back to 1887 when football teams of Penn State and Bucknell first met.

Rosslyn at 2:45 p. m., where they will buy a one-way ticket to Rixey on the car leaving at 3 o'clock. The route will take the hikers via Chain bridge to the clubhouse on the Potomac, where a campfire and supper will be held. PRICES OF BONDS NEAR YEAR'S HIGHEST LEVELS

French and Belgian Obligations Resist Selling Pressure.

RAILS UP FRACTIONALLY

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.)—The bond market today closed the week with prices holding not far from the highest levels of the year. Trading was unusually active for the two-hour session and advancing tendencies were maintained in nearly all sections of the list.

French and Belgian obligations clearly demonstrated their ability to resist selling pressure, although rather general disposition to take profits was noted. These sales, particularly in the case of the Belgian sixes and sevens and the French sevens, were easily absorbed and several of the French municipals and rails scored fractional gains.

News that President Coolidge would urge a rebate on the 1925 income taxes put the entire market in a cheerful frame of mind, with railroad bonds additionally benefited by indications that the year's net earnings would exceed all records. Some of the semispecial issues still were forced to contend with profit taking, but with one or two persons looking for the right movement.

Reports that the Van Swinderen were planning a radical revision of the Nickel Plate merger grouping had little or no effect on the bonds of the carriers.

Intentional Mercantile Marine sixes displayed independent strength in reflection of higher ocean freight rates and reports that new negotiations might be opened for the sale of the White Star Line and the purchase of others.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Nov. 6 (By A. P.)—Trading in the cotton market today was attributed largely to further evening up of commitments in preparation for receipt of the weekly report. Prices moved within a narrow range, January contracts closing at 12.32, the general market closing at 12.31, net 5 points lower to 1 point higher.

The opening was steady at a discount of 2 points on the previous point under Southern selling and commission-house liquidation with some of the selling encouraged by relatively easy Liverpool cotton.

There seemed to be good demand from the trade and investors on the part of 12.75, which was held off under further pre-bureau liquidation. This early buying was gradually liquidated during the forenoon, and by 12.15, net declines of about 1/4 to 1/2 cent were recorded, and last prices showed rallies of a few points from the lowest.

Local brokers said they saw nothing in the character of the trading of the action of prices to suggest any change of trend, as the price of cotton showing of next Monday's government estimate of local harvest and crop indication as of November 1, and the amount of cotton ginned for the week up to 12.31, which was held off under further pre-bureau liquidation.

Private reports recently published have shown crop conditions ranging from 12,000,000 to 13,400,000 bales, averaging in the neighborhood of 12,700,000.

Members of the New York Cotton Exchange on the average are looking for a decline of 1/4 to 1/2 cent in the price of cotton, which was held off under further pre-bureau liquidation.

THE CASE OF SMITH AND VARE.

If Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, should be denied admission, the Republicans will be unable to keep control of the Senate. With Smith and Vare they would have 48 votes, which, with the Vice President's vote, would enable them to hold committee chairmanships. They would thus to a great extent shape the policy of Congress and the government in finance, appropriations, foreign relations, commerce, and all other matters.

By voting to prevent Messrs. Smith and Vare from taking the oath of office, Republican chairmen of committees would be voting to deprive themselves of places of great prestige and influence. They would be placing the Democratic party in control of the Senate. The consequences of this act might be the loss of the Presidency and Congress by the Republicans in 1928.

In similar instances it has been found that party loyalty operates with overwhelming force in swaying the conscience of men. The most conspicuous precedent is that of the electoral commission of 1877, created for the purpose of ascertaining whether Rutherford B. Hayes or Samuel J. Tilden was elected President in 1876. The commission was bipartisan and was composed of men of the highest character. It consisted of five justices of the United States Supreme Court, of whom three were Republicans and two Democrats; five senators, of whom three were Republicans and two Democrats, and five representatives, of whom two were Republicans and three Democrats. The crucial questions coming before the commission were always decided according to the political complexion of the members—eight Republicans, seven Democrats. The result was the seating of a Republican President.

Unless seats now held by Democrats should be filled by Republicans before the first Monday in December of next year, the Republicans must vote to permit Messrs. Smith and Vare to be sworn in, or lose control of the Senate. There will be only 46 Republicans in the next Senate, not counting Smith and Vare. If the Republicans should gain two seats before the vote on seating Smith and Vare is reached, it is quite possible that several Republicans would vote to exclude them. But when a vote to exclude them means the loss of the Senate itself, it is another matter entirely. A Republican senator in that case would vote himself out of important committee positions and imperil the hold of his party upon the government, including the Presidency.

The Smith-Vare cases will come before the Senate this winter, no doubt, in the shape of a report from the investigating committee of which Senator Reed, of Missouri, is chairman. A resolution declaring the election of Smith and Vare void may be offered. But the Senate can not decide these cases until the senators-elect appear for the purpose of taking the oath.

Both Smith and Vare will become senators de facto on March 4 next, and their names will be placed on the pay roll. They will be entitled to committee rooms, clerks, &c.

It is held by some senators that individuals appearing with genuine certificates of election can not be denied seats; that they must be sworn in, and their rights be determined afterward. Not since the civil war has any senator-elect with proper credentials been denied a seat. But the House voted to exclude Brigham H. Roberts when he presented himself to take the oath. The certificate of election does not in itself entitle a senator to hold his seat. The Senate is the judge, not only of the qualifications of its members, but of their election. It can decide the question of election by a majority vote, as was done in the case of Smith W. Brookhart and in other cases. There does not appear to be much force in the contention of Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, that a two-thirds vote will be required to exclude Smith and Vare. The question in their case will not be one of expulsion of senators, but of their election as senators. The Senate has repeatedly passed upon the question of election by a majority vote. When the vote was adverse the seats were declared vacant, notwithstanding the fact that the certificates of election were genuine and unquestioned.

MUSSOLINI'S BOLD MOVE.

The measures adopted by the Italian cabinet to suppress every element opposed to the fascist regime are rigorous in the extreme, and some of them are of questionable wisdom, both as to their justice and their practicability. The imposition of the death penalty upon plotters against the life, liberty and integrity of the royal family and the premier is, however, necessary, and similar laws should protect the heads of state in all countries.

It is when Premier Mussolini extends repressive measures to the press and establishes a system of police espionage over individuals that he oversteps the bounds of prudent government. A still more despotic feature of his new policy is the establishment of special military and fascist courts to deal with political crimes. Persons charged with offenses against fascism are to be given short shrift by courtmartial. The penalties include imprisonment for terms as long as 30 years, and perpetual interdiction from public office. The political espionage service will be under direction of the fascist militia.

Thus, with excitable young fascists charged with the duty of spying upon citizens suspected of antifascist leanings, and with fascist courts empowered to impose severe penalties, a state of terror closely resembling the situation in soviet Russia is to be established. The object of the repressive laws is to stamp out every criticism of the fascist system and its personnel. Italians outside of Italy are to be placed under surveillance, and foreigners in Italy will be punished if they dare to express sentiments that can be construed as inimical to fascism or its agents.

All licenses to newspapers opposing the fascist regime are revoked for an indeterminate period. Criticism, even of a useful character designed to safeguard the public against fascist excesses, is thereby to be suppressed.

Premier Mussolini is taking the dangerous road traveled so often, if not invariably, by dictators who attempt to justify the suppression of liberty by declaring that they are the guardians of liberty. Mussolini's ultimate object is the creation of a state in which all citizens, without exception, shall be welded into a militant mass acting as a single unit under the direction of one man. This unit is to stamp out all domestic opposition and be ready to fight foreign wars, without debate and without demur, whenever the dictator shall give the word.

If such an ideal solidarity could be obtained without loss of liberty it would make a nation strong indeed; but the system presupposes supernatural wisdom and virtue in the person of the dictator. Complete surrender of individual opinion is called for, and this is incompatible with liberty. The dictator must work through agents, and these agents can not be expected to possess his sublime wisdom and virtue. They will commit crimes, and if outraged citizens attempt to call them to account the citizens, and not the criminals, are to suffer. The outcome of such a system is invariably a bloody revolution. The revolt comes when the dictator dies or suffers any of the reverses common to humanity.

Mussolini is so idolized by the Italian people that he can go very far in the suppression of individual liberty before there will be danger of a revolt. The people trust him and eagerly cooperate in his plans for consolidating the forces of the state. The immediate danger is not in a revolt against his rule, but rather in an antiforeign outburst of terrific violence in case Mussolini should be assassinated. More than one diplomat stationed at Rome has predicted the massacre of foreigners in the event of Mussolini's assassination.

The experiment in fascism now developing in Italy is, therefore, a matter of deep concern to other nations as well as to the Italian people. Mussolini is handling deadly explosives when he strives to concentrate all power in himself at the expense of individual liberty, and at the same time to inculcate in the minds of millions of impulsive people the fixed idea that foreign governments are giving asylum and encouragement to conspirators against himself and against Italy.

BRUTAL DRY AGENTS.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, in charge of prohibition enforcement, is entitled to public thanks for his prompt action in dismissing the deputy prohibition administrator of this district and three of his agents for conduct unbecoming to Federal officers. The agents in question used a smoke screen to hold up an automobile in Maryland, and without disclosing their identity as officers they flourished revolvers and directed threatening and abusive language at the occupants of the car, one of whom happened to be Charles R. Nash, assistant commissioner of internal revenue, returning with three companions from a fishing trip. The party was unarmed, and there was no liquor in the car.

The brutal and unwarranted attack was reported to Gen. Andrews with a vigorous protest from Mr. Nash. The dry agents might easily have been mistaken for bandits, and in view of their failure to disclose their identity the occupants of the automobile would have been warranted in killing them in self-defense.

Gen. Andrews has sent out a circular to all field officers, warning them to refrain from such actions as those which caused the dismissal of the Washington agents.

The act of holding up an automobile and searching it for liquor is a ticklish piece of business, which should never be attempted by Federal agents without reasonable cause. The law on the point is not as well defined as it should be. The right of a man to be secure in his house and automobile against unreasonable search should be established beyond question. The flourishing of firearms and the use of abusive and threatening language is intolerable in any event, and all Federal officers guilty of such acts should not only be dismissed but severely punished.

VOTING BY MACHINE.

If any additional test was required to determine the efficiency of voting machines it was furnished by the experience of New York city last Tuesday. Machines were used by tens of thousands of voters who had never seen one before, and in all cases the act of voting was accomplished expeditiously and without error. At the end of the voting the totals were instantly available. There was no possibility of fraud with representatives of the rival parties "on the job," and the machine figures were accepted without question.

It is astonishing that in the United States, where the use of machinery is habitual with almost every one, voting machines have not been installed long ago. The returns from last Tuesday's election were exasperatingly slow and full of doubt. Wherever a long ballot meets a dull set of election officers there is bound to be delay and probable miscounting. The opportunities for fraud are wide open.

The old system of recording votes by personal inspection and painful tabulation by hand ought to be abolished, from one end of the country to the other. It is a relic of the past which has no rightful place in a civilized and busy country. It should go the way of the ox team and the buggy.

VETERANS' BUREAU PROGRESS.

Under the direction of Gen. Frank T. Hines the veterans' bureau has been making rapid strides forward in its relationship to its wards and the public with which it does business. First came the creation of a medical board formed of prominent and well-qualified physicians from throughout the country who meet regularly and act in an advisory capacity to the bureau physicians. Since the inception of the board it has acted in many cases and has fully demonstrated its value. More recently there has been organized along similar lines a legal council, the first meeting of which has been held within the last few weeks, and an organization effected. Apparently it is destined to be equally as valuable as the medical council.

Last Thursday it was announced that the veterans' bureau in cooperation with the comptroller general had worked out a plan of auditing accounts which gives promise of saving the government millions of dollars each year. The system has been dignified with the title "pre-audit," and consists simply of making certain that every account is in strict order before a payment of any sort is made. The plan has been in effect many years in industry, but is new to government practice.

The saving to the business man, it is pointed out, comes in case of overpayment by the government which is accepted in good faith and upon which tax payments are made. Upon discovery of the error the government reopens the question, and usually extracts a refund. The business man then is entitled to a tax refund, but it is up to him to take the matter up with the tax bureau and push the case through to settlement. The value of the new plan to the government is indicated best by the fact that there are in dispute at present over $3,000,000 in veterans' bureau accounts.

Sound business rapidly is becoming the keynote of governmental department administration. The inhibition against breaking down precedent is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, and department heads are borrowing more and more from the best-established practices of industry. The veterans' bureau, it is generally admitted, will be in existence at the very least, 50 years more. It is fortunate that it is placing its affairs on a sound basis at this early date.

STUDENT DISSIPATION.

A few weeks ago a recent graduate of a midwestern university created a furor by publishing an article dealing with the alleged immorality of a body of students while on a train trip to attend a football game. The resultant investigation failed to substantiate the charges to any considerable degree. Now comes the dean of the University of Illinois, Thomas Arkle Clark, who makes the positive statement that moral conditions now are on a much higher plane than they were before prohibition.

The statement comes on the heels of administration of disciplinary measures to ten students of the University of Illinois for using intoxicants. The dean feels that incidents of this sort, while always the subject of unfortunate publicity, do not mean that dissipation is on the increase but only that university authorities are becoming more vigilant in punishing liquor drinking. Fifteen years ago, he said, when students could purchase all they wanted to drink on almost every street corner the practice of indulgence in stimulants was so usual as to cause no comment. Now, however, there are relatively few cases, and those which are brought to the attention of the college authorities are immediately disciplined.

The inference is, of course, that conditions are not only no worse than they ever were but that they are decidedly better. On the other hand, it is hard to believe that conditions are better when two lower classes of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology break into a riot in which several students are injured, the town invaded and the police defied, street cars and automobiles wrecked, windows smashed and thousands of dollars' worth of property damaged. The riot in Boston apparently is direct refutation of the Illinois dean's statement that conditions are no worse than they ever were.

PLOTS IN THE RIVIERA.

French police officials voice the suspicion that a fine Italian hand guided the conspiracy which was nipped in the bud last week by the arrest of twelve Catalan Spaniards who were charged with organizing on French soil a revolt against Spain. Minister of Justice Sarraut is authority for the statement that there is a close connection between the Catalan affair and the activities of Col. Ricciotti Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian liberator. Garibaldi was arrested at Nice and is now detained by the French authorities in Paris while the ramifications of the Spanish conspiracy are under investigation.

The purpose of the conspiracy, in French opinion, was to arouse Spain against France by the exposure of proof that France had permitted Spanish revolutionists to operate on her soil. The plot has its head in Rome, according to the French theory, and is inspired by Mussolini's desire to seek expansion in the Mediterranean, where France blocks his path.

Col. Garibaldi's object, however, was probably the detection of antifascist Italians, whose machinations at Nice are supposed to have led to several attempts upon Mussolini's life. He is denounced by the antifascists as a "traitor," which indicates that he gained access to their secrets by pretending to be one of them.

The idea that Mussolini has had agents at work in France assisting the Catalans to launch a revolution against the Spanish government, and that these conspirators should be exposed at the psychological moment by the Italian agents, for the purpose of arousing the animosity of Spain against France, seems pretty far-fetched. Petty conspiracies by handfuls of excited "revolutionists" are always on foot in the Riviera, where the wine is excellent and where the plotters can defy both Spain and Italy. But the recent visit of King Alfonso and Premier de Riviera to Barcelona demonstrated that the stability of the Spanish kingdom is cherished in Catalonia as much as it is in Andalusia. The king and his minister were received with every possible manifestation of regard and confidence.

A COMMUNIST EXCLUDED.

The State Department has very properly denied to another Russian communist official the privilege of entering the United States. The official in question is Mme. Alexandra Kollantay, soviet Ambassador to Mexico. She applied for a passport visa at the American consulate general in Berlin. This could not be given to her under the immigration law, which bars communists from entry into this country.

The admission of Mme. Kollantay could not have been permitted without violation of law and stultification of the American policy of nonrecognition of the Russian soviet. The errand of the soviet envoy to Mexico is to further the cause of communism in this hemisphere. The communist disturbances in Central America are directed from the City of Mexico, with the knowledge and consent of the Mexican government, which is itself under the influence of Russian communism. Mme. Kollantay is a devoted and expert propagandist, whose chief duty is to break down popular government and substitute the despotic rule of the soviet. In Mexico, Guatemala and other countries where communism has obtained a foothold in this hemisphere, converts to the cause are obtained by representing to them that they are enlisting in a movement for the benefit of labor. They are persuaded to forsake the republican system of government in favor of communism under the guise of organized labor.

The United States government has at last detected the aims of the communist conspirators in Mexico who have been striving to destroy republican government in Nicaragua. A constitutional republican government is in process of organization in that country, and doubtless it will be recognized and supported by the United States. Refusal to recognize it would be tantamount to giving aid and comfort to communism. The exclusion of the Russian soviet's chief agent in Mexico is therefore sound as a matter of policy, as well as being in pursuance of law.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE first of the choral services in Washington churches will be held on Thanksgiving day, and many of the choirs are preparing elaborate programs for that festival. Rehearsals will then begin on the Christmas music, which with Easter ranks highest musically in the Christian year.

There is a fine suggestion in the proposal of the local Federation of Music for a mass concert of all signs and singing organizations of the District, to be given soon after Easter under the auspices of the local federation.

A general meeting to promote this idea will be held on Tuesday night, November 16, at the Vermont Avenue Christian church. It is hoped that musicians and leaders of singing groups will make a special effort to attend this meeting.

Such a mass concert as planned will do much to refute the unjust criticism that Washington is the most difficult city in the United States in which to undertake such a program. That in itself is not true, but it is true that too often an effective spirit of cooperation is not present when such things are planned, and for that reason they fail to materialize. It is to make them materialize is to get together for the good of everybody.

Not only should this mass concert be held, but it should be made a yearly affair.

Thursday night the service class of the Master School of the Piano held its first monthly meeting of the season. A program of the masters' works was given and a talk on "The Road to Happiness" by Miss Gilchrist. Present were: Grace G. Gilchrist, Mrs. Charles J. Cassidy, Mrs. Eva Rosenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Rackley, Mrs. Sidney Williston, Miss Edna Rosenberg, Miss Jeanette Rosenberg, Miss Maria Adams, Miss Agnes Carr, Miss Hilda Burke, Miss Hazel Wasson, Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, Robert Reineck, Haskell Milstone and Gustav Weckel.

The first rehearsal of the Columbia Choral Art society was held on Monday evening at Thomson school. There were singers from all sections of the city, a large number of them from among the employees of the government, the large stores, and from several church choirs. Work was started on several numbers which are to be used in the society's first concert after the Christmas holidays.

Otto Torney Simon, the conductor, is well known in Washington, and the music lovers of this city have a pleasant recollection of the concerts which have been presented here under his baton. It is his desire to make the membership 500 or more. The rehearsals are held every Tuesday evening at the Thomson school.

Carolyn Manning, contralto, has been engaged as soloist in the quartet of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church.

A colonial concert will be given in Alexandria on Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. by the Woodluthians, from Woodward & Lothrop, for the benefit of the Anne Lee Home for the Aged. The chorus will be assisted by the following Washington soloists: Mrs. Myra M. Marks, soprano; Miss Marion Parker, soprano; Miss Mabel Flehr, contralto; Miss Mildred Smith, soprano; William F. Raymond, tenor; Charles W. Moore, bass; Howard A. Moore, baritone, and Granville Leet, tenor.

Music for the Third Annual Harvest festival to be given Saturday evening in the auditorium of Central High Community center, will be by the symphonette of the United States Army band, conducted by Second Leader Thomas Darcy, who is preparing a program of numbers characteristic of the harvest scenes of the world.

Caroline McKinley has arranged the dance numbers, in which the members of the McKinley studio will appear in the Greelan and Hebron scenes and in the finale, known as the "Universal Harvest."

The harvest festival will be presented in honor of Community day as set apart in American Education week for the "cultivation of community interests in music, art and other wholesome fields for the improvement of civic unity." The community center department invites the people of Washington to attend this celebration, for which reserved seat tickets may be had by applying at the various centers and at the Franklin administration building in the community centers office.

Proceeding the festival there will be fifteen minutes of community singing of national songs, beginning at 8:15 o'clock and led by a choral director of the National Capital.

The second of the series of recitals at the Washington College of Music was held last Friday evening in the concert hall. This was given by junior students. The program was as follows:

"The Music Box" (Poldini), Dora Brozman, piano; "To a Wild Rose" (MacDowell), Jeanette Kirsch, piano; "The Woodcutter" (Billero), Clara Benedict, piano; "To the Rising Sun" (Forjussen), Eleanor May Gray, piano; concerto (Huber), Julian Altman, violin; two preludes, Op. 28 (Chopin), Zora Krynitsky, piano; "The Jasmine Door" (Scott), "La Serenata" (Tosti), Mary Gastrock, soprano; "Valeik" (Mokrejs), Paul Rosenberg, piano; "Salut d'Amour" (Elgar), E. Warren Barnes, violin; prelude Op. 28, No. 7 (Chopin), "Impatience" (Heller) Dorothy Leighty, piano; "Change of Mind" (Curran), "Ho, Mister Piper" (Curran), Helen Humphrey, soprano; "Hunting Song" (Mendelssohn), Gladys Pinching, piano; "Largetto" (Handel) waltz (Cramer), Flora Clayton, violin; "Maiden's Wish" (Chopin-Liszt) Nettie Sadle, piano.

Mme. Lillian Evgani, coloratura soprano, who is making her second concert tour of the United States, will give a recital at the Shubert-Belasco theater, Sunday evening, November 21.

This concert will probably conclude the appearances of Mme. Evgani in this country this year.

She will sail shortly afterward for Europe to appear in grand opera at Monte Carlo and Nice and to make a continental tour.

The District of Columbia chapter of the American Guild of Organists will hold its second meeting in the choir room of Epiphany church tomorrow.

Under the auspices of the Church of the Covenant, Mrs. Guy Stewart McCabe, of Pittsburgh, will give an entertainment Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the ball room of 2300 Sixteenth street. Mrs. McCabe's program, entitled "Impersonations of Childhood," consists of a group of monologues, lectures and children's songs. She will be accompanied on the piano by Harvey Murray, organist of the Church of the Covenant. For the purpose of the monologues, Mrs. McCabe has created a boy character, "Henry Melville." Mrs. James C. Pryor is chairman of the league committee in charge of arrangements for the occasion.

The Russian club had a Halloween party recently at which Miss Jack Ward, mezzo-soprano, was heard in several groups of songs, accompanied by Mrs. T. S. Lovette. Tania Ayvasoglou rendered a tone dance. Some of the members of the club appeared costumed.

Among the guests were Miss Follon, Bohemian pianist and the former Russian diplomat to Brazil and Argentina, and Mrs. Alexander Gregor. Mr. Gregor has recently returned to Washington, where he had formerly spent some eight years as charge d'affaires and as first secretary of the Imperial Russian embassy. Mrs. Gregor is known for her activity in the Red Cross in Paris during the war.

At the next meeting Mme. Marie Zailipski, dramatic soprano, formerly of the Imperial Russian theaters in Petrograd and Moscow, will give a program of Russian music. The club will meet at the home of Miss Elena de Sayn.

The Rubinstein club held its first rehearsal of the season on Tuesday at the Willard. The old members reported in full force and many new ones were added. Regular rehearsals will be held every Tuesday at 8:15 o'clock at the Willard.

The District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs will meet Saturday at 4:30 p. m. in Mrs. Harriett Locher's room, third floor, Metropolitan Theater building. Plans for the McDowell children's crusade, the massed spring concert and other matters will be discussed. A new junior club, the Prestissimo club, Miss Mabel F. Mulliken, has recently been welcomed into the federation.

Washington heard a highly commendable premiere in sacred music Sunday in connection with the ordination service at the Church of the Ascension. It came in the form of a new setting for the Episcopal communion office, written by Dr. A. W. Harned, organist and choir-master of the church. Since he received his doctorate in music from the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Harned has devoted much time to sacred music and has composed in that field, but this is the most pretentious work he has yet done.

The liturgical vein ruled the new opus, which was to be expected. Dr. Harned has not attempted anything very novel in the scoring; quite, on the other hand, there is every tendency to cling to the accepted style of such compositions. This procedure is praiseworthy, as time has shown, though too few of the present day writers seem to consider it so.

Yet there is a fullness, and softness with majesty, in the new work which makes it particularly inspiring as a setting for the most solemn part of the service.

There is no great change of key in the composition. It is decidedly melodic; the harmonization is simple, yet not thin, and careful consideration has been given the text.

with a resultant commendable relationship.

The choir at Ascension is a splendid singing body. Dr. Harned has recruited and trained plenty of voices and plenty of volume. His proteges sing as a group and not as individuals. It did full justice to the new setting, giving it a sincere and sympathetic rendition.

Even more important work may be expected from Dr. Harned in the future.

By BERTHA R. MARTIN.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Coolidge made a hasty trip north on Monday in order to vote on Tuesday in Northampton, Mass., where they maintain their permanent residence. The journey was entirely accomplished within the space of 24 hours and on Wednesday they were back in the Capital.

While in the quaint little New England city Mrs. Coolidge had the great pleasure of seeing her mother, Mrs. Andrew Goodhue, who occupies the Coolidge home in that city. Contrary to some published reports, Mr. John Coolidge did not come over from Amherst to greet his parents. It is not likely, either, on account of the briefness of the Thanksgiving holiday of his alma mater that young Mr. Coolidge will come to the White House this month.

Nearly all the President's cabinet followed suit and went to their several homes to vote. Vice President Dawes, of course, was in Evanston, Ill., anyway, but the Speaker of the House cast his in Cincinnati, where he was returned to Congress by a handsome majority.

ALL candidates were not so lucky, however, and among those whose fortunes went awry on Tuesday were Senators Butler, Massachusetts; Weller, of Maryland, and Williams, of Missouri, which means the closing of three hospitable Washington houses after this season unless, of course, some safe harbors in special appointments are found for them which is a custom in taking care of lame ducks in all administrations.

Senator and Mrs. Butler are very popular and move in the most exclusive circles here and Senator and Mrs. Weller have maintained a Washington home for many years, whether the senator was in Congress or not. Senator and Mrs. Williams have gained many friends both within and without the large Missouri colony and their departure will be sincerely regretted.

QUEEN MARIE of Roumania is certainly meeting with a variety of novel social experiences in her tour of the United States. Washington society, which enjoyed her brief stay on her arrival in this country, heard last week with interest that the queen contribute to the charitable and civic life of their community. They especially desired to reach the young girls whose enthusiasm and energy might otherwise be expended in purely social diversions.

Among the new members are Mrs. Lloyd Marshall, Mrs. Robert Roebeling, Miss Jane Kendall, Miss Eleanor Preston, Miss Louise Fitzhugh, Miss Katherine Dunlop, Miss Alice Cutts, Miss Isabelle Reckoff, Miss Jane Parker, Miss Lucy Parker Lerner, Miss Barbara Hight, Miss Francesca McKenney and Miss Dorothy Hill.

NAVY circles, as usual, are busy with plans for the annual Navy Relief ball on Thanksgiving day, which has been a feature of that holiday for many years.

This ball is given by the Washington branch of the Navy Relief society and has a most worthy object. Mrs. Edward Eberle, wife of the chief of naval operations, is chairman of the ball committee and wives of leading navy officers are serving on the several committees in charge of the arrangements for the ball.

ENGAGEMENTS vie with interest for the younger set with the announcements of debutante events, and the belles and beaux of Washington learned with pleasure last week of the engagement of Miss Yolanda Romano Avezana, daughter of Baron Romano, former Ambassador of Italy in Washington, to Viscount Alain de Thieules, counselor of the Belgian embassy in Paris. The marriage will not take place until January.

As Miss Romano passed much of her childhood in Washington she has many friends here. Her mother was an American woman, Miss Jacqueline Taylor, of St. Louis. She died in Paris several years ago.

EMBASSIES and legations find reasons for entertainments in anniversaries of the birthday of their rulers and other notable dates in their countries' histories. Last week the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro entertained at a large reception at the legation in celebration of the independence of the republic of Panama.

ALWAYS Christmas night and the Children's Country Home ball have become synonymous to Washington. It is a brilliant affair and one of the largest balls of the season, as the younger people home from school for the holidays attend along with the debutantes of this season and last. The buds of this season are listed on the floor committee and the men's floor committee always is an interesting one. This year the ball will be held at the Mayflower hotel and from present indications virtually all of the boxes have been taken.

OUTSTANDING in the group of autumn brides is Miss Eleanor Davies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, whose marriage to Mr. Thomas Patton Cheeseborough will take place Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. John's church. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents at 2941 Massachusetts avenue. Miss Davies made her debut in Washington and after a season of parties returned to her studies at Vassar. Entertainments for the bride-to-be and her fiancé are crowding the calendar up until the day of the wedding.

Miss Lilia Tuckerman, guest of her Aunt & Commander Herbert S. Howard for the winter. Miss Tuckerman will make her debut in Washington.

will be in our midst on November 24.

Whether the new Minister of Roumania will give a reception in her honor has not been stated definitely as yet, but as, according to the announcement, she will remain in Washington for a few days it is to be expected that several brilliant social events will signalize her stay here.

A dinner by the Ambassador of Italy and Donna Antoinette de Martino for December 5 in honor of the queen will not be postponed, as its period of official mourning for the death of an Italian princess will have been finished by that time.

After leaving Washington the queen will go to Florida, stopping at several Southern cities en route. She has been very anxious to visit Florida and her coming will no doubt have the effect of beginning the social season a little earlier than usual at the big resorts.

AS soon as the chill winds of winter begin to blow across the Capital City thoughts turn to the pleasant lands to the south and the exodus southward is well under way by Christmas of each year.

Washington remembers with pleasure the visit of the Crown Prince Leopold to Washington, shortly after the world war, in company with his parents, the King and Queen of Belgium, and, therefore, has read with unusual attention the cable news of his marriage to Princess Astrid of Sweden this week, which has occupied the limelight of European royal affairs for the last seven days.

WITH the coming of Congress the first week in December will be much social activity in that group of Washington society. Many of the families of members, however, will not come here until after the Christmas holidays, and still others, on account of the ending of the Sixty-ninth Congress on March 4, will not come to the Capital for the few weeks at all.

The departure of so many members because of failure of reelection or voluntary retirement from the halls of Congress will make this season one of farewell parties of many kinds. It has been noted that such circumstances often add brilliancy to a season, as every one is anxious to entertain for their departing friends.

WASHINGTON social leaders will assume the uniforms of Red Cross service this week in the endeavor to assist in the tenth annual roll call of the District chapter of the American Red Cross. Led by Miss Mabel Boardman, the indefatigable Red Cross worker, many prominent women belong to one or the other of the volunteer service corps of the Red Cross.

A pretty ceremony took place at the White House on Friday, when Mrs. Coolidge did her bit in starting the annual roll call by enrolling her distinguished husband and President of the United States in the organization, of which he is the president. Another advance bit of work for the roll call was the visit of a boy of Washington debutantes, escorted by Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, to the U. S. S. Mayflower, where they enrolled the entire crew, from captain to cook. Miss Allison Roebeling, daughter of Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, of Trenton and Washington, enrolled Capt. Wilson Brown, commander of the Mayflower, and Miss Jane Kendall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Kendall, the cook.

DEbutantes and a few of the younger matrons have been admitted to the Junior league this year. At a recent meeting at her home, the vice president, Miss Helen Townsley, in the absence of Mrs. Chauncey Parker, Jr., explained to them the constitution and briefly the history of the league. The Washington Junior league was founded in 1913, and is one of the earliest branches of the National Junior league. An organization started in New York, by ten prominent debutantes, who felt they had something to

of Jewelry to Fine Apparel

The smartness and loveliness of the correctly appareled woman are not established by any single adornment of her person. . . . They are the enviable gift of her happy harmonizing of the style and beauty individualities of everything she wears. . . . No need to itemize the obvious correctness that tells you that she is becomingly dressed—and that your eye takes in at a glance. . . . But notice, please, her jewelry. . . . See how necklace and bar pin and rings—and the dainty vanity so gracefully held—bracelet and wrist watch, too—complete to eye-filling charm a loveliness of appearance without them not to be attained. . . . Appropriately chosen jewelry is the key essential of her attire.

CHARGE ACCOUNTS

That Goldsmith & Company's pre-holiday showing of modish jewelry is all-inclusive needs hardly to be told. . . . Marvelously wrought bracelets, $25 to $300. . . . Charmingly diminutive wrist watches, $25 to $150. . . . Solid silver vanities, $5 to $30. . . . Richelieu pearl necklaces, three-strand, $15 to $100. . . . ## PARENT-TEACHER ACTIVITIES

All notices for this column must be in the hands of the chairman by noon on the Wednesday preceding the Sunday on which publication is desired. Address, Mrs. J. N. Saunders, 3618 Porter street northwest.

The executive board of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher associations will meet Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock in the Arlington hotel. It is always important for the members to be present at the monthly board meetings and this is especially true of the meeting Tuesday because many matters of vital importance to the organization will be discussed. No business of any nature can be taken before the meeting of the whole organization unless such matters are first discussed by the executive board, so that it is necessary for every member to be present and take part in the discussions.

A year ago the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher associations held its first Parent-Teacher institute, which was conducted by Mrs. Arthur Watkins, the executive secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. This institute was so very successful in every way that the members of the District congress decided to hold a similar event every year. The institute this year will be held in the Arlington hotel on Tuesday, November 15, and there will be three sessions, from 10 o'clock to noon, 2 to 3:30 o'clock and in the evening from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Miss Frances Hays, one of the field secretaries of the National Congress, will conduct the institute this year. Miss Hays is in much demand all over the country, and the District is particularly fortunate in having her direct this institute, which will be a concentrated course in every phase of parent-teacher work. It is remarkable how few people really understand the aims and purposes of parent-teacher work, so every State in the country gives an important place on its yearly program to an institute to teach those interested in the real meaning of parent-teacher work. Most of the States have so many sessions that often the course of study takes up several weeks, but it is considered best to confine it in the District to three sessions in one day and that day the regular meeting day of the District congress. It is planned to hold an informal parent-teacher dinner at 6:30 o'clock in the Arlington, in order that the members may get together socially before the evening session. There will be no speeches at the dinner. A detailed program of this important meeting will be published later, but every parent-teacher member in the District should reserve all day and evening of November 15 for the institute.

The middle Atlantic council will hold its regular fall session in Annapolis Thursday in conjunction with the State convention of the Maryland Congress of Parent-Teacher associations. The president of the District congress and five delegates from the District will be the guests of the Maryland congress at a banquet Wednesday night at the Carvel hall in Annapolis. The District representatives will be the president, Mrs. Giles Scott Rafter; Mrs. J. N. Saunders, Mrs. W. T. Bannerman, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. E. R. Kalmbach, and Mrs. W. Mann.

The members of the California Congress of Parent-Teacher associations are making elaborate plans for the entertainment and comfort of the delegates to the national convention which will be held in Oakland, Calif., next May. The District of Columbia should be well represented at this convention and it is not too soon for the different school clubs to consider sending their presidents. The importance of attending a national convention can be too greatly stressed. It is a liberal education to merely hear the programs and every delegate is filled with renewed enthusiasm for her work after she has taken part in discussions on familiar problems with other P-T-A. members from every State in the country.

Mrs. Laura Underhill Kohn, the director of the national publicity department, will come to Washington on Wednesday, December 1, and conduct an all day publicity conference with the members of the District of Columbia Congress of Parent-Teacher associations.

Mrs. Susanne Rauscher, the chairman of the Child Welfare Magazine committee, the District of Columbia held a meeting of the committee in the assembly hall of the Oyster school on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Frances Hays, field secretary of the national congress, and Miss C. T. Magner, were the speakers. Mrs. Rauscher outlined her plan for the work of her committee and it is her aim to have nearly every P-T-A. member in the District subscribe to the Child Welfare Magazine which is the official organ of the national congress.

A Halloween costume party was held at Carbery school Friday, October 29. Mrs. Grover Kookegey was general chairman, assisted by the parents and teachers of the school. Mrs. William Domdera was chairman of candy; Mrs. Frank Ludlow, grabbags; Mrs. Sandridge, ice cream; Mrs. Hagen, Miss Ruth Dick, and William Domdera in charge of dancing. Mrs. A. K. Wime and Mrs. Lewis provided games for the children and prizes were won by Myrtle Copper, Winston Stratton, Ralph Capperott and Grant Hagen. Miss Hope Soule was in charge of the stereopticon slides which were enjoyed in the seventh grade room. Music was furnished by an orchestra provided by a parent of the school. ## Why Stiff Shoes for your Flexible Feet?

Just notice how readily your bare foot bends at every joint and how freely the muscles flex and stretch in walking.

Not much stiffness there! The body couldn't live without this flexible shock-absorber.

The marvelous resilience of the three main arches of the foot enables this delicate structure to springily carry the whole weight of the body and to absorb the constant jars of walking.

In the Cantilever Shoe, the shank (or arch) is entirely of flexible leather. There is no concealed metal. It permits the foot arches to flex as Nature intends.

The flexible Cantilever allows natural exercise of the foot muscles, preventing or correcting "weak arches."

Life of School Principal Revealed in Satiric Poem

Head of Business High in Heroic Couplets Sings It Is Easier to Convert Hades Into Paradise Than to Direct System.

Thousand Boys and Girls, Doting Parents, Teachers and Janitors Command His Attention and He Must Listen All Day.

Allan Davis, versatile principal of Business High school, has turned poet. Or, perhaps it would be better to say that he has been discovered as a poet. He felt the "urge" to write a poem in 1916, and answered it. Then, for ten years "the thing," as he calls it, remained buried in his desk. He resurrected it about three weeks ago and read it at an alumni meeting, the fact being that he was in need of something to fill out his allotment of speaking time.

"The High School Principal" is the title of Mr. Davis' poem, and it is a merry satire on the life of a principal. It pictures him as a man of many parts, who becomes so lonely in Heaven that he asks to be transferred from "heights" to "depths" to the underworld. In Satan's realm, the principal uses the wide range of knowledge he has acquired on earth, to transform his torrid dwelling place into a paradise.

Mr. Davis, who is the first and only principal Business High school has ever had, having held the post since 1890, wrote his poem in 1916 with the intention of dedicating it to the late Emory Wilson, beloved principal of Central High school. He planned to read it at a banquet celebrating the opening of the new Central High school building, but he was suddenly called out of town and the poem was forgotten. The poem follows:

The principal's a man who hasn't time to do anything to do. His boys are like the stars above; He sits in gloomy grandeur, while the System works at a snail's pace. By automatic motion he great purpose to fulfill.

One thousand little boys and girls may wander out and in; Two thousand more fondly dote and stifle every sin. While fifty teachers slumber in fifty different ways, Effluvia of the follicles of the thousand ladies and ladies.

Thus everything is lovely—in an automatic way. For the System runs on autopilot and nature's full play. And the Principal has nothing not a single thing to do. To demonstrate, I'll illustrate a few incidents.

But although this is apparent to the pedagogic mind, There are certain slight variations to which he is blind. For, at times, he's almost human, and he has been known to smile. When the System works quite smoothly or the pupils to beguile.

But diversions—first and foremost there is Edythe Jane Maryee (whose teacher is eyes, horrid and who has no sympathy). She reluctantly meanders through the open office door. And pledges her allegiance to hard study evermore.

"Now Edythe comb your curly locks from out your pretty eyes. Go rub the powder off your nose; and, if you're really wise, Take home your books for study. Have a pocket in your dress. That will desire for dances strange, endeavor to repress."

Then there's the big athletic boy—whose head is filled with hair. To "lower records" seems to be his chief and only care. He, too, forsakes the classroom for the Office, there to tell Adventures, acts, and accidents that unto him befall.

The janitor, the fireman, the sweep, the engineer— He keeps his eye upon them every day within the year. The roof, the furnace, and the lawn; the classroom and the hall; the corridor and basement—he tries to watch them all.

The lady teachers—softly speak; narrate with circuitouspection; Beware; tell not; let lips be dumb; use every soft inflection. To exposition, argument, description and narration. He must listen without comment—without praise or condemnation.

But finally all life must end. Upon the door there's a creak. The companies their arms reverse, their brilliant colors drape. The System pauses, starts, moves on; another in his place. Saint Peter opens wide the gates with welcome in his face.

"But, ere you enter, thus be warned; you've earned eternal joy. But would your residence within be free from sad alloy? You do not sing a golden harp would it bestir your skill; Perfection can't be proved; you'd lose in thought and will."

"Then, shut your gates. I'll go below where human beings dwell."

R. K. Cochran, formerly of J. M. Stein & Co. and for the last four years a member of the firm of D'Elia, Cochran & Kline, has recently disposed of his interest in that firm, and is again associated with J. M. Stein & Co. in the capacity of Personal Sales Representative.—Adv.

Harris & Ewing.
ALLAN DAVIS.

Slight happiness celestial your wisdom can foretell. From loneliness deliver me; I'll strive to live again. With the follies, pains, and vices that are common to mere men.

And thus from heights "supernal" to infernal fires below. The Principal, advised and warned, elected he should go. And the quick electric message carried knowledge to and fro.

The "follies" that formerly were instruments of woe. Were harnessed to vast power plants, while a soft and radiant glow. Replaced the burning terrors of the smitten lakes below.

And the quick electric message carried knowledge to and fro. Heat and light were made the servants, not the masters, of the men. Lakes of ice were now created through a clever storage plan. Synthetic roads were common. Necessary evils were made to flow. Through the genius analytic of the chemists down below.

Imagination, laws were needed to keep chaos from above. And the good of human beings took the place of abstract love. Satan's orders were made to flow. In improvement and advance. While the little devils aided his great glory to subdue.

And through it all the Principal had his word to say. Till Satan spoke: "Pray tell us where you got your winning way. What wisdom came, what virtue, doth your faculties endow? From 'Chaos unto Paradise' we pray you tell us how?"

The principal smiled slightly, in a reminiscent way. And said: "This is not labor. It is just a kind of play. To a man who's run a high school twenty years, it's well. It's an afternoon's diversion to reorganize your hell."

Styles in Slippers
Never More Varied

(By the Associated Press.)
Styles in slippers seen about New York were never more varied. They are made from almost any material or leather—velvet in high shades, brocade, metal cloth, and reptile skins. The heels of evening slippers are works of art. Brilliant studs and brilliant colored leather inserts add variety. Some of these gorgeous heels they look as though they belonged in the window of a jewelry shop—cost as much as a gown.

The Harlequin

A new, brilliant slipper for evening wear. The short vamp is of imported checked pailley cloth with coloring embodied to match any gown. Quarters and spiked heel of silver kidskin.

NEW BROADCASTING COMPANY TO ENTER FIELD NOVEMBER 15

Elaborate Entertainment Will Be Put on Air by Successor to Station WEAF.

CHAIN OF STATIONS MAY SPAN COUNTRY

Expansion Will Be Under Direction of H. A. Aylesworth, Dealer in Radio.

Listeners will want to get their sets all serviced up and shipshape by Monday, November 15, for on that evening the new National Broadcasting Co. will formally enter the field by putting on what is expected to be one of the most elaborate entertainments ever heard on the air. Not only will they endeavor to secure the greatest artists in the vicinity of New York city, where the main broadcasting will take place, but an entirely new stunt will be tried out by trying in famous artists who will then be on concert tour and who may be heard by radio listeners regardless of what part of the country the artists happen to be in on that particular Monday night. The hook-up is expected to be one of the largest ever attempted.

The occasion will mark the taking over of stations WEAF and WJZ in New York by the National Broadcasting Co., which is a subsidiary of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. for WEAF. Likewise it is alleged that the formation of the National Broadcasting Co. will be the forerunner of a chain of stations—perhaps two or three chains—which will ultimately span the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada.

Aylesworth to Direct.

This expansion will be under the direction of H. A. Aylesworth, president of the newly formed N. B. C. and formerly managing director of the National Electric Light association. Born at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in 1886, Mr. Aylesworth is another conspicuous example of the fact that radio leadership is the young man's game. Educated as a lawyer, he was, at the early age of 28 years, appointed chairman of the Colorado public utilities commission.

Mr. Aylesworth's work was such that four years later he was induced to devote himself to public relations work as assistant to the vice president of the Utah Power & Light Co., with many plants in Utah and Idaho and headquarters at Salt Lake City. He was not destined to remain in that field long, for officers of the National Electric Light association saw in Mr. Aylesworth "the man whom they thought best fitted to carry out the plans of organizing the association and making it a still greater force in the electric light and power industry. Mr. Aylesworth's choice proved a wise one, and following this successful work came his selection as head of the National Broadcasting Co., the personal choice, it is said, of Owen D. Young.

McClelland Is Vice President.

George F. McClelland, long in charge of WEAF, will be the vice president of the concern. A note of regret in connection with the forming of the new company is the fact that it will mean the separation from the radio field of W. E. Harkness, who has done so much to develop the great WEAF chain of stations, but who will remain at his old post of assistant vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. A St. Louisian by birth, Mr. Harkness developed the use of radio broadcasting by commercial concerns for the creation of good will which has now been generally adopted by broadcasters in the United States as one of the principal means of securing financial support of broadcasting.

He was a member of the Hoover radio conferences, and as a director of the National Association of Broadcasters took an active part in legislative hearings in Washington on the radio and copyright bills. (Copyright, 1926, by Robert D. Heil.)

Chamber Music Lectures.

Beginning Tuesday at 8:30 p. m., Henry T. Fleck, of New York, author of chamber music, will present the first of a series of lectures in chamber music, direct from the auditorium of the Central High school in Philadelphia. The lectures will be broadcast by WIP on 508 meters. The series will consist of six chamber music lectures with lectures on the music by Dr. Fleck.

Saxophones to Play Sea Tunes.

The moaning saxes of the Davis Saxophone octet will discard their "landlubber" tactics for rhythmic "sea legs" Wednesday when they launch a program consisting entirely of sea tunes. It will include such nautical airs as "A Sailor," "When the Bells of the Lighthouse Ring Out," "Sailors' Hornpipe," "Fishers' Hornpipe," "Asleep in the Deck" and several other numbers. The concert, through station WRC, will begin at 8:30 p. m.

Although separated from his business by thousands of miles while on a trip to New Zealand recently, A. J. Baldwin, of Portland, Ore., was kept in constant touch with his firm's affairs through the cooperation of amateur radio stations in New Zealand with the station of A. C. Dixon, Jr., radio 7IT, Portland.

When the New Zealand trip was originally planned, it was not thought possible to maintain any regular communication with the United States owing to the overcrowded condition of the cables. However, soon after establishing headquarters at Wellington, Mr. Baldwin received word from an amateur at Auckland that he had just received several messages from Dixon's station in the United States relating to business affairs.

This relay work was so encouraging that it was decided to find out if any amateur at Wellington could maintain a schedule with the United States amateur. A few nights later E. A. Shrimpton, operating 2XA at Wellington, got in touch with Dixon at Portland, and thereafter the two maintained regular nightly schedules.

To demonstrate the speed with which amateurs can transmit messages across the United States of short waves, N. A. McIntyre, of Brooklyn, N. Y., operating station 2BO, recently sent off a message to Los Angeles. The message was copied direct by 6BSL, owned by K. B. Houston, at San Francisco, was relayed on to Los Angeles, and an answer secured and returned to Brooklyn in 21 minutes.

Official ARRL broadcast, NR 161, Nov. 8-Nov. 14.

"Latest word received from Dyott Roosevelt Memorial expedition in Brazil came from GMD via 2UK at New Brunswick, N. J. Party now traveling up Sepotuba river in canoes after having reduced baggage and personnel. Operator Bussey continues to use the low power portable set on 37.5 meters with pure DC note. 2FJ operated by 2APV has worked GMD direct, while 2AC and 12 IAM have relayed a number of messages through 2AMJ. Please listen for GMD on 37.5 meters and do what you can to keep this expedition in good contact with home. Please report hearing on working GMD in detail to ARRL headquarters, Hartford, for QST."

ARMISTICE DAY EVENTS TO BE CARRIED ON AIR

RADIO TO CHECK FLIERS

Arrangements are being made to broadcast the speech of President Coolidge from Kansas City, Mo., at the Liberty Memorial association meeting on the occasion of the dedication of a memorial to Kansas City's war dead. The exercises will be held at about 3:30 o'clock on the afternoon of Armistice day, Thursday.

This is one of the few times the President will have spoken west of the Mississippi river. Radio is the only thing in the world fast enough to keep track of the racing seaplanes when the American naval aviators compete with the Italian team at Norfolk, Va., for the Jacques Schneider cup, Armistice day. United States teams have won the trophy in the last two competitions and if they win this time they will be entitled to permanent possession.

The course at Norfolk is the usual triangular shape except that the turns are sharper than those of recent years. Owing to the fact that the speed of these planes is around 250 miles an hour, keeping in touch with their progress is a difficult problem, but plans are being made for a special radio installation which is expected to keep the racers and observers fully informed as to the progress of events.

Many Speculations On Roxy Radio Plan

Although definite announcements still are forthcoming, speculations are afloat regarding the great things Roxy intends to do in the way of broadcasting from his new headquarters in New York, the opening of which now is expected to take place in February.

Represented to be the largest theater of its kind in the world, it is perhaps the first to be constructed with an eye to its broadcasting possibilities. Not only are provisions being made for a battery of microphones and other apparatus to pick up the sound from the stage, but underneath the stage will be an especially built radio broadcasting room, where performers may assemble quickly. There will be a reception room for out-of-town listeners.

Jazz Music Trial By Teaberry Friday

Not long ago a music critic made a statement that created a decided stir among the proponents of syncopation. He compared the composition of a famous classical composer with the work of some modern jazz producers in a manner calculated to make one ashamed to listen to jazz.

To settle the question thus raised the Teaberry Boys are going to place "Music on Trial" from KDKA at 10 p. m. Friday. The matter will be handled with impartiality and in true courtroom style. The evidence presented will be in the form of music, song and humor and you and other radio fans have been chosen to serve on the jury.

CONCERT SOLOIST

MAY PETERSON, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera company, who will sing during Maxwell hour at 10:15 o'clock tonight from WJZ and connected stations, including WRC.

$10,000,000 RADIO COMPANIES MERGED

Federal Telegraph and Brandes Concerns Combined; Spreckels Heads Board.

Two of the oldest radio companies in this country, the Federal Telegraph Co. of California, founded in 1911, and the Brandes Products Corporation of the United States, Canada and England, founded in 1908, announce the completion of a merger under the new name of Federal-Brandes, Inc., with an authorized capitalization of $10,000,000. Both companies are pioneers in their respective fields of commercial radio communication and radio acoustics.

Headquarters of the new corporation are located in the Hobart building, San Francisco, with five plants manufacturing radio equipment at Newark, N. J.; Palo Alto, Calif.; Toronto, Canada, and Slough, England. The common "A" stock is being quoted on the San Francisco exchange, and it is expected that application will be made to list on the New York Stock Exchange.

Officers of the merger are headed by Rudolph Spreckels, of San Francisco, chairman of the board. He is the president of the United Bank & Trust Co. of California and is a prominent capitalist on the Pacific coast. Lieut. Comdr. Ellery W. Stone, U. S. N. R., retired, has been elected president of the corporation. He is also a director of the United Bank & Trust Co. and is prominent in the radio industry as an engineer, the author of text books on radio and as a successful executive.

The new Balkite Charger combines two chargers in one. The new Balkite Charger with both low and high charging rates combines two chargers in one. At the low rate it is a trickle charger and can be left permanently connected to your battery and the light socket. Thus it keeps your battery always at full charge and in effect converts it into a light socket "A" power supply. At the high rate it is a heavy duty charger for use when excessive current is required.

The Balkite Charger is noiseless in operation. In most cases it can be used during reception. Like all Balkite Radio Power Units, it has no tubes and nothing to wear out or require replacement. It is a permanent piece of equipment. Can be used with either 4 or 6-volt batteries. Ask your dealer. Fansteel Products Company, Inc., North Chicago, Illinois.

Freed-Eisemann Radio Is Formed in Britain

Freed-Eisemann Radio of Great Britain has been organized to sell receivers and accessories made by the Freed-Eisemann Radio Corporation of Brooklyn, N. Y. The demand for the neodymium receivers manufactured by Freed-Eisemann is steadily increasing. Also in Australia and New Zealand because of the distance-getting and selectivity qualities of these sets.

Since the allocation of wavelengths throughout Europe, preventing interference between stations, the craze for distance reception has been revived, but there are so many broadcasters in the British Isles alone that only the most selective of sets prove adequate for the purpose of bringing in France, Germany, Spain, Italy and Russia.

SECOND LOVE

By MALCOLM DUART.

(Copyright, 1926, Eugene MacLean.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.
John Parrish and Audrey, his rich young wife, quarrel over her frequent reference to her wealth and her gifts to him, and their part. Her father, Harry Morton, comes back from Europe to find that Marie Allen is a guest in Audrey's home and that Marie has been making love to Parrish, who stays at a hotel. Parrish begins to be interested in her. Marie, young, lovely, is very advanced in her views of women's rights. She proceeds to try to tempt Morton, who laughs at her. As the last chapter ends he asks Audrey, at breakfast, if there isn't some place else that Marie can visit, outside Washington, since Marie has been ordered from her own home because of her free ideas.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.
(Names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXIX.

AUDREY thought for a while, frowning with the orange on her plate.

"I'd hate to lose Marie," she said. "She's so full of life and spirits, she cheers me up. Would you rather she'd go away?"

"I'm not so sure," Morton said, slowly. "If she went to the right place, it might—"

Audrey interrupted him. "Has she been trying to stir up your affections?" The shadow of a smile was on her lips.

Morton laughed. "The young lady is frolicsome," he admitted. "She told me she would 'go after' you," Audrey said. "Is that why you want her to go?"

Morton laughed again. "I'm hardened," he said. "But what I was thinking of was this—with things standing the way they do in this household, it might be better not to have a stranger around all the time."

"I don't know where she'd go," said Audrey. "I never heard her speak of any relatives. But I'll ask her." She was silent a moment. "Poor girl! She has a rough time, really. No wonder she's so wild. Her father can't understand why a girl should want to do anything but knit and study, and her mother is afraid of her father, and Marie has spent nearly all her life going from one boarding school to another, and to college—she didn't graduate from the university, but she went there two or three years. She's never had any real home life at all."

Marie herself came in at this moment, in the gauzy robe that had so embarrassed Parrish. She flitted around the table, so Morton's glance could not help but fall upon her. Marie eyed him, but he continued to eat, placidly.

"Audrey thinks this robe's disgraceful," she said, sitting down. "Is it?" Morton inquired, taking a slice of toast.

"It shows my undertakings," she explained. "Does it?" He broke the toast and took a bite.

"You know perfectly well it does!" she told him.

"You've hurt her feelings—you should have looked," Audrey said. Morton went on eating, with calm inattention. Later, when they had finished breakfast, Marie followed him into his study.

"Isn't there any way I can interest you at all?" she demanded. He looked around with a smile. "You do interest me greatly," he said.

"Yes—as a specimen." She sniffed. "You look at me as if I were some kind of funny-acting bug."

"Am I to understand that your revealing robe was intended to interest me?"

Marie sniffed again. "You know why a girl wears a thing like this when there's a man around," she announced, and turning, went out the door. Almost at once she reappeared. "If you're not interested when I talk to you, and not interested when you look at me, then there's nothing I can do about it, I suppose." Hereupon, she marched away again. Morton looked after her with a smile.

Later, he called Audrey, and asked her to get ready to go with him for a drive.

"Almost warm enough for the tropics," he said, as they settled themselves in the tonneau of Audrey's car. "Let's go out into the country."

They drove through Chevy Chase and out to the road that leads to Wheatley.

"Daddy," said the girl, as they passed the last outlying fringe of houses, "you heard John and me talking last night. I did everything a woman could, didn't I?"

Morton did not respond at once. "Didn't I?" she repeated.

"Audrey," he said deliberately, "did it ever occur to you that you are selfish?"

"I?" Her tone was one of startled wonderment. "Why, Daddy?"

He lit a cigar before he continued. "You've been so interested in what goes on in your own mind, that you've never tried to understand what goes on in John's."

"I've asked him what he was thinking about, lots of times," she defended.

"Well, this time he told you, and you ignored it. He said that the way you talked hurt him—and you kept right on hurting him."

"But," she said, "it's so silly of him. I can't see that he's so delicate that a few words will hurt him—especially as the words were about kindnesses I had done for him."

"My child," Morton said, seriously, "there's a blind spot in your brain. Until that spot is cleared—until you can see things you can't see now, you're going to be mightily unhappy in this world."

Audrey got out her handkerchief. "Are you going to hold me, too?" She put the square lace to her eyes.

"I am." He drew upon his cigar and let the smoke waft slowly from his lips. "Audrey, you're badly spoiled. I spoiled you."

Her shoulders drew up and she sobbed. He patted her upon the arm. "My dear," he went on, "this trouble with John is your fault."

"Oh, oh, oh!" she cried. "Take—take me home!"

"Not now." He smoked until the sound of her weeping lessened. "All your life," he went on, "you have been with me, until you were married. The most important thing in my life was you—and therefore you were the most important thing in your life. What you were thinking about outweighed anything that others thought about; what you wanted came first. It was my fault—I admit it. I spoiled you because I loved you."

He was silent as he looked

"Dear Morton," the note read. "I did my best to interest you. But since I couldn't do it, I'll try another way. You'll know about it, later—Marie."

thoughtfully off across the fields through which they were passing. "A man who has lost his wife in his youth and is left with one child tries to fill his own heart by making the child happy. And in time she forgets how to make others happy." He was quiet again while they passed a stretch of rough road.

Audrey laid her head back in the corner of the thick cushions and stared, white and miserable, at the chauffeur's back.

"When you got married," Morton resumed, "you wanted Parrish to bring you happiness. But you did nothing to bring happiness to him."

"I gave him things," Audrey said meekly.

"Cheapest thing you could do," her father said. "You didn't give up anything of value when you bought him presents. If you had been different. But I gave it to you."

"The one thing he did ask of you—to quit harassing him, you refused to do."

She wiped her eyes. "I don't see how it harassed him for me to talk a little."

Morton tapped her on the knee. "Talk can be more painful than a blow. That is something that women don't understand. Look here."

He turned so he could face her. "You're like a baby, that pokes its finger in its brother's eye. The baby doesn't know it hurts—but the brother does. And sometimes the brother slaps the baby, and the baby howls. That's your situation right now. John defended himself, the best he knew how, and you feel abused. You hurt him, he retaliated, and you're howling."

He looked at her keenly. "Do you get what I'm trying to tell you? John asked only one thing of you—he asked you not to say certain things. You insisted on saying them—for no better reason than that you wanted to. You were selfish, and he went away. Which one of you two was cruel?"

Audrey watched the landscape, as the car turned down a side road toward Washington. They went 4 or 5 miles, Morton waiting for her to speak. At last she put her handkerchief to her eyes again.

Morton put his arm over her shoulders, and drew her to him.

"I'm glad you said that," he told her, pressing her head against him. "It's the only reason God's world for him to come back again—or for you to reform yourself."

"Am I so bad?" she asked, faintly.

"Audrey, in one way you're good and kind and generous. But you've got to learn to give in, sometimes. You want John to live by your rules—and maybe he has rules of his own he'd like to live by. You've got to respect his wishes—even if it means that you must remain silent when you want to talk. It isn't necessary to say everything that comes into your mind, you know."

She put her arm through his. "Will he ever come back?" she asked, dolefully.

"I don't know." He frowned, in thought. "He is angry at you and justly so. I think. But I believe he loves you, too. Maybe after the hurt has worn out, he will come."

"Oh, I hope so." She burrowed her face into his coat. "I'm so terribly unhappy without him!"

It was luncheon time when they returned to the house.

Audrey went upstairs, and Morton wandered into his study to wait for her return. His eye caught a cream-colored envelop, sticking upright by its corner, in the lid of his desk. He opened it.

"Dear Mr. Morton," it said, "I did my best to interest you. But since I couldn't do it, I'll try another way. You'll know about it later—Marie."

He read the note over twice, and then thoughtfully tore it up. Calling the housemaid, he asked if Marie were in.

"She packed her clothes this morning," said the maid, "and went away in her yellow roadster. She said she wouldn't be back."

CHESS TABLE

WINTER SEASON
The chess tournament has progressed to the point where but two games remain to be played. During the last week Roberts broke even with Mutchler, and has, therefore, completed his part of the schedule, winding up with a score of 2½-1½. It is quite unlikely that Bishop should drop two, or even one and one-half games to Mutchler, and hence Roberts now looms as the probable winner.

In the latest Kriegspiel tourney a new plan has been adopted. The number of entrants has been limited to sixteen, and these have been arranged in groups of four. Each player in given group plays over another member of that group, game. The two players in each group having the highest scores are the two others in the semifinals. The two winners of the semifinals will be eliminated. Eight players and they, in the semifinals, group are also to be paired in groups of four. The four players emerging with the high scores from these sections will compete for the final prizes in the same "round robin" fashion.

To date group 1, consisting of Badger, Bishop, Byler and Bettenger, has practically completed its schedule. Quite an unexpected conclusion has already resulted. Badger, who finished last in the previous tournament, was scarcely conceded a chance in a field of the strength in which he was placed. But he showed a remarkable reverse in form and defeated both Bishop and Byler handily. Although he lost to Bettenger he is the only one of the group certain to move forward to the semifinals. Bishop defeated Bettenger and drew with Byler in the remaining games. Byler and Bettenger have yet to play. Should the latter win, he, too, will go to the semifinals. A draw will necessitate another game with Bishop to play off the tie. A loss will leave the honors to be decided by Byler and Bishop.

Some of the entrants in other groups have also played games. In group 2 Mutchler defeated Reardon. In group 3 Jeffers won from Mattnall. In group 4 Roberts and Rosedale drew their game.

In the class A-B tournament Mundello won from Chase, Hesse defeated Kaimbach and Bishop forced Perry to lower his colors in the only games contested. The score of the last-mentioned game appears elsewhere in the columns and Bishop had no trouble in running roughshod over his less experienced opponent. The standing of the players:

WESTERN TOURNAMENT GAMES

The key to No. 180 is Q-B8. Among those sending in solutions were J. H. Harris, Daniel Breeskin, F. B. Walker, E. J. Kassel, Dell Floyd, P. C. Leary and Wolf-Rosett. Comments on No. 178 and No. 179 are still coming in. P. C. Leary says of the former: "Problem No. 178 is the best you have given us for a long time. All hall Bettenger! Dell Floyd comments: 'This problem, like the two preceding ones, again illustrates the surprising power of the knight. A knight always seems to surprise an amateur. Is it that we do not fully appreciate the power of the knight? In playing I often exchange a knight for a bishop, having understood that the bishop is of slightly more value, only to get a surprising jolt from my opponent's knight.' And of No. 179 he adds: 'This problem is highly entertaining. The bishop's cutting off the retreat of the king, either way he moves, is fascinating. As one of Shakespeare's characters said: 'Our king, my brother, is prisoner to the bishop here.' 'I enjoyed both these problems immensely.'"

Problem No. 181.

Why "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"

Shining, princess-in-a-fairy-tale loveliness like that of Josephine Dunn, of New York, is one beautiful reason why gentlemen—and many others, too, prefer blondes! Miss Dunn, who is one of the Paramount Junior Stars, is also one of the reasons their first picture, "Fascinating Youth," went over big!

Asked about the beauty aids she uses this lovely star says: "The delicately textured Black and White Face Powder is my favorite of all. It is so fine and smooth it is benefiting my skin wonderfully, and it tuffs on so evenly it gives a silken sheen and softness I love!"

Beautiful blondes—and brunettes too, and the lovely "in-betweeners"—are finding this exquisitely textured face powder suits them perfectly in color tones as well as in texture. You can get it from dealers everywhere in the attractive 25c boxes.

Best results come from using Black and White Skin Soap along with the Black and White Beauty Creations.

Trade Organizations

Formerly trade organizations were maintained with a selfish motive in view, that of promoting an increase in the particular market in which its members were interested. Although every organization composed of business men engaged in a particular branch of business naturally desires to increase the opportunities of its members for gains, the aims and purposes of many of the present day organizations are higher in their ideals than the mere making of money on the part of their members. This is particularly true of the aims of the real estate boards, among whose chief aims and purposes are the raising of the standard of business, the dissemination of information and real service to the community.

A committee representing the Federation of British Industries recently visited the United States to investigate American business methods and among other things they reported that the business leaders of our country are much more ready and willing to take an active part in trade and business associations than are the business men of other countries. In the opinion of our British friends the interchange of experiences and the opportunity for the discussion of business presented by the trade organizations is of inestimable value to American business. The confidence of American business men in trade organizations is expressed in a recent statement by the vice president of one of America's greatest national banks when he said, among other things, that "a business man's membership in his trade organization will in the not far distant future be an important factor in his banker's judgment of his credit rating," and that "trade association membership is a measure of character because it shows the members' ability to get along well with others. It is also a measure of intelligence of a member's business methods."

"Trade association membership is a measure of soundness of an industry," he says, "because it is an indication of how far that industry is doing something for the stability, the efficiency and economy of production and distribution."

U. S. CHAMBER HEAD COMMENDS REALTOR BUSINESS STANDARD

Its Action for Better Government
Also Affecting Other Groups, O'Leary Says.

WIDE DISTRIBUTION MADE OF STATEMENT

President Jemison's Address at Same Time Sent Out to All Members.

When the United States Chamber of Commerce, at its last annual meeting, decided to enter the discussion of the civic development group on the important topic of how far organized business groups can and should set up their own standards of business conduct and take the responsibility for holding their own members to a standard so high that there would be no inclination toward governmental compulsion, one business was singled out as representative of what could be done and what is being done through a nationally united will. That was the business of real estate.

Robert Jemison, Jr., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, was invited by the chamber to tell them the story of what realtor organization has accomplished. The story was thus brought before the various business groups of the nation in a form familiar to the men who are having part in that accomplishment. It was a statement which the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has just issued through its president, James W. O'Leary, there must be for every realtor, however familiar he may be with the vast national scope of his association's work, a new recognition of the rank which is being accorded that work in the world of business at large.

Sent Out by Chamber.
The statement was made in a letter which was sent out by the chamber to members of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, enclosing a copy in pamphlet form of Mr. Jemison's address, a pamphlet which has been sent out also to each of 1,363 national and other organizations which make up the Chamber of Commerce and which has reached its great individual and associate membership. "The progress which the realtors of the United States are making in establishing high and in developing the will and the machinery for effective self-government in the conduct of their business has caught the attention of other groups," Mr. O'Leary says. "The fundamental character, the wide scope and the public spirit of the work in which your national organization is engaged is indicative of the best spirit of American business."

Recognition of this kind from the most distinguished business body of the country is recognition indeed. But it is not recognition that we may rest upon or rest upon. The very title of Mr. Jemison's address, "Self Government Must Be Preserved," an acceptance of the fact that the need for achievement is not a need that has been met once for all and may now be forgotten.

So long as the business of real estate is to be done from state to state, as our cities are changing their contours and their very character with every decade, so long as the personnel of a constantly changing personnel, so long will there be the need of vigilance, the need of new work in exploring real estate facts, and so long will there be the need constantly to remake our standards in the light of new conditions. So long, also, will there be the need to draw together the full strength of the group of men who have chosen real estate as their vocation that they may renew the realtor's pledge and keep it a living law.

Commendation for Realtors.
The National Chamber of Commerce published Mr. Jemison's account of the realtors' contribution to self-government in business not for realtors, but for the men of other business groups, in the belief that the problem of such standardization and self-government is one of first importance before all business today. But its courtesy in sending a copy of the address to every realtor is not in any sense a carrying of coals to Newcastle.

"We love our vocation. We want it to be respected and admired. We want our members to hold a dignified and honorable place in their communities. Men will do much to gain these ends," Mr. Jemison said in concluding his account of what real estate organization, still only eighteen years old in any national sense, has been able to do in creating within the minds of its members an ideal of their vocation and in establishing, through that ideal, a

NATIONAL MEETING WILL DISCUSS NEW INDUSTRY IN CITIES

Be Taken Up at Miami Convention.

The question before many American cities of how they may assure their future through the attraction of new industries will be taken up from the point of view of men whose daily business is the placement of plants and factories when the National Association of Real Estate Boards meets in Miami, Fla., January 12, 13 and 14.

At the same time there will come under discussion the pronounced present trend of industry toward branch factories, placed so as to put the manufacturing process as close as possible to the ultimate market. In a parallel series of meetings the association will take up the question of eliminating unneeded real estate offerings from the real estate market, and will discuss the most active present phases of real estate financing, the operation of office buildings and apartment buildings as business investments, the sale of farm lands, and general real estate brokerage.

Topics to come before group meetings of subdividers and of industrial property specialists were determined this week at meetings of the executive committees of the association and of its industrial property division, held at national headquarters, Chicago.

Discuss First Steps.
First steps on the part of a community to find out for itself what it has to offer an incoming industry, and therefore what industries it may wisely make an effort to attract, will be a central topic before the industrial property division of the association.

The discussion will include not only what should be done to ascertain the facts in regard to raw materials, market transportation facilities, labor conditions and other factors which are to be taken into account, but also how these facts, once ascertained, can be applied efficiently to draw the right industry to that particular situation.

The extensive study by the division of the location of industrial plants for the advantage both of the plant and of the community, will look toward the promotion of science of exact locations for factories. Walter S. Darden, of Detroit, will lead the discussion on branch industries and warehouses. J. B. Fisher, of Brooklyn, will talk on "Developing and Closing Prospects for Industrial Properties." L. M. Nicholson, of Chicago, will open the round-table discussion on "My Advertising Program for 1927." Matthew Carey, of Flint, Mich., chairman of the division, will talk on the outlook for the industrial property division in 1927.

Motor Trucking Costs.
The further program of the division will include a discussion on motor trucking costs, a leader for which has not been chosen. Question of what action the real estate board may take and should take to eliminate unsound subdivision offerings from the local market will be a second topic before the home builders and subdividers division of the association at the Miami meeting.

The discussion will center on action which can be taken to prevent loss of public confidence in subdivision offerings through the operation of firms so insecurely financed or so irresponsible as not to insure the lot purchaser the completion of improvements promised him. It will also go into the question of possible confidence through flooding the market with poorly planned subdivision operations and operations destined never to be completed. A rediscussion of zoning to bring out what must be done to insure the practicability of zoning regulations will be a second topic before the home builders and subdividers division.

Why I Believe in Washington

By R. P. ANDREWS,
President of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Washington, D. C.

Washington has the unique distinction of being the ideal city of this country; in fact, of the world. There is no other city which has so many outstanding advantages and so few disadvantages. In all nature cessation of growth means decline and death. There can be no standing still. Washington gives great promise for the future, for it is a growing city. Unlike many of the cities of this country, Washington has been most fortunate in having from its very inception a well-thought-out plan of development. In no other city in the world is every vestige of our national museums and zoological park were located in New York and an admission fee was charged, it would bring in a revenue of more than one-half a million a year, and yet has been in every vestige in Washington. It is true that we have handicapped as far as large conventions were concerned until the Washington auditorium was a fact. With that beautiful building accommodating 6,000 in its auditorium and 1,000 more in its committee rooms, and its exhibit hall with 30,000 square feet, Washington can now take care of almost any convention.

It is a well-known fact that every convention of any size excites the desire of a great number of the visitors to live in Washington. There are thousands of people who have retired and who are looking for an ideal place to spend their later years. One visit to Washington convinces them that here is the ideal city.

As the government of the United States grows so Washington must inevitably grow with a very high class of workers, who, thanks to our admirable civil service, are assured of permanent positions. No city presents such a solid foundation for increasing population and enlarged development as does Washington, the world capital. This is far from the case is readily understood when it is revealed that the total products turned out in this city last year amounted to over $3,000,000. Manufacturing carried on by 543 concerns gives employment to over 10,000 employees. The total volume of the manufacturing is rapidly overtaking such recognized industrial centers as Lynn and Lowell, Mass.

Few cities provide such a diversity of recreational facilities as is offered in Washington with its many beautiful parks, numerous private and public golf courses, tennis courts, polo fields, bridge paths for equestrians, college athletic sports and a world champion professional baseball team.

The possibilities for regattas, water sports, yachting, canoeing, motor boating, fishing on the scenic Potomac river, which is navigable offerings from the local market will be a second topic before the home builders and subdividers division of the association at the Miami meeting.

The discussion will center on action which can be taken to prevent loss of public confidence in subdivision offerings through the operation of firms so insecurely financed or so irresponsible as not to insure the lot purchaser the completion of improvements promised him. It will also go into the question of possible confidence through flooding the market with poorly planned subdivision operations and operations destined never to be completed.

A rediscussion of zoning to bring out what must be done to insure the practicability of zoning regulations will be a second topic before the home builders and subdividers division. John J. Hurst, Baltimore, chairman of the outlook for organized subdividers for the United States and Canada for the coming year. The division also will have on its program the subject of developing a sales organization and the question of compensation of salesmen.

from Washington to the sea, are unsurpassed in this country. Within easy reach over hard-surfaced roads are salt-water bathing in the Chesapeake bay and the mountain resorts of Maryland and Virginia. Within a short time there will be available the Shenandoah national park, the first great national park of the East, which will attract thousands of motorists from all the Atlantic seaboard as well as the central States.

Washington is the logical convention city of the United States and is rapidly being recognized as such. Every true American citizen has in his heart a desire to see Washington with the time they are charged with the responsibility of real estate, the speaker declared, basically is the result of the trend of development of human society. Tracing the situation in respect to real estate today as evolving directly from conditions starting with the ideas and customs of nomadic tribes, Mr. Whitford pointed out that when these wandering families of humans finally settled down on lands they felt desirable, ownership became known as occupancy, and occupancy was regarded as the indication of ownership.

Later it was felt that the home of the occupant of the property naturally were to be regarded as

Enrollment for Y. M. C. A. Realty Course Over Top

Record Established When 66 Students Register on Opening Night; Beneficial Reaction Is Shown to Desires of Board.

The opening of the Y. M. C. A. course in real estate last Monday night showed the largest enrollment of students that heretofore has registered for this course. Sixty-six students registered on the opening night. Many more probably will be added to the class. Several realtors and associate members are taking the course, but it is significant to note that the majority of students are from the general public. This fact indicates that the desires of the real estate board to spread information and education in regard to real estate is having a beneficial reaction.

The class was opened by Leonard W. de Gast, associate general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who introduced James P. Schick, executive secretary of the Washington Real Estate Board, who is in charge, conducting and outlining the subjects of the class.

The first lecture was given by Roger J. Whitford, general counsel of the Washington Real Estate Board, who took for his subject "The Real Estate Business." Mr. Whitford traced the history and development of real estate from its earliest inception. He pointed out that there is a distinction between a business and a profession, inasmuch as the practice of a profession concerned not only an effort for gain but an effort for service and achievement to the community and for the benefit of the general public. He emphasized that all persons in the real estate business should interest themselves not merely in the single proposition of making money but to fit themselves in their line of endeavor, so that they can render to their clients and to the public an intelligent, efficient and honest service.

Cites Basic Reason.
The general reason for the ownership of real estate, the speaker declared, basically is the result of the trend of development of human society. Tracing the situation in respect to real estate today as evolving directly from conditions starting with the ideas and customs of nomadic tribes, Mr. Whitford pointed out that when these wandering families of humans finally settled down on lands they felt desirable, ownership became known as occupancy, and occupancy was regarded as the indication of ownership.

Later it was felt that the home of the occupant of the property naturally were to be regarded as

as the owners following the death of the leaders or relatives. Later, he pointed out, with the constant development of the human mind and customs, the occupant was considered to have title to the land and still later the idea of occupancy was discarded and the theory of title ownership of land brought about in various ways, including purchase.

The speaker said that in view of the fact that all land is owned by someone and that it is used for a variety of purposes, the sale of land and transfers of property are necessary. Mr. Whitford pointed out that the service of the competent realtor should be on such a high plane that he would have a thorough and adequate knowledge of values and of all the technicalities necessary to the conduct of the real estate business for the protection of his client and general public.

The speaker said that real estate men should not occupy such a confidential and important position in the business world without a proper education. He pointed out that the business and incidents relative to the proper conduct of the business, and that those persons engaged in the realty profession should have at heart the full consideration of the public good.

Responsibility Is Great.
"The responsibility of handling such transactions is great," Mr. Whitford said. The lecturer emphasized that in order to properly serve clients in the community real estate men should not only study the technicalities of their profession, but also closely follow and become interested in the affairs of the development and happenings of their city.

Mr. Whitford pointed out that real estate men not only were charged with the responsibility of transactions in the sale of real estate, but they also had the added responsibility of investing large sums of the public's money in real estate securities and therefore a thorough study of this angle is necessary.

The management of properties and estates also are entrusted to real estate men and, according to Mr. Whitford, if placed in the hands of untrained men result in saving in money and much more efficiency in handling of various property.

Mr. Whitford will be the speaker at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:00 o'clock, and will be given by A. B. Davidson, who will speak on "Real Estate Office Organization."

BUILDING CONTINUES IN RECORD VOLUME
Real Estate Boards Report Construction at Rate of $5,500,000 Monthly.

With building construction reported as proceeding at a rate of approximately $5,500,000 per month for the first nine months of the present year, the total construction volume for the year will apparently be approximately that reached in the records of the past two years, the National Association of Real Estate Boards points out.

Real estate activity for the country as a whole was measured for September by the index figure of 164, according to the statistics compiled monthly by the National Association of Real Estate Boards from official records of transfers and conveyances in 41 typical cities. The September figure is a recession of five points from the index of August of this year. The index for September of 1925 registered 167.

The association's calculations are based on the official records of the 41 cities for the years 1916-1923, taken as a norm. The September figure therefore indicates that market activity for real estate in the nation as a whole is approximately 64 per cent above the average for that month during the period 1916-1923.

Realtors Will Give Dinner-Dance Dec. 9
The annual realtors' dance will be held in the Wardman Park hotel December 9. It will be a dinner dance with entertainment features. The dinner will begin at 8:30.

The committee in charge is composed of H. Tudor Morsell, chairman; Waverly Taylor, J. Rupert Mohler, Howard Schlatt, W. L. King, M. P. Canby and J. A. McKeever.

Sales Meeting November 9.
The sales managers' division of the Washington Real Estate board will hold its meeting in the Lee house, November 9, at 12:30 p. m. to discuss advertising and other matters of interest in connection with the sales department. H. Hillegast, chairman of the division, will preside.

as the owners following the death of the leaders or relatives. Later, he pointed out, with the constant development of the human mind and customs, the occupant was considered to have title to the land and still later the idea of occupancy was discarded and the theory of title ownership of land brought about in various ways, including purchase.

The speaker said that in view of the fact that all land is owned by someone and that it is used for a variety of purposes, the sale of land and transfers of property are necessary. Mr. Whitford pointed out that the service of the competent realtor should be on such a high plane that he would have a thorough and adequate knowledge of values and of all the technicalities necessary to the conduct of the real estate business for the protection of his client and general public.

The speaker said that real estate men should not occupy such a confidential and important position in the business world without a proper education. He pointed out that the business and incidents relative to the proper conduct of the business, and that those persons engaged in the realty profession should have at heart the full consideration of the public good.

Responsibility Is Great.
"The responsibility of handling such transactions is great," Mr. Whitford said. The lecturer emphasized that in order to properly serve clients in the community real estate men should not only study the technicalities of their profession, but also closely follow and become interested in the affairs of the development and happenings of their city.

Mr. Whitford pointed out that real estate men not only were charged with the responsibility of transactions in the sale of real estate, but they also had the added responsibility of investing large sums of the public's money in real estate securities and therefore a thorough study of this angle is necessary.

The management of properties and estates also are entrusted to real estate men and, according to Mr. Whitford, if placed in the hands of untrained men result in saving in money and much more efficiency in handling of various property.

WARRENS NEW TEAM IN BOWLING LEAGUE
Succeed & Fairfax, Who Have Lost Out.

A pretty good bowler, as the Realtors Bowling league, J. Dallas Grady team has been first place for several weeks, but closely pursued by the teams of Boss & Phelps and Hedges & Middleton. Only three games separate the first and third place teams. On Wednesday night the high team set was rolled by Boss & Phelps, 1,538. The high team game rolled by Hedges & Middleton, 1,535.

Albert E. Landvoigt, of Hedges & Middleton, proved himself to be the superior bowler of the evening by rolling both high game and high set with scores of 134 and 355, respectively. Owing to the fact that there were not a sufficient number of men in the employ of Stone & Fairfax, who have rolled the team from the league. The vacancy has been filled by the office of M. & R. B. Warren, who have assumed the position and standing of Stone & Fairfax in the league. The new team is captained by Hugh Irey. It is expected, however, that the new team after it is accustomed to its surroundings will furnish real contest to the other teams. The standing of the teams follows:

Real Estate Board To Meet Wednesday
The Real Estate board will hold its monthly meeting in the Wardman Park hotel Wednesday, November 10, at 8:15 p. m. John F. Maury, president, will preside.

Maj. Carey A. Brown, engineer of the National Capital park and planning commission, will address the organization on the plans and visions of the commission for a greater and more beautiful Washington. His address is expected to be of much interest not only to the estate men but to the general public. Charles W. Elliot, 2d, city planner associated with the commission, also will be present. Reports will be read and business in regard to the affairs of the board will be transacted.

Women Execute Coup To Rule Belgian Town
Herck-la-Ville, Belgium, Nov. 6 (By A. P.)—Women, who have most to do with making the famous Linburg cheeses exported annually from this little commune, have taken over, by a coup d'etat, the entire administration of municipal affairs. A mayoress sits in the mayor's chair.

The women, after long planning, submitted a full list of candidates at the last election. So did the men. But the lords of creation sent in their list too late and the feminists won on a technicality.

PAPER ARCHITECTS ROUSE OPPOSITION OF CHURCH BUILDER

Philip H. Frohman Declares Designer of Beauty Must Be Master Workman.

EXPERIENCE WITH TOOLS
VITAL TO REAL SUCCESS

American Institute Praised by Designer in Charge of New Washington Cathedral.

We must get away from "paper" architects and "soft collar" architects if a real American architecture is to be developed, according to Philip Hubert Frohman in a statement made public by the American Institute of Architects.

"Some of our architectural intelligentsia and high-brows may not agree with me, but nevertheless I hold that an architect can not become full master of his profession as a fine art unless he is a master builder," said Mr. Frohman, who is the architect in charge of the Washington cathedral.

"To obtain this grasp he must be able to use a builder's tools. An important part of an architect's brain will remain undeveloped unless he has used the trowel, the square, plumb and level, the hammer, the saw, the plane, the chisel, the gauge, the forge, the anvil and the lathe.

"He must be able to design, to devise and superintend construction with understanding. An architect has a strong grip on a situation when he can grasp the workman's hand with a hand which has gained strength from using the same tools.

"More than this, an architect should have the physical training and experience in climbing ladders and scaffolds and going up a rope hand over hand, which was all part of a day's work for the medieval master mason. If an architect knows the kind of detail he wants and is going to obtain it on a building, he must be able to climb to any point on the job where the workman is able to go.

"In that admirable book entitled 'Beyond Architecture,' by Kingsley Porter, there is a fine chapter on 'Paper Architecture.' Now artistic ability on paper is a necessary qualification for an architect, but we must get away not only from 'paper architecture' but also from 'soft collar architecture.'

Tribute to Institute.
Then we will begin to have the real stuff once more—the kind of architecture we study about in architectural histories, the kind of architecture that thrills us when we travel abroad and the kind of architecture that is occasionally but very seldom produced by modern architects."

Mr. Frohman paid tribute to the work of the American Institute of Architects in raising professional standards, and asserted that still more could be done to reduce the activities of the "soft collar" man who "sometimes is an artist and can draw pretty pictures of buildings which are hard to build," but who is "not an architect."

"The most conspicuous achievements of modern architecture are the result of being obliged to express conditions and institutions that are the product of the age in which we live," continued Mr. Frohman.

"American architects have achieved some very remarkable and beautiful structures which are an expression of the wealth and power and pride of achievement and ambition of various financial institutions. In the design of such buildings as factories, office buildings, banks, railway stations and hotels, we lead the world. Some of our recent skyscrapers and industrial buildings are such admirable and vital works of art that in them we can see some prophecy of a real American architecture."

"We can also view with pride some of our recent civic architecture, and some of our memorials which have been erected in honor of the great and illustrious dead.

Can Not Invent Architecture.
"It is hopeless to talk about trying to invent a national American style of architecture. In the first place, real architecture is not an invention, but a work of creation and evolution. In the second place, our modern civilization has too many diverse and opposite qualities striving for expression to permit of its being exemplified by one architectural style."

"Not only is it impossible to achieve unity of architectural style under present circumstances, but such uniformity would be undesirable and inconsistent. We have to deal with not only different institutions, but with varied materials and forms of construction and with climatic conditions which are as different as those which influence the architecture of England and of Spain."

"What is possible, however, and what we should endeavor to accomplish, is to develop the most fitting forms of architectural expression for our various institutions and the most logical types of design for our methods of construction and climatic conditions."

"If we keep on doing this we are bound to develop new and living styles of American architecture. We may achieve architectural styles which in refined beauty and logic may equal or surpass the architecture of ancient Greece and medieval France and England."

"If our civilization becomes a purely materialistic one we may evolve an art which will equal that of ancient Greece and Rome, and we may have an architecture which will be more logical than that of the Renaissance."

"If we progress as a christian civilization and if our architects prove equal to the task of expressing our loftiest aspirations, it is possible that we may even transcend the architecture of the Middle Ages."

Art of Yodling Lost
By Swiss Shepherds

Lucerne, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Yodling is a lost art in Switzerland. Shepherds and farm hands look askance to American tourists who ask them to yodel. A party of tourists visiting Switzerland repeatedly asked natives for a yodel or two. None responded. They all looked puzzled.

Suddenly, just around a bend on the main road, came the thrilling notes of a perfect yodel and the visitors hurried to get a glimpse of the performer.
He proved to be a lusty American tourist.

WATER CAUSES DAMAGE TO VACANT BUILDINGS

Should Be Cut Off Before Freezing Weather Arrives, Crutchfield Says.

LOSSES ARE EMPHASIZED

"Every owner of vacant property should make a careful inspection to see that the water is cut off from the premises and the pipes drained before real freezing weather arrives," declares J. R. Crutchfield, sales manager for Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, in launching a campaign to prevent losses from frozen water pipes.

"There have been campaigns against fires and against other menaces to property," Mr. Crutchfield continues, "but few people realize that the losses from bursted water pipes amount to thousands of dollars in the greater Washington area alone."

"Property vacated in the summer is left with the water on full force. It does not happen to be occupied until after freezing weather sets in and the pipes freeze, or perhaps until the following spring. In the first instance, the first heat in the house discloses the leaks and the loss from replacing plaster, refurnishing woodwork and other similar damages amounts to considerable. If allowed to go until spring, the first thaw brings out the defects caused by frost and the house is ruined before the breaks are discovered."

"All property not now occupied should be inspected now and every precaution taken to see the water is shut entirely off from the building."

PROJECT UP RAPIDLY

K Street Building to House Firm and Office and Apartments.

Those who pass along K street between Sixteenth and Connecticut avenue may note the rapid progress being made on the new Douglass & Phillips building at 1621 K street northwest.

Douglass & Phillips, Inc., will occupy two floors of the structure, utilizing the others for business offices and apartments. On the main floor will be an unusual reception room with walnut-paneled walls and a floor of varicolored Met-towee stone—something new in Washington.

The main walls of the first floor will be finished in a special Morenci with walnut trim. Two conference rooms for clients will be provided. At the front of the building, just below the ornamental wrought-iron balcony over the main arch, will be a specially arranged series of flood lights set to throw the structure in bold bas-relief at night. More than 6,700 square feet of floor space will be available in addition to a full basement and other storage space.

Philippine Trade Increases.
The total value of imports and exports of the Philippine islands for the year 1925 reached $268,610,000, compared with $243,355,000 for 1924.

SNOWDEN ASHFORD OUTLINES EFFORTS TO REDUCE COSTS

Architect Declares Increase in Building Expenses Is Greatest Problem Today.

$5,000 HOUSE OF 1910
NOW INVOLVES $15,000

Capital Man Shows Methods of Economy Used in Construction of Apartment.

"The cost of building materials in the United States has advanced 150 per cent in the past fifteen years; mechanics' labor has increased 200 per cent in cost; houses that in 1910 cost $5,000 now cost nearly $15,000—and the end is not yet in sight. The tendency of building costs is to mount to higher and higher levels."

The above paragraph is taken from a recent paper by Snowden Ashford, for 25 years inspector of buildings and municipal architect for Washington, prepared for publication in a current periodical. It sets forth in succinct and concise language the greatest problem in home building today—cost—something architects have been striving desperately to overcome.

It has been suggested frequently by high officials that building construction should be standardized. A little thought will show that modern demands will not permit this. To standardize would mean regression; for there must be met constantly changed conditions of labor and materials. While improvements in the equipment of our homes have been forced upon the architects, the real construction, selection and assemblage of structural materials, with few exceptions—such as the "steel skyscraper," reinforced concrete and metal lath—are the same as they have been for centuries.

Repair Costs Increase. Anyway, standardization would not get at the problem of high costs in building, the first of which is by no means the least. Repairs and upkeep have increased in even greater proportion than the original cost, due to the inferior quality of some of the materials which builders are forced to use today. Fuel has increased in cost at about the same rate as the buildings until now it costs $150 per year to heat a home which formerly cost but $50 to heat. To save fuel costs the outer walls and roofs of our dwellings must be better insulated than they have been heretofore.

In reducing fuel costs by construction it might be well to note what many architects have done, particularly Mr. Ashford. He has introduced a wall of coke concrete which affords very efficient insulation and at the same time is suitable for most any architectural requirement. In two dwellings of about the same size erected by him in the same year—one of frame or wooden walls and the other of coke concrete—thirteen tons of coal were required to heat the former, while the concrete building required but seven tons.

The most recent example of this one architect's efforts to improve the construction of dwellings at a cost saving is to be found in an apartment house constructed by him recently. The building contains 42 apartments. It has a frontage of 115 feet and a depth of 135 feet and surrounds a large courtyard. The outer walls and court walls are built of coke concrete and brick and the court walls are constructed in a horizontal position, thus saving the expensive wooden forming and not requiring the hoisting of material to the top of the building.

Walls Are Monolithic.

These walls are poured on gypsum wall board, which adheres perfectly to the concrete, so that when the entire wall is raised to the vertical position by the powerful screw jacks working in perfect unison it has the wall finish in the gypsum wall board on the inside and the stucco or brick facing on the outside. The walls are reinforced with steel rods running vertically and horizontally through the concrete, and at the corner or angles these rods are laced or hooked together like a dovetailed box. Such walls are truly monolithic and do not depend on the mortar joints to hold them together. The strength and insulating qualities of such walls add security and comfort—and the cost is considerably less than a brick wall. This apartment house contains nearly half a million cubic feet and covers a ground area of about 14,000 square feet; yet there is not a single yard of ordinary plaster in the entire building.

In this apartment house the ceilings are covered with a fiber board made from the pulp of New Orleans molasses—a romantic story of discovery in itself. This board takes the place of plastering; it affords excellent insulation and weighs but one-half pound to the square foot. Roof leaks cause no permanent damage and do not impair the security of the ceiling. The color and texture of this board is very pleasing, especially when used in its natural color—a light buff or corn cob color. The saving in cost of construction is nearly one-half that of plaster.

The partitions in this apartment are six-inch studs covered with gypsum board put on horizontally and the entire space between the studs and the wall boards is filled with cinder concrete. This affords a reinforced bearing partition of strength and fire resistance much greater than terra-cotta blocks or plaster blocks set one upon another, and costs much less. The minor partitions are covered with gypsum wall board with the joints and nail heads filled with an accompanying preparation. Fine sandpaper has been used to smooth the joints and the surface of the board, making of it an excellent background for paint or paper. On such a background, if papered, it is advisable to put on unbleached muslin to cover the joints and keep the pointing material in place. If a heavy mottled or striped wall paper is used it is not necessary to back it up with muslin.

Waterproof Glue Used. The outer concrete or brick walls of this building has been covered first with a thick paper which is referred to by mechanics as "leather paper" or "rawhide." It is stiff enough to bridge over the joints or depressions in the brick work and thereby make a fairly smooth and uniform surface for the paint or wall paper.

This heavy paper on the outer wall is put on with a marine glue which the architect found in Boston, where it is used by many of the fishermen for the purpose of putting patches on their boats. This glue and paper stops the "sweating" or condensation so frequent in outer walls that tar and stripping are resorted to.

The bathroom and wainscoting in corridors and stairs are covered with a wall material similar to oilcloth and put on with waterproof glue so that it may be washed. This costs about the same as plastering, but has the advantage that it will not crack or fall off and effects a saving when necessary to tar the walls or strip them for plastering. It keeps dirt and dampness out of the building that inevitably occurs where plaster is used; also the carpenters may put on the trim and lay the floors at the same time that the paper is being put on. This saving of time amounts to a great deal to the builder and the owner.

NATIONAL GROUPS STEP IN PROGRESS OF BUILDING PLANS

Centralized Institutions Which Failed Taught Lesson of Systematic Saving.

PREPARED THE GROUND FOR PRESENT GROWTH

Competition Caused Foundation of Leagues Among Local Associations.

By C. CLINTON JAMES,
Chairman of the Federal Legislative Committee of the U. S.
League of Local Building and Loan Associations.

Last week I tried to point out the fundamental difference between the two general classes of financial institutions in this country, to wit:
The capitalized class, represented by the national banks and the State banks and trust companies, and the mutual class, represented by the mutual savings banks and the building and loan associations. I also discussed the different plans of operation, beginning with the original, the terminating plan, then the serial plan and then the permanent plan. Up to this point the discussion had to do with the local building and loan associations.

In the later eighties there appeared in different parts of the United States another class of building and loan associations, which were known as Nationals.
These associations had headquarters at some central point and employed agents to canvass the entire country to sell their stock, and for the purpose of reimbursing these agents, charged a membership fee, usually of $1 per share. Along with the payment of dues to these associations there was a fixed payment of so much per share to an expense fund and this expense fund formed a fat source of revenue for the officers and managers of the association. Wherever these agents could sell enough shares to warrant them in doing so, they would organize local boards whose business it was to sell more shares and to pass on the applications for loans that were desired in that community. The agents of these Nationals held out glittering prospects of wealth to be easily and quickly acquired and many a community was literally set on fire by their promises.

However, it was not many years before the impossibility of doing a

INSURANCE INVESTMENTS IN MORTGAGES INCREASE

Great Companies Show Appreciation of Real Estate Securities Among Assets.

TOTAL REACHES BILLIONS

The value of real estate mortgages as a stable and remunerative investment is evidently appreciated by the great life insurance companies of the nation who are constantly increasing their investments in this type of security. Constantly under strict supervision by State and Federal officials in the handling of the vast sums of money placed into their hands by the general public the life insurance companies of the country are paying a tribute to the nation's realty field in their increasing purchase of mortgage bonds.

While the admitted assets of life insurance companies in the United States have had a growth of 69 per cent since 1919, their investments in mortgage loans have grown 130 per cent, according to tables showing totals of such investment given by Lester E. Wurfel, assistant secretary of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., before the annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, which has just been concluded at Richmond, Va.

At the end of the year 1925 there was approximately $11,178,199,000 of legal reserve life insurance in force in United States life companies, Mr. Wurfel stated, a sum which represents about one-fifth of our national wealth. Indicating the trend of the investment policy of those companies more and more toward placing their funds in real estate mortgages, Mr. Wurfel gave

Women Athletes

Want Association

Berlin, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—
Women athletes have started a campaign for equal rights. They want a woman's athletic association, subsidized by the government and run entirely by women. Men have such an organization, they say, but it also supervises amateur sports of women. A separate body, cooperating with the men whenever necessary, it is believed, would more effectively promote athletics among women.

SIX MODERN HOTELS
OFFER WIDE RANGE OF HOME FACILITIESMaddux, Marshall, Moss &
Mallory Chain Caters to All Demands.DEPARTMENT MANAGER
EXPLAINS AIMS OF FIRMDeclares Giving Public What It Wants Is Secret of Real Success.

Giving the public what it wants at a price it can afford to pay is the real secret of success in any line of business, according to James T. Howard, manager of the hotel department of Maddux, Marshall, Moss & Mallory, Inc., who operate a chain of six hotels in Washington. "It was this idea that enabled Maj. H. C. Maddux and his associates to make such a wonderful success of Battery Park, Ed. Smoor and Garrett Park," Mr. Howard explained, "and when the firm decided to acquire a string of hotels in Washington, Maj. Maddux saw no reason for any change in policy."

"As a result we can probably furnish a wider range of hotel accommodations today than any other organization in the Capital. We have the Cairo, modern in every particular, centrally located and still away from the noise and confusion of downtown, with beautiful furnishings, spacious rooms, a beautiful lobby and everything that goes to make up a high-class hotel. It caters to tourists and transients as well as resident guests."

"In the Martinique we have the best word in a small, modern hotel, every room equipped with bath, every possible hotel facility that can be had and located right downtown without being directly in the noise center."

"The Arlington, located on Vermont avenue, within a few minutes of the heart of the business and theater districts, offers unequalled facilities for the traveling public, tourists and theatrical profession."

"For those who seek exclusiveness, we have the Fairfax, Massachusetts avenue at Twenty-first street, a location that can never be duplicated for those who want a high class apartment hotel, with all modern facilities."

"Tilden Hall, out on Connecticut avenue, offers apartment hotel facilities in a location removed from the downtown district and still in reach of the center of the city, through rapid transportation facilities, in a few minutes."

"Our latest acquisition, the Colonial, is the only real modern American plan hotel in Washington catering to families at a reasonable rate."

Changes in Realty Laws
Urged by 17 ConventionsState-Wide Regional Planning Contemplated by New York Association—Code of Ethics Bearing on Subdivisions Being Formulated in California.

Legislative changes of a wide scope involving real estate were advocated during the coming year by the seventeen State associations of real estate boards whose annual conventions were held during October.

A compilation of the program set for themselves by the various State real estate organizations at these meetings has just been made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Translation of permissive legislation into fact in regard to State-wide regional planning is undertaken by the New York State Association of Real Estate Boards. A statewide code of ethics governing the planning and sale of subdivisions is being formed by the California Real Estate association's home-builders and subdivisions division. The California association in its annual convention also adopted the report of its appraisal committee, laying down a plan of uniform appraisals of real estate for that State.

These actions are typical of the advancement planned in the year immediately ahead through leadership of real estate bodies toward a better organized community growth and toward the enforcement of high standards of business practice in real estate, the national association's analysis shows.

The New York association will put its strength behind the creation in every city and county in the State of regional planning boards for the control of the development of unbuild areas surrounding large cities. Such boards were authorized by a recent enactment of the New York legislature. The California actions look (1) to the setting up of standards for the development of subdivisions which would insure the completion of promised improvements and protect the public against misleading advertising statements in the sale of residence lots, and (2) to a greater use of real estate appraisals, especially in court actions, through the development of systematic unity in methods under which they are issued.

Real estate license laws will be introduced before the legislatures of seven States at their coming sessions according to the platforms adopted by the State real estate associations. Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas, and Arkansas are the States in which organized real estate boards have taken as a first objective for their State the enactment of a State real estate license law.

North Carolina realtors are studying the benefits of a license law for their State. Illinois realtors in resolutions passed at their annual convention approved the introduction of an educational test for applicants for a real estate broker's license in that State.

Michigan and Colorado have approved a strengthening of license laws now in force in their States. Tax adjustment is made a principal issue in legislative programs adopted by State real estate associations during the coming year.

The Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards is strongly supporting a proposed amendment to the Illinois constitution which would permit classification of property for tax purposes. This amendment will come before the electorate on November 2.

The New York State association will continue its campaign to abolish the direct tax on real estate, and will study the feasibility of taking the income tax as a basis for State taxation. It urges every local board to make a thorough survey of the tax exempt real property in its territory.

The Ohio realtors have recommended themselves to a State amendment which would modernize the State tax system. They have declared against the enactment of a direct State tax levy as being no solution of the present tax problem. Texas realtors will work for a State program for tax reduction. The Arkansas Association of Real Estate Boards has asked for modification of the State inheritance tax.

A State advertising campaign, to be financed by the State itself, is proposed for Michigan, Kansas, Texas and Arkansas. Ohio realtors will themselves carry on such a campaign in a special week to be known as "Ohio week." Oklahoma realtors will join in a projected $675,000 State advertising campaign under a special organization to be known as Oklahomans, Inc.

State-wide plans for conducting education in real estate were approved by the State real estate associations of New York, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, North Carolina, Colorado and Arkansas.

Changes in banking laws and mortgage laws are held necessary in several States to facilitate the free flow of capital into real estate investment. The New York association, for example, recommended to its legislative committee action looking toward a change in the banking law to allow savings banks to loan as high as 75 per cent of the value of private homes. It favored a change in the statutes relating to the laws of estates, and the abolishment of the right of dower and courtesy. The Iowa Real Estate association favors passage of an amendment to the State's present mechanics' lien law which would limit the time of filing mechanics liens to 90 days as against purchasers, irrespective of the date the property is purchased, and asks legislation to enable Iowa insurance companies to loan their funds on city real estate up to 60 per cent of the valuation of the security, under such rules as the insurance commissioner may prescribe.

Ohio realtors have gone on record as advocating a resubmission of the proposed amendment to the State constitution which will permit cities to charge in whole or in part to the cost of appropriating property for public purposes against benefited property. Realtors of Oklahoma ask for a State law expressly authorizing zoning and planning ordinances already enacted or to be enacted in cities of that State. Tennessee realtors will concentrate on a membership campaign.

Plans for the organization of a central office for the listing of farm lands over the whole State of Illinois were presented at the annual convention of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards.

Extensive State plans for highway improvement were endorsed by State associations of Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. The Iowa plan involves $1,000,000 bond issue for hard surfacing primary roads.

FIRST UNIT OF ACACIA LIFE BUILDING PROGRAM

Architect's drawing of the first unit of the building program of the Acacia Mutual Life Association of Washington. This ten-story structure will be erected at First street and Indiana avenue northwest, and will cost approximately $1,000,000. The five-year program of construction comprehends the outlay of $2,500,000.

NATIONAL GROUPS STEP IN PROGRESS OF BUILDING PLANS

safe business and long range was demonstrated and one State after another began to enact restrictions for the purpose of barring out associations from other States. Where such restrictions were not enacted the Nationals finally fell to pieces of their own weight. It was found that each local board was anxious to get as much money as possible from headquarters to loan in its own community. Property was appraised at too high a value, borrowers defaulted, foreclosures followed and the associations found themselves loaded down with undesirable real estate. Liquidation became unavoidable and today I do not know of a single National association in existence in our country. It must be said to their credit, however, that they brought prominently before the American people the advantages of a system of finance in which regular systematic saving formed an important part and also the advantage of a loan which should extend over a series of years and be payable in small stated installments. These two features constitute the foundation upon which all legitimate building and loan associations must base their business.

One more item should be placed to the credit of the National associations and that is that their competition compelled the locals to unite and organize for purposes of self-defense. It was during the ascendancy of the Nationals that building association leagues began to be formed in the several States. The Pennsylvania league dates from 1879. Other State leagues were formed shortly after that time, and in 1893 the United States league came into existence. The primary object in the formation of these leagues was to secure legislation favorable to legitimate building and loan interests and the results have more than justified their existence.

All of these leagues have had a wholesome influence on the associations and also on the public, and many of them have become powerful factors for the welfare of the associations. Complete building and loan codes have been enacted by their aid in a number of States and hostile legislation has in many instances been defeated. These leagues afford an opportunity for a comparison of methods and for an interchange of ideas that would not otherwise be possible, and in every way their influence has been on the side of progress.

Coincident with the formation of these leagues and often as a result of their efforts came a more or less complete system of State supervision. In nearly all of the States where the associations have become at all prominent stated annual reports are required and some form of official examination is established. In some States an institution is examined only when complaint is made or when there is reason to suspect that something is wrong with it. The better custom is, however, to have such examinations made at least annually, and in most States annual examinations are now required. While it cannot be claimed that such examination is absolutely preventive of fraud and dishonesty, there can be no doubt that they render such practices more difficult and afford a very considerable measure of protection to the public.

As the National associations passed away the local associations began to grow. Thirty years ago there were but few associations in the United States whose assets reached a million dollars. Today the $5,000,000 association is so common as to attract no particular notice and the business of the smaller associations show a steady increase, which will at no distant day land many of them in the $5,000,000 class. We have other associations of considerable size, some of them with from ten to forty-five millions each of assets, but it should be no means be inferred that all of our associations are of this class. In many sections the neighborhood association still exists where the members meet at stated intervals, pay their weekly dues and have a combined social and business gathering at which the affairs of the society are disposed of. Many of these small associations are doing most excellent

ACACIA LIFE PLANS $2,500,000 BUILDINGS NEAR STATION PLAZA

$1,000,000 Unit Will Be Begun at Once at First Street and New Jersey Avenue.

Work soon will begin on the first unit of the home-office buildings of the Acacia Mutual Life Association of Washington, to be erected at First street and Indiana avenue northwest, according to an announcement by officials of the company.

It is stated that the entire building program contemplates the expenditure of approximately $2,500,000, with the first unit, a ten-story structure of granite and limestone, to be erected at a cost of $1,000,000. Hoggson Bros., of New York, will supervise the construction work. Present plans call for completion of the building program within the next five years.

The amazing development of the Acacia Mutual Life Association, and particularly during the last two decades, has many times emphasized the need for more adequate housing facilities for the home office of this national Masonic life association, and the history of that period is one of repeated outgrowth of cramped quarters into larger and more commodious ones. Each new move on the part of the Acacia was thought sufficient to take care of present and future needs, and each time expanding business made still more space essential.

When William Montgomery, now president, was elected secretary in 1893, the two small rooms in a building at 419 Eleventh street northwest, then used by the association, were enough for current needs. However, in 1904, the home office was moved as a result of increasing business to the Huyler work and in their way are just as worthy of confidence and support as the larger institutions. Including the entire United States, the aggregate assets of our 12,000 associations now reach a total of about $6,000,000,000 and a membership of 10,000,000 and this total is increasing at the rate of $600,000,000 a year.

(This is the second of a series of articles to be written by C. Clinton Jones, exclusively for The Washington Post, and to be published each Sunday in the First Estate Section, outlining the birth, history and evolution of the American Building and Loan Association.)

building, at Twelfth and F streets northwest, and in three years these quarters were outgrown, and the association did business from the bank building at Twelfth and G streets northwest. Once more, in 1911, the association was, by virtue of an expanding clientele, forced to take additional space, and this then was acquired in the new Masonic temple.

Six years later the building at 1621 H street was purchased to take care of the Acacia's growing housing problem, and a few years after that an addition was built to the structure. In 1921 the Acacia leased half of the second floor of the Homer building, and at the present time the company occupies all of the second floor, part of the third, half of the fourth and much of the basement. This aggregates about 59,000 feet of floor space, and the Acacia's business is so great that this large area is entirely too small for its present purposes.

With the initiation of the broad building program outlined, officials of the Acacia Mutual Life Association believe that they have anticipated the needs of the company for many years to come. The plan now underway is a flexible one, and will be adapted to the growing needs of the association. Upon completion of the first unit, a ten-story fireproof structure, equipped with every modern device and convenience, the five-year program will have been marked by the erection of an enduring monument.

The site for the group is one of the finest in the city for its purpose and its natural surroundings are of increasing beauty. Funds have been appropriated by Congress for the construction of a parkway from Union station plaza to the Peace monument. The new Acacia buildings will face this boulevard on the east. According to those who have made a study of the subject, this group of insurance buildings will be among the finest in the country and located in a spot comparable to but few in any of the cities of the nation.

Officers of the Acacia Mutual Life Association, in addition to Mr. Montgomery, include J. Harry Cunningham, vice president; J. P. Yort, secretary and treasurer; Charles E. Baldwin, assistant treasurer; and Dr. John B. Nichols, medical director. Norman E. Ellsworth is superintendent of agents.

Directors include T. Jeff Adams, W. L. Andrews, Charles B. Baldwin, Charles Cyrus Coombs, William K. Cowden, Paul B. Cromelin, J. Harry Cunningham, J. Whiting Estes, E. C. Graham, William T. One of the opportunities which come only rarely, the chance to buy a luxuriously equipped residence far under its ordinary market value.

It has such desirable features as an automatic electric refrigerating machine, an incinerator for rubbish and garbage, automatic water heater, two beautiful tiled baths and shower, a glassed-in sleeping porch in addition to four regular sleeping rooms, cozy breakfast room, cedar closets and cedar storage room, sun parlor, a fireplace on each floor, a workroom in the basement, and three servant's rooms with extra baths.

The house and two-car garage are of substantial construction, stucco over hollow tile. The upkeep is negligible and the fire risk is low. The fixtures are in harmony with the rest of the house in quality and design. The lot is large, 125 feet on Connecticut avenue, 135 feet on Quincy street. ## MODERN BUILDERS SEEK ELIMINATION OF USELESS NOISE

Demand for Quiet in Business Building and Homes Presents Important Problem.

PLASTER IS RELIED UPON FOR SOUNDPROOF WALLS

Insulation Necessary to Prevent Spread of Racket From Room to Room.

In this day of concerted and intensive effort and the demand for the highest efficiency from employees, one of the problems of modern building is the elimination of unnecessary noises. This applies no less to private homes and apartment houses than to office buildings, stores and other places where large numbers of workers are employed. When a force is under constant pressure during working hours, even though noises are reduced to a minimum, members of that force must have quiet and rest during the hours they are at home. That quiet probably adds as much to efficiency during the period of actual employment as the quiet which surrounds them while at work.

Executives have found that quiet surroundings increase efficiency, and to that end noise preventing devices, such as noiseless typewriters, noiseless switchboards, quiet telephones, etc., are being used in many offices. Scientists assert that noises register on the brain the same as thought and that constant noises are just as fatiguing as mental work.

Must Combat Noises.

In spite of precautions, certain noises will always be prevalent in occupied buildings, the degree being dependent upon the number and concentration of occupants and their activities. In the development of the modern structure there is the problem of combating these sounds. Therefore, the subject of insulation is important and calls for skill on the part of the designer in selecting material for wall covering to give the best results.

The design of an auditorium or room, both as to size and structural shape, has much to do with the acoustics. After an architect has done his best to perfect the design for acoustical properties, he still has need of a wall covering that will have a pleasing appearance, as well as one that will support a decoration and not interfere with its design.

In building any structure it is evident that plaster is highly important. It may or may not be pleasing in appearance, and it may be so hard and dense that the natural noises of the structure are intensified, the confusion of sound, as well as its transmission through the walls, may be so marked as to be disquieting to the occupants. The privacy of a home is often annulled because of the transmission of sound through the walls which fail to fulfill the purpose for which they were built.

From time to time there have appeared on the market different insulations for floors, and walls, designed to relieve bad acoustical conditions. Some have been successful and others have not. Many of them are not durable, are often inflammable, and do not take a decoration that is lasting.

England's Nobility Accepts U. S. Styles

(By the Associated Press.) England's nobility accepts its fashions from America as well as Paris. Lady Rosemary Bootle-Wilbraham, the young sister of the Earl of Lathom, appeared at the Embassy club dressed in an American petal-skirted frock of pink, open-work embroidery. The background was a black velvet cloak. Around her neck was a ring of square diamonds with a big pearl drop.

AURORA HILLS DEALER PRAISES HOMES EXHIBIT

Show Will Increase Demand for Real Estate, Declares
Henry C. Morris.

STIRRED PUBLIC INTEREST

When asked his opinion of the Better Homes and Building exposition, recently held by the Washington Real Estate Board, Henry C. Morris, president of Aurora Hills Homes, Inc., said:

"The exposition proved its usefulness because of its popularity, as evidenced by the large and interested crowds attending it and the critical inspection given the exhibits."

"The few exhibits staged by homebuilders who were apparently glad of the opportunity to obtain information on a competitive basis, and compare the various answers to their specific questions."

"The presence of numerous exhibits of household appliances which tend to make homekeeping a pleasure, instead of drudgery, not only served the purpose of advantageously advertising particular devices but also intensified the atmosphere of home ownership in its most attractive aspect."

"We found, too, that many people were interested in Arlington county—or some other general locality, and after their desire for general information was satisfied, they were eager to be told of our specific developments" in Chevy Chase, D. C., and Aurora Hills, Va.

"In general, the attendance was composed of those who came for information and not to be amused. The competitive nature of the exhibits was shown by the evident crystallization of ideas and desires into definite action toward the purchase of property and equipment. The attractive literature and samples distributed will undoubtedly lend emphasis and weight to the future newspaper advertising of the exhibitors and I have no doubt that many a sale made in the next six months will have its inception in the exposition."

"Certainly, we were more than satisfied with the result of our opportunity to display our homes under the same roof with other homebuilders and we are looking forward to that same opportunity as a yearly thing. Even though Aurora Hills is only '15 minutes from F street,' it is well worth while to bring a cross-section into the heart of the city, where homebuyers can see it on the same floor with comparative offerings."

Asherton, Tex., Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Mrs. R. S. Conly's bid to fame lays in conquering a 183-acre farm on the outskirts of Asherton.

Last year she raised 100 acres of spinach and 50 acres of tomatoes, besides a good crop of grapes and seedless oranges and grapefruit. Although the winter garden district has an average of 25 to 30 inches of rainfall annually, ample for ordinary needs, Mrs. Conly has irrigated her farm. She values her homestead at $300 an acre.

OIL BURNERS POPULAR IN HIGHER-CLASS HOMES

Called Attractive Additions and Are Often Included in Equipment.

IS PUT IN BY TRAINED MEN

A large number of the new homes being built in Washington ranging in prices from $12,000 and up are being equipped with oil burners by either the builder or the purchaser, according to C. S. Watson, president of the A. B. C. Oil Burner Co. Builders of select homes are fast realizing that an oil burner is an essential and attractive addition to the home and are including the same as part of the equipment.

The experimental stage has passed in the oil burning industry, and by very little investigation the buyer can ascertain a standard, well-established burner.

In selecting an oil burner the first thing you should make sure of is that the burner has been on the market for several years, and if the same has proven satisfactory, then, most important of all, investigate the local company handling the same to see if their organization is capable of properly installing and servicing the burner. This is most important, as any burner, no matter how good it may be, will not be satisfactory unless you receive good service promptly.

The oil burner business is a highly specialized business, and mechanics must be thoroughly trained before they are allowed to install and service burners, otherwise you have unquestionably an unsatisfactory installation.

spaced about twice as far apart as ordinary wooden joists. These steel joists alone would carry the floor loads, but to add to the safeguard against fire a light cinder concrete arch is put in between the beams to protect both the beams and the flooring.

Cinder concrete, made of soft coal cinders from powerhouse boilers where they have passed through a temperature of 1,500 degrees or more, is better fireproofing than gravel concrete. It is well known that a concrete made of limestone will go to pieces under temperatures reached in a house fire, and all sandstones, limestones, including marble and slate and granite will crumble under fire. Hollow clay will crack and fall to pieces. If highly heated, when a stream of water hits it.

Mr. Ashford concludes his paper with a belief that half of the annual fire loss of the country—$600,000,000 annually—could be saved if the architects would adopt some safeguards, such as those suggested here. Fire prevention through fireproof construction is the best prevention in the world. Besides the elimination of all unnecessary woodwork in homes as an added precaution against fire, architects should take into consideration the rapidly dwindling forests of the country and the growing necessity of hauling lumber from Canada and the Pacific coast for use on the Atlantic side.

In conclusion it is safe to say that the efforts of the architect have been, and will continue to be, directed to the introduction of new methods of construction and the use of materials in the most economical way, to hold down the advancing high cost of homes.

NEW HOME GROUP IN CLEVELAND PARK

Walter A. Dunigan Completes 12 Semidetached Houses; Several Sold.

A group of twelve new semidetached houses have recently been completed by Walter A. Dunigan in North Cleveland Park at Thirty-eighth and Veazey streets northwest. The houses are of colonial and Spanish architecture and present a very distinctive appearance. The lots have a frontage of 47 and 35 feet, with brick garage, and there are concrete streets and alleys. These houses represent the first of an extensive operation to be erected in this popular subdivision by Mr. Dunigan, and construction work will be immediately started on twelve additional houses. Mr. Dunigan also reports the completion of the Star modern homes at Fifth and Madison streets northwest, in Marietta Park, and has under construction fifteen houses of similar community groups in this same operation. Recent purchasers in these operations include Gilmore W. Thompson, Dr. L. C. Brooks and James B. Sullivan.

$7,000,000,000 IS SPENT IN CONSTRUCTION IN 1926

Ten Months' Building Figures Exceed Those That Broke Record Last Year.

OCTOBER RECORDS GAIN

More than seven billion dollars already have been spent this year for construction in the United States. The volume of building operations financed by this enormous expenditure during the first 10 months of 1926 is greater than the volume registered during the corresponding period of last year, when all previous records were broken, according to statistics compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America.

Despite a decrease of 10 per cent from the September volume as noted last month, the total for the first 10 months of 1926 stands 1 1/2 per cent above the corresponding 1925 figure.

The amount of construction work handled during October was exactly twice the figure registered as the monthly average in 1913. A study of the statistics shows that no decrease in the volume of construction has extended through more than one month. This fact is being viewed as remarkable in view of the high peak figure set last July when all records for a single month were broken. Following a decrease in August, operations again increased in volume in September.

October operations stand at the 290 points mark on scale which places the 1913 monthly average on the 100 point basis. The average for 1925 was 176.

Used, But Not Abused. Such is the description most aptly applied to ninety per cent of the Used Cars advertised in The Post's classified pages. Look over the lists today. There are bargains aplenty to meet more than half way your price demands.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Mrs. Conrad Young, of Chevy Chase, has returned from the seventh Girl Scout conference of region three, which includes Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District. The conference was held at the Woman's City club in the William Penn hotel, Pittsburgh, October 27 and 28. The session was opened by an address of welcome to region three by Mrs. Vance McCormick, of Harrisburg, regional chairman and vice president of the national board, followed by "Welcome to Pittsburgh" by Mrs. Edward Vase Babcock, commissioner.

There were more than 100 delegates present at the luncheon, guests of Mrs. James H. Hammond, deputy commissioner, Pittsburgh. Mrs. Babcock was hostess at the dinner given in the William Penn hotel.

The second day of the conference was divided into two groups for discussion and practical instruction. Group one was for council members, in charge of Mrs. Edey, who gave instruction in the duties and activities of local councils and community committees. Group two was for Lone Troop leaders whose activities are not under council supervision.

Miss Julia Williamson, local director of Philadelphia, entertained by telling stories. An impromptu playlet was presented, based on the story of Hiawatha.

The National staff reported that the outstanding advancement of the year was the gift of Mr. V. Everett Macey, of the camp—Edith Macey—given to the Girl Scouts in memory of his wife, who served on the National staff. It was there that the world camp was held last May, when representatives from 31 countries tented together. Mrs. Edey gave an account of that encampment, when 3,100 women assembled.

During the last year 420 leaders were trained at Edith Macey, representing 35 States. At least one delegate will be sent from Washington next spring. Her expenses will be paid by a fee of $1 charged by the local director for training courses.

Duties of the local director, field captain, local councils, commissioners and deputy commissioners were outlined. Every Girl Scout assembly of kindred spirit is blessed with the "give and take" of a conference, where ideas are exchanged. Such a coming together of leaders from dozens of councils radiates enthusiasm, and is imbued with the three fundamentals of scouting—education, recreation and inspiration. Washington anticipates housing the delegates of the next regional conference in the spring.

Mrs. Young has been in scouting seven years, the entire time as a captain, and the last several years as a member of the local council. Her troop in Chevy Chase was so large it was necessary to divide into two troops, one of which, No. 19, she is captain. Mrs. Young's service to scouting has been recognized twice, once with a medal of merit and once with a thanks badge.

Headquarters Notes.

Next Saturday and Sunday there will be a brown owl powwow at the Girl Scouts' Little house, 1750 New York avenue. The program is being arranged by Mrs. Adolphus Staton, and the training will be conducted by Mrs. Staton and Miss Julia Williamson, of Philadelphia. The first meeting will be held Saturday from 5 to 8:30 p. m. On Sunday the meeting will be held from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 1:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. This course is open to any one 18 years old or over who is interested in Brownies.

Miss Evelina Gleaves, local director, will give two training courses for advanced leaders, one in the morning from 10 to 12 o'clock, on six consecutive Fridays; one in the evening from 6 to 8 o'clock for six consecutive Tuesdays. For either class the fee will be $1. The program to be covered includes tenderfoot, second class and first class, giving changes in the handbook and new methods of teaching.

They will be conducted in the Little house. Next Friday evening at 7 o'clock there will be a District of Columbia court of awards at the Central High school. Parents and friends of scouts are invited. The Drum and Bugle corps meets at the Little house each Monday from 4 to 5 p. m.

Girl Scout Notes.

Troop 2 held a meeting Friday night.

Troop 13 has been concentrating on rehearsals for the operetta, "The Rivals," which they presented at the Madison school yesterday. The principal parts were taken by Anna Garrett, Lucy Cline, Betty Cline, Marion Irvin, Mary Cline, Jane Cline, Sarah Pope and Mary Hoskins. Ellen Anderson is troop scribe.

Troop 16, Mrs. Julia Thomas, captain, formed new patrols. Martha Landerson, Virginia Mikeell and Virginia Pettit are patrol leaders, and Zula Thomas, Dorothy Bates and Anna Wester are corporals. The scouts worked out a patrol competition merit system, and patrols are to take charge of the meetings in turn. Anna Wester is troop scribe.

Wildrose Troop 18 has been reviewing tenderfoot and second class tests.

There were classes in tenderfoot and second class, and a hike was planned for this week.

Daisy Troop 26 held a meeting recently with Second Lieut. Ruth Hunt in charge. Plans for Girl Scout week were made. After patrol corners, six of the older girls filled out "Interest blanks" for national headquarters. On Girl Scout Sunday the troop attended the services in the Fourth Presbyterian church. On Monday, "good cheer day," members of the troop entertained the members of the Presbyterian home, on Newton street northwest. The following week, after opening exercises and patrol corners, Lieut. Dorothy Stubbs taught the game, "radio."

Ruth Hunt and Estelle Henderson assisted the Near East Relief Friday afternoon. Saturday Cary and Estelle Henderson passed the economist test at the Little house. Lois Hall is troop scribe.

Troop 24 held a meeting at the Jefferson Junior High school. At the meeting of the court of honor plans were made for a Halloween party. Alice Donohoo took charge of the homemaker's badge, while Capt. Vaux took charge of the second-class badges.

At the meeting of Troop 28 Thursday of Girl Scout good cheer week the scouts visited the House of Mercy.

Dorothy Waller is scribe of Troop 27, which meets in Woodside, Md. Several of the older girls filled in the questionnaire for national headquarters. The court of honor, patrol corners, inspection, opening ceremony and song comprised the meeting.

Troop 47, of which Mrs. William Peters is captain, and Margaret James scribe, gave a Halloween party at the Chevy Chase school.

Troop 53 reviewed the first aid instructions given them the previous week. In addition to that, there was a flag ceremony, compass games and at the good-night circle, Sarah Clarke, acting second lieutenant of the troop, read a story written by herself.

Troop 59 conducted a review of tenderfoot questions and afterward took up signaling, using the international Morse code. These troops planned a museum hike for today.

Troop 62 met last week in the Cleveland Park Congregational church under the direction of Lieut. Doris McKay. The troop gave a Halloween party the previous week.

Troop 12 gave a Halloween party Friday night in the Calvary M. E. church. The girls and officers were in costume and masked. A prize was given for the best and most unique costume. The party had been planned by the patrol leaders and officers.

Troop 42 meets in the chapel of the Presbyterian church at Chevy Chase circle. The troop has 29 registered scouts and 3 probationers. The largest percentage are second class. Miss Virginia Spear is first lieutenant; Miss Ann Ashley, second lieutenant; Mrs. Conrad H. Young, captain, and Helen Bittinger, scribe. Patrol leaders are Vivian Essex, Sarah Jumper, Meta Scantlin and Emily Dunbar.

Convertible Haircut Is Boyish or Girlish

Hollywood, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Helene Costello has a convertible haircut; boy if she wants it so, and girl otherwise. To go with this coiffure, she has originated a hat band comb case. The band has a slit in it which pockets a small comb. Whenever she desires to comb her locks, or change her coiffure she slips the comb from her hat band, and the hair-dressing act begins. The hat is a floppy felt.

Attractions in the Amusement World

OLD STAND

"No, No, Nanette," musical comedy favorite here, will return to the National tonight for an engagement of one week, with Louise Groody and Hal Skelly heading the cast. In the company are several players that supported Miss Groody, who created the title role, through the record runs of the piece in Chicago, Boston and New York, when the dainty comedienne was sole star.

Occasionally it can be said of a musical comedy that it is musical. Perhaps a tune or two will gain it such a reputation. In "No, No, Nanette" the first and foremost thing to catch the attention and hold it is the music. For instance, there is "Tea for Two" and "I Want to Be Happy," each with an exhilarating lilt and rhythm that have not yet been matched in the scope of musical comedy. These dance songs afford rare opportunity for Miss Groody and Mr. Skelly to cavort with all that reckless abandon which developed their popularity in "The Night Boat" a few years ago and which has marked their work in famous successes since.

Frustrated love is subordinate in "No, No, Nanette" to the story of a husband in hot water. Jimmie Smith, the philandering husband, is much annoyed because his wife will not spend money fast enough to suit him. He has made a fortune selling Bibles and accepts every chance of helping less fortunate persons. Especially does his heart melt when approached by pretty ladies in distress. Happiness is his motto. So, he takes under his financial wing Betty from Boston, Winnie from Washington and Flora from Frisco and sets them up in establishments of their own. His intent is innocent enough, but when Mrs. Jimmie discovers the existence of the gold-digging ladies she starts something that is mighty hard for Jimmie and his lawyer friend to stop. Little Nanette, a ward in the Smith household, becomes involved in the rapidly accumulating complications and enormously humorous situations develop.

The cast includes Frank Allworth, Evelyn Darville, Dorothy Waterman, John McCauley, Eva Mae Francis, Edna Whistler, Gladys Yates and Beatrice Lee.

A Poli Production.
This week's attraction at the Gayety theater departs from the usual offering of Columbia burlesque. It is "Aloma of the South Seas," a love drama of the tropics, the scenes being on an island on the south seas. Mr. S. Z. Poli, head of the Poli Theatrical Enterprises, is the producer of this attraction, his second venture in producing for the Columbia burlesque circuit. His first was "Around the World Revue," which played an engagement several weeks ago. James Thatcher, well known in Washington as the former manager of Poli's theater, is presenting "Aloma of the South Seas." This show is in three big acts, with a cast that includes native dancing girls, also native music, and a hurricane scene claimed to be the most sensational and realistic ever presented on any stage.

Louise Groody &
Hal Skelly in
"No No Nanette" NationalRICH ROMANCE
THE METRO

The week of screen and stage entertainment to be inaugurated this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Crandall's Metropolitan theater will boast two major features. The screen attraction will be First National's picturization of Owen Davis' stage success, "Forever After," in which the costar roles are played by Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes and the stage offering will be contributed by "Ukulele Ike," famous singing comedian of the phonograph records, radio and the musical stage, whose real name is Cliff Edwards.

The auxiliary features will embrace a new issue of the Metropolitan world survey, added short reels and musical settings by the Metropolitan Symphony, under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin and on week days by the Metropolitan Ramblers under the leadership of Milton Davis.

"Forever After" possesses that intangible quality of "audience appeal." The major movement of the plot traces the development of a delightfully romantic love story between the daughter of rich parents and a poor lad struggling to work his way through college. The characters are finely drawn and the action is diversified beyond that of most pictures. The early scenes of the play depict a real football game in the Pasadena Rose bowl at Pasadena, Calif., with a huge crowd in attendance and all the excitement of such a game convincingly reflected on the screen.

The later episodes deal with the phases of the great war and briefly place upon the screen as realistic reproduction of that titanic struggle as for example made "The Big Parade," the nearest approach to actuality that the screen has seen. "Ukulele Ike" will be seen and heard standing behind the Hawaiian instrument which has done much to add to his fame in a series of current song hits which he will render in his own distinctive fashion.

2ND WEEK

Robert B. Mantell and his talented costar, Genevieve Hamper, will hold the second week of their Shakespearean festival, opening tomorrow night at the Washington auditorium in the modern "Hamlet."

The rest of the repertoire will be: "As You Like It," Tuesday night; "Romeo and Juliet," Wednesday matinee (there will be no performance on Wednesday night); "King Lear," Thursday night; modern "Hamlet" will be repeated for a special matinee Friday; "Julius Caesar," Friday night; "The Merchant of Venice," Saturday matinee, and "Macbeth" at night.

The modern "Hamlet," which will be the opening playbill, is expected to attract extraordinary attention on account of the novelty. This playbill was received enthusiastically in other cities.

Mr. Mantell will appear to advantage in other roles during the engagement, as follows: Jacques, Romeo, King Lear, Brutus, Shylock and Macbeth.

The charming Miss Hamper will enact the roles, respectively, of Ophelia, Rosalind, Juliet, Cordelia, Portia and Lady Macbeth. Students and lovers of classic drama are expected to avail themselves of the only opportunity of the season to witness Shakespeare on the auditorium stage. This is the only touring company in this line of drama.

Attention is called to the fact that night performances will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock and matinees at 2:15.

Lectures at Rauscher's.

Beginning tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock and every Monday morning thereafter until March 14, William Rufus Scott will give current events lectures at Rauscher's. Whatever is uppermost in public news interest will be analyzed, including the work of Congress when in session. Foreign questions also will be reviewed.

"GLAMOUR"
IN OPENING
TOMORROW

Starting tomorrow night at the Belasco theater, there will be a new scale of prices put into effect for the week only when Albert Lewis, in association with A. H. Woods, presents "Glamour," a new play by Hugh Stanislaus Stange, with Ralph Morgan the featured player. The new price scale is in the matter of a test for attractions that are given a hearing outside of New York, and if the experiment proves successful, it may be adopted for all similar preliminary hearings.

The Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert and Albert Lewis and A. H. Woods, among New York's most prominent theatrical producers, are convinced that theatergoers, in cities outside of New York, fail to patronize new theatrical offerings on account of the regular price scale.

"Glamour," immediately after it finishes in Washington, goes to New York. It is the work of one of the younger school of playwrights, who by right of inheritance should go far in his chosen profession. He is the son of Stanislaus Stange, whose name a decade ago ranked among those at the top as a librettist. "Glamour" was written by Stange while he was in France with the American army serving with the Twenty-seventh division.

The scenes are laid in and around New York with the exception of the second act, which takes place in a trench on the front lines. Ralph Morgan, who will be recalled here for his interpretations in "Buddies," "Turn to the Right" and "Cobra," is the featured member of the cast. Minna Gombel is the leading woman. Others in the cast are Robert W. Craig, Roger Pryor, Irene Homer, Allen Jenkins, Messenger Bells, Elsie Hitz, Andrie Carron and J. Kent Thurber.

BURT HOLMES
ON THURSDAY

With that prolific dean of American travelers—Burt Holmes—at one's elbow as guide and mentor, one is always assured of a fascinating and profitable trip and a safe return.

Mr. Holmes will return to the National theater on Thursday afternoon at 4:30, when he will present the first topic in a cycle of new travelogues. As the subject of the first of these pictured-journeys he has selected "Seeing America by Land Cruise." This will consist of a vividly illustrated and tersely worded "log" of a land "voyage" which will cover four of America's most famous regions—the South-west including Santa Fe, the Indian Pueblos, the Petrified Forest, the Painted Desert, the Grand Canyon, &c. California with stops at Riverside, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Hollywood, Santa Barbara, Del Monte, San Francisco, the big trees and Yosemite valley, The Pacific Northwest, Shasta, Portland, Columbia river, Seattle and Vancouver, the Canadian Rockies, Fraser river, Selkirk, glacier, field, Lake Louise and Banff. Truly a feast of delight in a country where delight is realized.

A new act to the circuit, Kola and Sylvia company, will be seen and heard in "Happy Moments of Dancing and Piano," "The Blending of Two Fine Arts." Pezao Retter, late hit of "The Passions of 1924," will amuse with his unusual antics. He is known as "the man who wrestles with himself."

Amid cleverly executed scenery and unusual lighting effects, Smith and Strong, those "Golden Voices from the Golden West," will offer something different in a singing act. They were discovered punching cows and have been a sensation hit in vaudeville ever since they gave up the life in the open and took to the footlights.

Larimer and Thomas combine thrills and comedy in their sensational bicycle act, which they choose to call "Moving Moments."

Following will be those young risters, Johnny Sully and Muriel Thomas. They will present a laughing episode entitled, "Beauty, Youth and Folly."

Amid cleverly executed scenery and unusual lighting effects, Smith and Strong, those "Golden Voices from the Golden West," will offer something different in a singing act. They were discovered punching cows and have been a sensation hit in vaudeville ever since they gave up the life in the open and took to the footlights.

Larimer and Thomas combine thrills and comedy in their sensational bicycle act, which they choose to call "Moving Moments."

Glorified Girls.

Florenz Ziegfeld announces a number of extraordinary novelties in the Ziegfeld "Follies," which opens at the National November 14. Prominent among these are a series of Ben All Haggin tableaux, enlisting the services of the most beautiful glorified girls. At the special request of Mr. Ziegfeld, Ben All Haggin came over from Italy recently for the express purpose of creating these tableaux, then returned immediately upon their completion. They are masterpieces of a new art. One of the tableaux is an impassioned study of the abduction of a beautiful woman in the land of pirates. Another is an orchard scene of Elysian charm. Handsome settings by Joseph Urban, a novelty scene of effect showing the inside of a train, and a setting of golden palm trees against black velvet, are also to be an unusual feature of the revue, which is an American institution.

B. F. KEITH'S

Many American entertainers have made hits in Europe the past year but not one succeeded in storming the gates of the music halls better than Jack Smith the famous "Whispering Baritone" of victrola and radio fame. Now Jack is back in the States starting on a tour of the Keith-Albee circuit, opening at B. F. Keith's this week where he is sharing top honors with "Les Folies Rouges." Mr. Smith will sing many selections from his popular successes including "Baby Face," "Knee Deep in Daisies," "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain," "Red, Red Robin," &c.

"Les Folies Rouges," or The Red Follies, is a big musical act produced by Harry Royce whose own dancing has always been welcome in Washington. In the lead of this dance are Lois Syrell and Peggy O'Neil. A large supporting company of dancers is announced. The Black Bottom is scheduled in the latest style.

The tin type may be in the discard but not York and King, who will be featured for the week in their laugh-provoking piece, "The Old Family Tin Type."

Following will be those young risters, Johnny Sully and Muriel Thomas. They will present a laughing episode entitled, "Beauty, Youth and Folly."

A new act to the circuit, Kola and Sylvia company, will be seen and heard in "Happy Moments of Dancing and Piano," "The Blending of Two Fine Arts." Pezao Retter, late hit of "The Passions of 1924," will amuse with his unusual antics. He is known as "the man who wrestles with himself."

Amid cleverly executed scenery and unusual lighting effects, Smith and Strong, those "Golden Voices from the Golden West," will offer something different in a singing act. They were discovered punching cows and have been a sensation hit in vaudeville ever since they gave up the life in the open and took to the footlights.

"PERCH OF THE DEVIL"
AT RIALTO

A powerful dramatic theme is brought to the screen in the picturization of Gertrude Atherton's famous novel, "Perch of the Devil," which is the feature at the Rialto this week.

Mae Busch and Pat O'Malley have the leading roles in this vital play, which penetrates the gauze of civilization and lays bare the naked souls of everyday men and women. Politeness and polish, brilliancy and sweet deceit, all the fine devices of cultivated men, are swept aside with a fell stroke when the woman who neglected her husband woke with a shock to find him in another woman's possession. Worse than that, the woman who had craftily undermined the sanctity of her home was, supposedly, her best friend.

Unearthly, but tremendous, is the character depicted by Mae Busch, and the scenes that follow her betrayal are said to be gripping in the extreme. Scene after scene the tension rises and the bold, barefaced denouement that takes place in colorful, rapid dramatic action throws a cruel, glaring light on the primordial instinct that lies hidden in every woman's heart.

The International News, a comedy, spotlight and other short subjects also will be shown.

Books Native City.

After her many successes abroad in opera and recitals, Mme. Lillian Evanti, the coloratura soprano, returns to America for a short tour—and naturally will include Washington, her native city, in the itinerary. Mme. Evanti will be presented in recital at Belasco theater, Sunday evening, November 21 at 8:15.

Mme. Evanti is now touring in the West and her Washington appearance will be the nature of an adieu before sailing December 4th for her reengagement in French opera.

COOLIDGE KIN ATTRACTION
AT PALACE

A new screen comedy starring W. C. Fields, former "Follies" comedian, and a distinct new stage novelty in the Plymouth, Vt. Old-Time Dance orchestra, with "Uncle" John Wilder, uncle of President Coolidge, and a group of the President's former schoolmates and friends, will be screen and stage offering of the bill offered this week at Loew's Palace starting this afternoon.

Although these two offerings will constitute the principal highlights of the program, a splendid group of selected numbers, including Dick Leibert's highly popular organologues, the Loew's Palace Magazine showing minute news of world happenings, the Palace Concert orchestra, Tom Gannon, conductor, and other added attractions, which will round out and diversify a brilliant November bill.

From the spot and the stock that gave America its 30th President comes the Plymouth, Vt. Old-Time Dance orchestra, a real old-fashioned musical novelty that William Morris presents for the first time in Washington. The orchestra is composed of relatives, former school chums and friends of the President, including "Uncle" John Wilder, the President's 81-year-old uncle who recently won an old fiddlers' contest in Boston; Herbert Luther Moore, 57 years old, "caller" of the old-fashioned dancers; Mr. and Mrs. John Cady, tenants of the Coolidge farm at Plymouth, Vt.; Clarence E. Blanchard, the President's cousin, and Louis Carpenter, a schoolmate of the chief executive.

W. C. Fields will be seen in his latest slice of photodramatic hilarity, "So's Your Old Man," a Gregory La Cava production from the Julian Street story in the Red Book magazine, "Mr. Bisbee's Princess," which won the O. Henry memorial prize of 1925. Alice Joyce, "Buddy" Rogers, Marcia Harris and others have prominent roles in the picture.

"BARDELYS"
AT COLUMBIA

"Bardelys the Magnificent," King Vidor's brilliant picturization for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of the novel of the same name by Rafael Sabatini, starring John Gilbert and an all-star cast, is proving one of the photoplay sensations of the autumn at Loew's Columbia theater, where the picture will be presented for a second great week's engagement, starting this afternoon.

King Vidor, the man who produced "The Big Parade" and "La Boheme"—to name only two of his most prominent successes—has lavished his genius for photoplay dramaturgy on "Bardelys the Magnificent," and the result is a stirring production for John Gilbert that takes equal rank with, if it does not exceed, the brilliance of such Gilbert triumphs as "The Big Parade," "The Merry Widow" and "La Boheme."

"Bardelys the Magnificent" is laid in the reign of Louis XIII of France against the rich and aristocratic social background of Louis' court and brings into sharp contrast and relief the amazing social order of the day. Gilbert has the title role, that of Bardelys, a gentleman-adventurer at the court of Louis XIII who mocks the sinister Chateaufort with his failure to carry out the wishes of the king that he win Roxalanne de Lavedan, a rich provincial heiress, marry her, keep her wealth within the kingdom and change the political views of her father.

Wagering his estate against that of Chateaufort that he can win Roxalanne's love, Bardelys sets out to find the heiress and takes the name, en route, of one Lesperon, whom he finds dying from an assault. As Lesperon, he takes refuge on the Lavedan estate, where he is discovered by Roxalanne who cares for a wound he has received and falls madly in love with him. In the meantime, Bardelys is identified as Lesperon, who is wanted for treason, and, arrested by the king's men, he is brought before Chateaufort, who villainously repudiates him and orders him executed. In the meantime, Chateaufort has promised to save Bardelys if the heroine will marry him, but Bardelys is forced to effect a thrilling escape from the very shadow of the scaffold and throw himself on the mercy of the king, who is passing, to win his freedom.

White Kid Gloves.

If you are interested in figures, you may be interested to learn that somewhere along the route of his third-of-a-century tour, Lieut. Comdr. John Philip Sousa will work his fingers into his ten thousand pair of white kid gloves. Sousa upon the director's stand probably would be more at home without a baton than without his white kid gloves, and with a record of a new pair of gloves every time he has appeared on the conductor's stand over a stretch of 33 years, the "March King" has been somewhat of a friend to the kid glove industry. This present season it is estimated that the 40 weeks of his tour will require about 400 pairs of gloves.

Echoes of the New York Stage

By ROBERT BELL

Last week I took up so much time—and space—reviewing for you the plot of "God Loves Us," which, I must confess, has not proved to be a popular success, that I omitted several plays of more or less importance and got myself somewhat behind. For instance, if I had held to schedule I would be now reporting to you my impressions of the production of the "Civic Repertory Theater," which Miss Eva Le Gallienne has so nobly launched at the old Fourteenth Street theater which since the days of its grandeur has been the home of Italian melodrama. But these productions must wait next week. Today shall be an interlude—for two little plays are pressing forward to be spoken about though they be not of the greatest dramatic fare.

One of these plays is "On Approval," by that Englishman of charming manners, Mr. Frederick Lonsdale, who has already given us "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," which Washingtonians will remember Ina Claire acting in so delightfully "aren't we all?" and "These Charming People," adequate vehicles for the energetic comedy of Mr. Cyril Maude; while the other is "White Wings," an illusive little Barresque comedy by Philip Barry.

Though he be no relation to the great Sir James, in the lexicon of fame these plays will probably take no place. But in a season, not overly pretentious as to dramatic merit, they are diverting, have charm, and can well engage our attention for a little while.

"On Approval" contains only four persons. This is not important except that it shows how adequately an author can write while omitting the nonessentials, and how four people alone for some two hours can divert our minds; when the personages of the drama speak clever lines and are caught in amusing situations and when the actors who play these personages are capable and know the technique of their art. For there is never a truly exciting moment in "On Approval," it is true also that there is never a dull one.

In a play of verbal badinage, such as is "On Approval," the plot amounts to little and the telling of it to even less. Suffice it to say that it relates the story of four Englishwomen who take two English gentlemen to a country house in Scotland for a month's visit.

Trusting that after that length of time they can decide as to whether or not they each would desire to take for a husband their prospective suitors. It happens that the elder of these ladies is a crank, almost a modern Katherine, and that the man who loves her is a simple, naive soul of a human. The other lady is more or less her opposite while her suitor, a duke, is perhaps the most selfish man in London.

If we are clever we have very likely guessed in the first act the final denouement—the two nice people decide to run away from the house in Scotland, leaving it in the hands of the crank, who is easily made possible by a convenient and severe snowstorm which comes up in the last act, and by the fact that the motor in which the two depart for the station is the only one in the vicinity, and the house in Scotland possesses no telephone. The final curtain falls with the two selfish ones railing at the misfortune of being left perhaps for a month in each other's society.

Violet Kemble Cooper plays the shrew. She is beautiful and charming enough to make it possible for us to believe that she might have fascinated her suitor. Furthermore, she has a fine sense of comedy and is able to give Mr. Lonsdale's amusing lines their correct flavor. Her suitor is played by Wallace Eddinger as naively, but perhaps not quite as British-like, as the author could desire. Hugh Wakefield, seen last season, but not to best advantage, in "Louis XIV," makes the selfish duke a real character of comedy, suggesting for all the world a ruffling bantam rooster; and Miss Kathleen MacDonnell, making up a fourth, plays with a divinely understanding sense of humor which, however she keeps at all times under control.

Supplementing the above, I need only add that the play has been subtly directed by Athole Stewart, imported from London for the occasion, and rather gorgeously set by James Reynolds. It is a play of utter sophistication, produced in the height of good taste. It is smart, chic, up-to-date, terse with clever repartee, addressed certainly to the tastes in the stalls rather than to the groundlings.

Philip Barry's "White Wings" presents some difficulties to the spectator. He is ever wondering whether he has quite gotten all that the author meant to signify. The outer story is plain enough. A street cleaner in the year 1895 is in love with the daughter of a fortune man who is interested in engines. The hero is devoted to horses; the heroine believes in the advent of the horseless wagon. In other words she stands for progress; he for things as they have always been, for tradition. The motor wins the day; the last horse in the town is shot and the hero finds that his old job as street cleaner exists no longer and that he must rally to the new banner of today. This is all old in whimsy; for the street cleaner's job is given the importance of, say, the militia. He and his family are the superiors of the community; he is the last of the line to wear the uniform of the white wings.

The little plot in itself wouldn't offer much trouble if we did not constantly feel that there was more underlying it; for not only does it seem to burlesque the "Doubting Thomas" to progress, not only does it mildly ridicule some of the things we said and did in the gay nineties; but parallel with this it seems to be a satire of the so-called well-to-do play. Everything, more or less which Mr. William Archer might have used in his book on playwrighting to illustrate "dramatic incidents," gets into this little play.

The heroine's father, a poor mechanic, is snubbed and looked down upon by the noble hero's family of white wings; the approach of impending doom to the noble hero's family owing to the development of the automobile; the drinking fountain testimonial to Grandfather Gen. Inch where, because they are so poor they are forced in lieu of a horse to trespass from their front yard an iron deer from which the horns had been removed hoping that thereby it would resemble the other animal; the smashing of the statue by, and the brave way it was deflected from a cavalcade of roaring automobiles; the signal for this onslaught from the hands of no other person than the heroine; the hero's father, despondent and finally desirous, playing the pistol to his temple, missing aim and the reverse of Ibsen's "Wild Duck," shooting a bird in place of himself; the death of the last horse and the sorrow of the faithful cabby.

The play produced by Winthrop Ames is not always played in one key. One suspects that sometimes

SOUTH SEAS LOCALE OF LOVE DRAMA

"Aloma of the South Seas" will be presented at the Gayety theater this week to bring diversity into the programs offered by the Columbia circuit, the chain of theaters where burlesque usually predominates. In selecting the actors are taking it a little more seriously than Mr. Barry intended. Indeed, I understand that since the opening night it is played with much more stress on the comedy than at first.

The little play is one which grows upon you after leaving the theater. I had a good enough time at it but I have been surprised to find myself reverting again and again to the burlesque of "Doubting Thomas" to progress, not only does it mildly ridicule some of the things we said and did in the gay nineties; but parallel with this it seems to be a satire of the so-called well-to-do play. Everything, more or less which Mr. William Archer might have used in his book on playwrighting to illustrate "dramatic incidents," gets into this little play.

The heroine's father, a poor mechanic, is snubbed and looked down upon by the noble hero's family of white wings; the approach of impending doom to the noble hero's family owing to the development of the automobile; the drinking fountain testimonial to Grandfather Gen. The play produced by Winthrop Ames is not always played in one key. One suspects that sometimes

"Aloma" as suited to popular presentation and general appeal, weight was given to its natural elements of entertainment.

There is drama, comedy, interweavings of dance, the hum of songs and strumming of dulcet instruments; there is the call of romance in its theme, a call from the distant islands of the Pacific, where human nature develops in its most irresponsible moods. There is an entrancing love theme in "Aloma," there is the surge of contest for the possession of a beautiful woman and the gyrations of native girls in characteristic dance.

Rita Nolan, who was in the original Broadway presentation of "Aloma," will play the title role. Hope Carleton, Nancy Payne, R. J. Barrett, Archie Foulk, Frank King, George Hurd, Don Valentine, Robert Burke O'Brien, Blanche Lanett and H. Albert Rodman are supporting principals.

Bandmaster's Son.

Roger Pryor, who appears in one of the leading roles in "Glamour," a new drama which Albert Lewis will present at the Shubert Belasco theater next Monday evening, is a son of the famous bandmaster, Arthur Pryor.

3 HEADLINE ACTS ON BILL AT THE EARLE

The Earle theater announces for the week beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock a vaudeville program with three headline acts and a feature photoplay. On the stage Mr. and Mrs. Norman Phillips and Norman, Jr., will be seen in a new offering, which bears the title of a "Family Revue of 1926." This elaborate act is in a prologue and three scenes, and affords one of the most prococious youngsters on the boards the biggest opportunity he has had on the audible stage.

Another sterling inclusion in the vaudeville portion of the entertainment will be Al Moore and his Jolly Tars, a syncopated orchestra of a dozen skilled instrumentalists, singers, dancers and comedians, who already are known to Washington amusement lovers by virtue of earlier appearances in other local theaters. One more distinguished contribution to the bill is the Elva-Klingner Revue, participated in by ten charming young women and two clever men. The dancing contingent is led by Miss Elva, and songs are introduced at frequent intervals.

The supporting vaudeville acts will include "The Masked Voice," an offering of novel character, which provides a maximum of agreeable entertainment, and Harry Stanley and Dorothy Quintet in a comedy sketch bearing the title of "Books."

The feature photoplay for the week will be the Fox picturization of James Oliver Curwood's colorful story of "The Country Beyond," which has as its locale first the picturesque Northwest woods country and then the metropolitanism of Broadway and Fifth avenue. The important roles in this excellent camera version of a popular novel are played by Olive Borden, Ralph Graves, Gertrude Astor and J. Farrell Mac-

The screen comedy for the week will be "The Galloping Ghost," and the bill will be rounded out by the customary house features, including Newsreel and other short reel subjects, concert overture by the Earle Theater orchestra and pipe organ accompaniments of the pictured subjects by Alexander Aarons.

Syncopation Assured.

The Earle theater this week will present as one of its featured attractions a syncopated orchestra of twelve that is one of the favorites of Washington's music lovers. Al Moore and his "Jolly Tars" are not newcomers to Washington. They have appeared at Keith's and at Crandall's Tivoli, and now return

Footlights and Shadows

By JOHN J. DALY

L. STODDARD TAYLOR, manager of the Belasco, comes forward with an innovation—reduced admission prices. These are to be in vogue for new plays, samples of drama in embryonic stages; absorbing.

Whereas Washington is a city of so-called premieres, which amount sometimes to mere "try-outs," it seems not quite fair to charge good folk here prices that prevail when the same plays are viewed on Broadway in all their glory; with rough edges rubbed off, polish and finish applied. Fair prices for attractions would bring back the hazy days of the theater. That is what Mr. Taylor is trying to do; recall the popularity of twenty years ago, when the theater stood supreme in its field—when there were no movies, no automobiles, no night clubs, no counter attractions to take the minds of the theater-going public off its sole and only amusement.

H.ISTORY has a way of repeating itself, though 'tis extremely doubtful if that glorious page of the past—when the theater was alone in the field—will ever come back. Why should it? There has been too great advancement ever to retreat.

However, with the modern theater at its best, so far as mechanics and technique are concerned, there is one great element lacking; that is the capacity house. And audiences mean much to the theater. Only on those nights when the theater unveils sensation as such do the good brothers and sisters clamor at its door for admission.

Ticket scalpers reap harvests when smut is in the air. The healthy, steady, flow of crowds toward the box office went out of style when East Lynn left the boards, along with the disappearance of Denman Thompson and "The Old Homestead." It remains now for some enterprising manager to lure the boys and girls back to the Land of Make Believe.

Mr. Taylor has an idea that the public will appreciate what comes in the way of an innovation. While prices are going up—a movement that started after the world war and will end God knows where—he steps in to send them down, at least on one end of the scale. If theatergoers agree that he has hit upon the right policy, the old Belasco may take on a new lease of life. If they fail to trail along with a pioneer, then what? The answer is in the lap of the gods.

P.ROBABLY the greatest enemy of the theater is the night club. In the old days, there were clubs; but nothing to compare with these that flourish now. They spring up like mushrooms. They run the gamut—high and low.

With jazz predominant, the night club is resolving itself into a sort of old-fashioned music hall brought up-to-date; though the music hall, which is distinctively an English institution, never in its palmy days—nor nights—approached the proportions of an American night club.

Too, the night club is in its infancy. Like the movies thirty years ago it is just getting a start. A connoisseur of this sort of thing can open the eyes of even the blase—if properly induced.

J.UST at present New York and Chicago are out ahead of the night club parade; but Washington is coming into the first division. They open night clubs here as fast as they once shucked oysters down on the wharf—in the old days, when oyster shucking was an art.

There is a night club in Washington for each letter in the alphabet, and some letters initial several. These are the up and up concerns; those that have their names in the society columns of the newspapers. Columns devoted to police court news—raids, and such—carry others.

So that on a journey about Washington, when the lights are on and the wee hours approach, it would take an ordinary citizen several weeks to visit all the night clubs.

E.SSENTIALLY, the night club is an outgrowth of the old cabaret show. When beer and light wines flowed freely, within the shadow and sanction of the law, the cabaret was done in the grand manner. Hotels and restaurants nurtured and nourished it. Came then prohibition, and out went the cabaret—with the cordials and chorines who tripped lightly from one table to another, sitting on the knees of fat old gentlemen from far places and drawing distorted looks from nearby matrons.

Regime was on its way out, jazz coming in, when the cabaret folded its tent and, like the Arab, silently crept away; where to, no one knows. The saxophone, of all instruments of torture, has had as much to do with the growth and development of the night club as anything else. There had to be some place for the moaning of the sax—and this was it; the night club. When a recognized artist turns loose on the sax there are only several things a night-lifer may decently do; cry, dance, or drink.

Given, then, a good jazz band with a series of saxophones, all out of tune, and the world eventually will turn mad; or stay up all night to keep from going over the river. There is something about such syncope that drives men on, and on, and on; and women wild. The fight prevails. The foot becomes loose. There is no chair in all the world that can hold a man or woman fifteen successive minutes while the pump, pump, pump of the lower basses join with the screechingly soothing sigh of the saxophones. It makes for the dance. With habit formed, the theater loses patrons rapidly; for who can sit silently through three acts of straight drama, having tasted, dram by dram, the delectable delights of the night club? Who? Answer answerer not.

W.HEN Mr. Taylor steps out with what the showmen call a dollar-and-a-half top—the highest priced ticket in the house—he comes very near placing such sale on a par with cover charges of the night club. Here he meets the enemy on its own ground.

Naturally, that dollar-and-a-half cover charge, as they print it on menus, is merely a starter at a night club. There is a gantlet to run that starts with the girl taking cloaks and hats and ends only when the car is parked again in the old garage.

Matching the theater against the night club, the managers must now give habitues their money's worth. The fellows who uncork bottles under tables know what they want—and want what they want when they want it. A nice, quiet evening at theater, with a light collation afterward, is not always what frequenters of night clubs would have; but, fortunately, for theaters at least these are not the only men of manners and money in the community.

W.HATEVER happens, Mr. Taylor's experiment will be watched with keen interest by those on the inside and outside of theaterdom; for at least there is novelty in the idea, and a reduction of theater prices may be the thing to save the old war horse.

Duke Fosse, manager of the Auditorium, sitting serenely in his office where hang pictures of the great and near-great, himself once manager of the Belasco, concurs in the opinion of his confrere, Stoddard Taylor. Duke has concrete evidence of what lower prices will do. Here he has had Robert Mantell and his beautiful wife, Genevieve Hamper, playing all this week an imposing array of Shakespearean plays at popular prices. When the Duke and his assistants counted up the money last night, just after the boys gave the Eleven o'clock Toast over at the Elks club, they calculated something like $12,000 income for the week's business. Taking it by and large, that is not bad when it is known that the highest price paid for a seat at the Auditorium during the Mantell-Hamper engagement is just one Silver Lady. Since many of the seats were sold at 25 and 50 cents, a goodly crowd went down to the Auditorium during the week. And Duke says the advance sale for this week augurs a land office business.

These low prices catch them, says the Duke. He points to the scale of prices in vogue for John Philip Sousa when the famous bandmaster visits the Auditorium the nineteenth of this month. There will be two concerts, something out of the ordinary for Sousa, who at 72—he celebrated his birth anniversary yesterday—is making his thirty-second annual tour of the country. Harry Askins, manager for the bandmaster, was in town last week and fixed the scale of prices for these concerts at $1.50 down to 50 cents. He figures these prices to be not only in reason, but within the budget allowance of most folk; especially music lovers. From advance sales already piling in Duke Fosse says the man is right. Stoddard Taylor, too, will have a story to tell within a week.

Fun Above All.

Hal Skelly, costar with Louise Groody in H. H. Frazee's world-famous musical comedy "No, No, Nanette," at the National theater this week, is an enemy of gloom. That is the secret of his success.

"Why be morbid?" asks Hal. "This old world is full of good things. All we have to do is look in the right place to find them. Tastes differ, of course, but the great majority of people love joy. Still, I have known persons, mostly women, who would drop everything in hand to attend a funeral. The complexity of the sex is hardly understandable. The funeral-going women glean certain joy from the sad rites of funeral services. They weep copiously and return to their homes feeling refreshed and happy. When the same women attend a theater they select the most morbid drama obtainable, cry heartily and have 'just the best time.' Isn't it the truth? But, thank goodness, the big majority want fun—hilarious fun."

Carlton Club Enlists Stars

During the past week theatrical stars from almost every theater in Washington entertained guests of the Carlton club. So popular has become this sort of thing that E. C. A. Reed, secretary of the Carlton club, has made arrangements to make each Wednesday "theatrical night," when visiting celebrities of the theaters will be guests of the club—and entertain. Those present during the past week were Ben Bernie, Phil Baker, Teddy Chalmers and May Alexander, Clarence Senna, pianist, who showed how modern popular music is made from the songs; Lora Hoffman, Ned Norworth and Patricia Caron, Eddie Nelson, Jack McClaron, Gertrude Mudge, Eric Titus, Brennan and Rogers, Harold Stanton, Bernard and Rich. Gladys Barler, Pierre De Roeder, musical conductor; Phil Charig, composer of "Americana" and music for "Yes, Yes, Yvette," and Oscar Levant, who played "The Rhapsody in Blue."

ART LANDRY AT TIVOLI

Art Landry and his Victor Recording orchestra of twelve skilled instrumentalists, who a fortnight ago achieved a tremendous success as the special added attraction at Crandall's Metropolitan theater, will be presented on the stage of Crandall's Tivoli theater throughout the week beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mr. Landry and his band will offer four complete changes of program during the week.

The photoplay feature for today and tomorrow at the Tivoli will be First National's production of "The Brown Derby," in which the stellar role is played by Johnny Hines.

On Tuesday and Wednesday Lewis S. Stone will be seen in First National's production of "Don Juan's Three Nights," in which is depicted the love adventures of a noted concert pianist. This will be supplemented by a new Aesop Fable and Pathe Review, with the Landry band, of course, an added attraction.

Bebe Daniels is announced as the pictured star for Thursday and Friday in Paramount's production of "The Campus Flirt," which will have as an auxiliary attraction a new release of the Topics of the Day and the Landry band.

For Saturday the Tivoli announces "The Midnight Kiss," adapted from John Golden's stage hit, "Pigs," in which Janet Gaynor, Arthur Housman, Richard Walling and others of high rank appear in the pivotal parts. A Charlie Chase comedy, the eighth installment of "Snowed In" and the Landry band will complete this excellent program.

Originally a Farce.

"No, No, Nanette," H. H. Frazee's record-smashing offering that comes to the National theater for the week beginning today, was a triumph in the theater before it appeared in this flashier style with musical embroidery. "No, No, Nanette" was "My Lady Friends." Clifton Crawford starred in it with great success. Mr. Frazee was the producer of "My Lady Friends," and Frank Mandel, who, with Otto Harbach, revised the story for the musical version, was the author.

POLICE PLAY AT CENTRAL

Herbert Rawlinson will be the pictured star of Crandall's Central theater the first two days of this week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock in "The Millionaire Policemen," a new subject which may be looked upon as an extension of that engaging group of police dramas in which this star previously has appeared. The comedy for the first bill of the week will be Mack Sennett's "Ice Cold Cocos," in addition to which will be shown a new Pathe Review, the entire program to be embellished by pipe organ accompaniments and brief solo interludes.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Colleen Moore will succeed to the stellar position in First National's production of "It Must Be Love." The comedy of shorter length to occupy the place of chief supplementary attraction will be "Who's My Wife" in which Like Conley is the star.

"Three Bad Men," one of the greatest pictures of the year based on the romance, adventure and thrills of the land rush days in the West, is announced as chief attraction at the Central on Thursday and Friday with George O'Brien, Olive Borden, Tom Santschi, J. Farrell MacDonald and Frank Campeau in the roles of primary importance. A new Aesop Fable also will be shown. For Saturday Laura La Plante will be the star in "Her Big Night," which will be supplemented by the Cameo comedy, "Kiss Me Kate."

MOVIE GRAPHS

By HARRY HITES.

She evidently was a student of one of Washington's most fashionable boarding schools and a Southern girl, for she blurred her "r's"; old-fashioned, too, for she said, "I never tire of these costume pictures. They bring to my mind days of my grandmamma down in New Orleans; of the Rue Royal and the grandees of society; the fashionable girls and their pretty fiances dancing in and out of the crowd on the ballroom floor, in the night under an exquisite moon."

So they do: the costume picture one back in memory and feeling to other days and other times—a peculiar falling of the human race; it loves to dream, to reminisce, to be led back by colorings and costumes, long since moulding in lavender trays, to grandmamma's and grandpapa's time—to live and walk with them in their youthful paths.

For the nonce, during a costume picture one is carried bodily back to the day and hour of the setting. It may be in the days of Louis XIII and the "Magnificent Bardeley" with court scenes and court costumes carrying out the illusion. It may be an old English picture with "handsome Dick" Barthelmess playing the role of a young Englishman of fortune of a hundred years ago; or it may be some actress moving stiffly and heavily through days of Queen Elizabeth. But whatever it is or wherever it is laid it has that subtle sense appeal which makes it an episode in the life of those who love the moving picture.

Of a different contrast appeal to the movie lover is the picture of modern dress and modern settings. Here one looks more to action and the working out of some intricate problem in modern life—a moral impasse, a comedy situation, domestic tragedy, &c.

One does get in such a picture the feeling of richness that flows from a costume picture. He sees more than anything else a cross-section of daily life and he settles down to an enjoyment of the technique of the scenario writer in working out the problem with which he has burdened the world.

Lastly, coming at the two classes of pictures from the standpoint of popularity with the public—a not inconsiderable thing in these days of box-office receipts—there is much pro and con talk. Just which is the most popular is hard to say. Both types have been known to pack houses for weeks. Perhaps the nearest to an analysis of the popularity appeal may be found in this summary: The costume play is at its best featuring a star of magnitude; the modern costume play featuring a story of tense modern drama.

An almost unknown screen actor has been chosen as leading man for Norma Talmadge in her next First National picture, "Camille." He is Gilbert Roland, a Spaniard, 23 years old, who recently did a fine bit of work in the Sam Rork production of "The Blonde Saint," featuring Lewis Stone and Doris Kenyon.

Colleen Moore's John McCormick production, "Twinkletoes," heads the list of five First National releases for November, it was announced by President Robert Lieber. The other productions are "The Silent Lover," starring Milton Sills; Johnny Hines' "Stepping Along"; Ken Maynard's "The Unknown Cavalier"; and John McCormick's John Francis Dillon production, "Midnight Lovers."

Raymond McKee, the Jimmy Smith of the Mack Sennett Smith Family Comedies, has an interesting hobby. On the first of each year he buys a banjo. Wherever he goes the banjo goes with him, and when he meets some famous person he knows, he asks him to autograph the instrument. It is soon covered with the names of many noted screen stars and other famous people. McKee then holds a raffle and gives the proceeds to some worthy charity.

Marshall Neilan will be Constance Talmadge's director for her next First National starring vehicle, "Carolina," an original story written especially for the star by Hans Kraly and formerly called "The Sun of Montmartre," and "Collette."

Notable stage successes, including a picture called "The Perfect Fool," which will star Ed Wynn, and announced now by Jesse L. Lasky, vice president of Paramount in charge of production, in revealing plans of the company for the coming spring. Lasky declared that of the 39 productions scheduled for release during the new season 15 or more will be of long-run caliber. This group does not include the road-show pictures.

Furniture used by Henry VIII of England furnishes a beautiful room in one of the huge sets used by Monty Banks in his first Pathe feature comedy, "Artia Boy." This suite came from Melrose Castle, Windsor, where it was doing duty when Henry the Eighth was on the throne.

Corrine Griffith took the initial scenes of "Purple and Fine Linen," her next First National starring vehicle, on the West coast this week, with James Flood directing. This is a story by May Edington and the cast to date includes John Bowers and Hobart Bosworth. Paul Bern prepared the continuity.

"The Fighting Marine," Pathe's new sensational adventure serial picture, starring Gene Tunney, heavyweight fistic champion of the world, was recently screened at a special preview before a committee representing the California Federation of Women's Clubs and was tendered high praise by that body.

Harry Langdon, First National's comedy potentate, is sporting a royal Rolls Royce on the Burbank lot these days. The reason, real and real, is his newest comedy, "Long Pants," which is now in the process of shooting under the direction of Frank Capra.

Ken Maynard, famous horse-riding, rope-throwing and six-gun cowboy star of the movies, is offering a handsome trophy for the puncher who wins the title of world's champion all-around cowboy at the world's series championship rodeo to be held at Madison Square Garden this week, under the auspices of the Broad Street hospital.

Tom Miranda, editorial manager for Inspiration Pictures, says that when a plumber makes a mistake, he charges for it. When a carpenter makes a mistake, it is just what he expected. When a doctor makes a mistake, he buries it. When a judge makes a mistake, it becomes the law of the land. When a preacher makes a mistake, nobody knows the difference. When a movie director makes a mistake, it is up to the title editor to correct it, but when a title editor makes a mistake—good-night!

After four months in New York, during which time she played the leading role in "Summer Bachelors," directed by Alan Dwan and worked in the opening scenes of Bertha, the "Sewing Machine Girl," Madge Bellamy is back at her old haunts at Fox Films West coast studios. She went to work this week completing her "Bertha" role under the direction of Irving Cummings. The cast of "Bertha" includes Allan Simpson, Sally Phipps, Paul Nicholson, Anita Graves, Harry Bailey, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Wales and Arthur Hovey.

W. C. Fields Upsets

Staid Old Brooklyn

The sight of W. C. Fields, former "Follies" comedian, tossing bricks through flimsy windshields, being chased by movie cops and hammering on other windshields with a rubber hammer to demonstrate his unbreakable glass invention, all in the wilds of Brooklyn, was too much for the curiosity of Brooklyn's citizenry and Director La Cava had to suspend work on Fields' latest comedy, "So's Your Old Man," which comes to Loew's Palace this afternoon, until a half-dozen of Brooklyn's "finest" made their appearance to preserve the integrity of La Cava's camera lens.

Interpretative Talks.

Miss Janet Richards will open her season of interpretative talks on the great questions of the hour, home and foreign, on Monday, November 15, in the auditorium of the new Masonic temple, Thirteenth street and New York avenue. Miss Richards has just returned from an extensive European trip during which she saw and heard much of interest bearing on the tangled political situation of Europe. Her weekly reviews also include a survey of national problems and important congressional legislation.

"LA BOHEME" AT STRAND

Beginning today, the Strand theater offers as its feature screen attraction King Vidor's gorgeous production "La Boheme," with Lillian Gish and John Gilbert at the head of a truly marvelous cast of film celebrities. Renee Adoree, Roy D'Arcy and George Hassell are among the ten stars who help to make "La Boheme" one of the most thrilling pictures of the season. The story is that of the immortal romance of Mimi, the little seamstress of Paris, and Rodolphe, her prince charming. It is a gorgeous picture of gayety, beauty and pathos in the colorful setting of Paris artist life.

Stage offerings bring five big acts of Loew's vaudeville, headed by Hal Willis and Hazel MacFarlane in an elaborate song and dance revue entitled "Dancing Pirates." Among the other stage offerings are one who families in all Strandes, a natural-born comedian, Al H. Wilson, in "A Conglomerate of Nonsensicalities and Witticisms," Maura Neilson and Joe Warden in "Who's to Blame," Robert Gehan and Marjorie Garretson, appearing in a delightfully pleasing number, "Classical Synopation," and Achilles and Newman, two gladiators, in a comedy novelty, "Of Greek Pastimes."

Short-film features and orchestral numbers, under the direction of Arthur J. Manvell, will complete the program.

5,000 APPLAUD JOHN GILBERT

That classic complaint of the screen actor about lacking the inspiration of applause had little food during the filming by King Vidor of the brilliant new Rafael Sabatini story, "Bardeley, the Magnificent," starring John Gilbert, which opens its second week at Loew's Columbia today, for as many as 5,000 persons were paid to applaud Gilbert's acting in certain of the big sequences of this production.

The garbing and preparation of this army of extras for "Bardeley, the Magnificent," all dressed in the picturesque costumes of the seventeenth century, was a task that taxed the resources of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's big West Coast studios at Culver City, accustomed as those studios are to spectacle and costume drama.

For two weeks in advance the staff handling the sequence was rehearsed on every angle so that each move the great crowd made would go through as per schedule.

Twenty-five wardrobe men and women took care of the thousands of costumes necessary to garb the army of atmosphere talent. Twenty make-up men were on the job at daylight, putting beauty whisks, moustaches and wigs on the French courtiers, noblemen, pikemen, musketeers, judges, bourgeois, soldiers, dragoons and other types.

Twenty-five assistant directors were used, each caring for units of 100 persons up, working under the supervision of Harry Bucquet, King Vidor's assistant, and Robert Florey, technical director. A group of specially trained horsemen was required to lead the train of the carriage through the mob assembled to watch the execution of Bardeley.

PRIMITIVE PLAY HERE

More and more the brown ladies of the tropics are pressing themselves upon the theater, and there is a certain intriguing lure to the South sea tint when served with good dramatic fare.

This week at the Gayety theater "Aloma of the South Seas" is presented for the first time at popular prices. Playgoers know what they want. In South sea plays they prefer tanned skins and palm grove tunes and lots of color. If a typhoon can be wedged into the play, so much the better.

Aloma of the South Seas' is on this account the most popular play of mid-Pacific life seen on any stage since "The Bird of Paradise."

The play is in three acts, and the action takes place on a British-ruled South sea island. There Aloma is a dusky belle, and in other days would have been a queen of her people. Nautane, a husky youth, is her lover. Nautane is a feverish lover, for he feels every white man who casts longing eyes on Aloma to the sharks. Their love affair is progressing well until a good-looking white man appears on the island. Aloma keeps but for him, nurses him back to health and falls in love with him. He stands a good chance of becoming shark food when the white girl with whom he is in love appears on the island. ### New York Philharmonic.

Subscription ticket sale of the New York Philharmonic orchestra series will close tomorrow. T. Arthur Smith announces that tickets for the separate concerts will be available Wednesday, November 10. The first concert of this orchestra series will be given Tuesday, November 16, 4:30, at the National theater, with Willem Mengelberg conducting.

The New York Philharmonic concerts are viewed as important events in Washington's season, and with a list of boxholders and patronesses prominent in social and political life, the opening concert promises to be musically and socially an outstanding feature of the season.

PAUL KOCHANSKI, eminent violinist, who will be the assisting artist of the New York Symphony orchestra at its concert in Washington November 9.

DR. BESANT THIS WEEK

Dr. Annie Besant, noted English orator, writer and president of the International Theosophical society, who is to begin a coast to coast lecture tour of America, will appear here in the Washington auditorium Wednesday, November 10.

Perhaps the first real bitter struggle in which Dr. Besant became actively involved was back in 1880, when Charles Bradlaugh was elected member of parliament following the London convention, at which an advanced form of land law reform was adopted. Bradlaugh preferred affirmation to the customary oath and the Tory reactionaries seized upon this to precipitate a struggle which lasted for years before the defiant new member was seated. Bradlaugh's most effective supporter was Dr. Besant and in the battle she served her political novitiate.

Before this fight was over she engaged in another—this time with Ireland against the Foster coercion act, pleading with her pen and on the lecture platform against the eviction of 7,000 tenants. Almost immediately thereafter her sympathies were enlisted against a bill of parliament fixing 12 hours a day as a period of a young person's toil. She demanded an 8-hour day.

In 1885 she held meetings in her own London home to draw attention to the sufferings of Russian prisoners, and two years later took an aggressive part with the unemployed in the historic Trafalgar Square meeting broken up by the police after much blood had been shed.

These were the conflicts of early days. For many years her civic activities have been largely identified with India. Her greatest struggle has been for Home Rule and while this is not an accomplished fact the well-informed believe it to be on the way. No longer ago than last autumn Dr. Besant, as general secretary of the National Conference of India, took a Home Rule bill to England, where she placed it personally in the hands of Lord Birkenhead for discussion in parliament.

"NITE LIFE" AT MUTUAL

What is said to be an outstanding example of just what burlesque really should be is to open this afternoon at the Mutual theater. This attraction has a title old in its particular field, "Nite Life in Paris."

There has been a "Nite Life in Paris" for many years, but always on each successive season it is a new production not only physically but from the book and music angle, also.

Charles "Tramp" McNally is the featured comedian this season and he is ably supported by Harry Left, Al Baker, Billy Pitzer, Ruby Wallace and Dolly (Dale) Morrissey.

Corinne Still Popular.

The high regard in which Corinne Griffith is held as a particularly fascinating star of silent drama was demonstrated at Crandall's Metropolitan theater last week, where First National's "Orchid of the Screen" attracted capacity business at every performance. An especially appropriate added attraction on the stage contributed by the Ponce sisters and John D'Allesandro added much to the effectiveness of a bill that afforded a 100 per cent entertainment value.

MME. LILLIAN EVANTI, Colatura soprano, who will appear at the Belasco Sunday evening, November 21.

NEW PRICES AT BELASCO

L. Stoddard Taylor, manager of the Shubert-Belasco theater, today made the details of a proposed revolutionary change in the pricing of seats at his theater for plays that are brought here for presentation previous to their New York production.

Convinced that "theatergoers, in those cities outside of New York where new plays are tried out previous to going on Broadway, fail to patronize such theatrical offerings owing to the fact that the tickets for such plays cost just as much as do the seats for tried and established successes, Mr. Taylor believes it is the price and not the lack of New York endorsement that makes so many people stay away from the theater when a new play comes to town. Now comes a scale of prices comparable with those obtained in the years previous to the war. For the evening performance the price of orchestra seats will be $1.50, the balcony seats will be sold at $1 and the gallery price to be 50 cents only. Then a corresponding liberal reduction will obtain for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Both performances to be played at the same scale of prices, with the entire orchestra at $1; all the balcony, 75 cents, and the gallery to remain at 50 cents.

It is at least fifteen years since prices similar to the foregoing, arranged for the "Glamour" engagement in this city, have been in effect for a production of the magnitude of the one sponsored. Of course, the so-termed prewar prices will prevail only at such times as new plays, having been in effect, are presented at the Belasco theater.

URGE TO ACT MAKES STARS

In spite of the reputedly large salaries paid actors on the stage and screen, the money to be made is not the primary attraction for those who want to become actors.

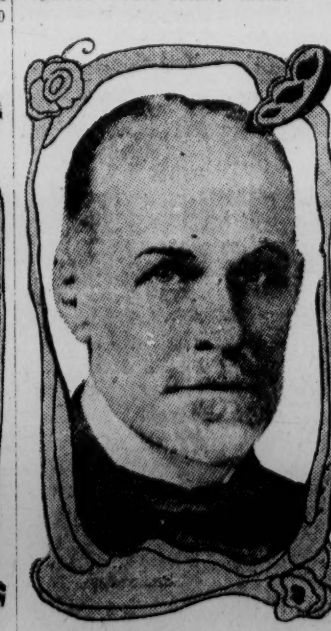

That is the declaration of Pat O'Malley, the popular screen leading man, whose latest work is in "Perch of the Devil," the feature at the Rialto this week.

"The men and women who really have the urge to act would do it no matter what salary they received," O'Malley declares. "The more prominent actors, it is true, are paid large salaries, salaries commensurate with their commercial value to the producers. But I am positive that it is not the hope of making big money that has drawn so many people to the stage and screen."

"A genuine actor loves his work, and will do it under any conditions, or in spite of any handicap or hardship. It is the same urge to create which makes men write for years before they have a word published. It was the urge which kept Joseph Hergesheimer writing fourteen years before he had a single story accepted."

"This is easily proven by the example of the stage actors who work year after year in little stock companies and road shows. Scores of them are paid a bare living wage. The hours are long and tiresome. They must rehearse one play while they are performing another, and they must work while others play."

"Yet they keep at it year after year because they want to do it. Most of them could earn more at other professions, yet no other occupation would satisfy them."

BURTON HOLMES, of "Travelogue" fame, who inaugurates his new series of lectures at the National theater Thursday afternoon.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

For many years producers have cast longing eyes at "Michael Strogoff," Jules Verne's world-famous story, but the difficulties involved turned them away disappointed. That is, until the societe des Cineromans undertook the work. It was a tremendous task. Eight months were consumed in making the picture, which comes to the Rialto next week. The producers of the picture were given every assistance by the Latvian government.

Thousands of extras were employed in the production. The group of nobles who made the court of Czar Alexander the most brilliant and extravagant the world has seen since the days of Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI have been put on the screen with a lushness in setting and costuming that is said to have never been surpassed. Russia in the period of the story was at the height of her glory, and to do things a la Russe was the vogue all over Europe.

The stage and screen presentation at Loew's Palace for the week starting next Sunday afternoon, November 14, will be "Aloma of the South Seas," starring Gilda Grey in Maurice Tourneur's Paramount production, which will be the chief screen feature, with Joe Thomas' saxophone kings of the saxophone, an atmospheric prologue, "Hawaiian Nights," featuring Princess Doreen and her South sea islanders, and the Leigh Harmonists, an ensemble melody group, as the principal stage attractions of the bill, supplemented by a splendid group of added program features.

Richard Dix, the dashing and popular Paramount star of "Too Many Kisses," "The Vanishing American," "Womanhanded," and other recent hits, will be presented in one of the greatest of the romantic ever brought to the screen, "The Quarterback," featuring Esther Ralston in a story by William Slavens McNutt and William O. McClellan. The football sequences were supervised by "Hurry" Yost, famous gridiron coach, and they are said to be among the most exciting ever filmed. A strong note of romance dominates the story, which is announced as the featured attraction at Loew's Columbia theater for the week starting next Sunday afternoon, November 14.

"Paradise," First National's picture of a story bearing the same name by Cosmo Hamilton, will bring Milton Sills to the screen at Crandall's Metropolitan theater next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3, in one of his most effective roles. The central figure in this exciting tale is the Hon. Anthony Fortescue-Stirling, more familiarly known as "Tony." This young man was forever getting into and out of scrapes. His father had long since given him up as a bad job and cast him adrift. Not until he met Christie, of vaudeville fame, at a fancy dress ball did he really find himself through the agency of a sincere and true love. The added stage attraction for next week at the Metropolitan will be contributed by the three Gladys sisters, singers and instrumentalists, who are known throughout the land as "The Aristocrats of Melody."

Doris Kenyon, Warner Baxter and May Allison appear in the foremost of First National's production of "Mismates," to be seen as chief feature of the bill at Crandall's Tivoli theater the first two days of next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3. An extra added attraction of this bill will be Esther Cutchen, Washington's concert pianist and Knabe-Ampico recording artist, who will appear on the stage in person and demonstrate the comparative values of her personal performance and its reproduction by the Ampico. On Tuesday and Wednesday, Reginald Denny will be the pictured star of the Tivoli's bill in "Take It From Me," his newest Universal release, which will be succeeded on Thursday and Friday by "Subway Sadie," First National's new vehicle for Dorothy Mackall, who is supported by Jack Mulhall, Charlie Murray and numerous others popular with devotees of silent drama. The added attraction will be the first installment of "The Collegians," a new series of two-reel comedy dramas. On Saturday only Buck Jones will be the pictured star in "Gentle Cydona" and the ninth installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

Milton Sills, supported by Betty Bronson, Noah Beery, Lloyd Whitlock, Kate Price, Claude King, Charlie Murray and numerous others of distinction, will be seen for the first time in Washington in the stellar role of First National's production of Cosmo Hamilton's "Paradise" at Crandall's Ambassador theater the first three days of next week, beginning Sunday afternoon at 3. The program also will embrace a variety of short reel subjects and pipe organ accompaniments and solo intervals by Mirabel J. Lindsay and Gertrude Kreiselman. On Wednesday and Thursday, next week Doris Kenyon, Warner Baxter and May Allison, supported by an excellent cast, will occupy the Ambassador screen in the principal roles of First National's production of "Mismates," which will be supplemented by a varied array of short reel added attractions and which, on Friday, will be succeeded by Laura La Plante in "Her Big Night." Saturday's attraction next week will be "Take It From Me," Universal's most recent vehicle for Reginald Denny. The bill also will include the eighth installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

The following feature bookings are announced for the week of November 14 at Crandall's Central theater: Sunday and Monday, William Fairbanks in "The Great Sentinel," Tuesday and Wednesday, Jetta Goudal, supported by William Boyd, in her first individual starring vehicle, "Her Man of War," Thursday and Friday, Patsy Miller with all-star support in "Broken Hearts of Hollywood." Saturday only, Johnny Hines and a distinguished cast in First National's production of "The Brown Derby." Each daily bill will be augmented by abbreviated camera subjects and accompanied by delightful pipe organ music.

Another strong bill is announced for the week of November 14, at the Earle theater. The headline attraction will be supported by Will Higgle and his Six Magnetic Misses in a distinctive offering and among other inclusions in the vaudeville portion of the entertainment will be Three Good Knights in "Barnyard Police," a comedy sketch, presenting an act which is described as "All In a Spirit of Jest." Ben Lyon and Harriet Lee in "One and Won Is To" and others of like importance. The photoplay feature of the week will be First National's picture of Arthur Richmond's stage play "The Far Cry" in which Blanche Sweet, Jack Mulhall, Myrtle Steadman, Hobart Bosworth, Leo White, Julia Swayne, Gordon John Sampson and Dorothy Reyer are prominently cast. The bill will be completed by the customary house features and orchestral and pipe organ embellishments.

Beginning next Sunday, November 14, the Ziegfeld "Follies," headed by James Barton and a host of single and double comedians and girls, will come to the National theater.

The novelties for this edition, acknowledged to be the greatest of them all, including the new musical "No Foolin'," by Gene Buck and James Hanley, and an exquisite score by Rudolf Friml, with lyrics by Irving Caesar, who wrote the songs for "No Foolin'." In addition to James Barton, principal comedian, are Ray Dooley, the child-terrible; Louise Brown, artist ballerina; Edna Leedom, the "Blonde Bombshell"; Charles King, Irving Fisher, Claire Luce, Polly Walker, Mary Jane, Accent and Janesko, Edna Covey, ballerina comique; Lew Christy, William H. Foster, a chorus of the most beautiful girls that Mr. Ziegfeld has ever glorified; and a group of celebrated figurantes appearing in special tableaux created by Ben Ali Haggin.

Joseph Urban, one of America's foremost designers, is responsible for the settings. Ned Wayburn staged the production.

The "Green Hat," with Katharine Cornell and the company that supported her for a year on Broadway, will come to the Belasco theater, beginning Monday, November 15, in a new production by Dorothy Mackall, who is supported by Jack Mulhall, Charlie Murray and numerous others popular with devotees of silent drama. The added attraction will be the first installment of "The Collegians," a new series of two-reel comedy dramas. On Saturday only Buck Jones will be the pictured star in "Gentle Cydona" and the ninth installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

AMBASSADOR BILL VARIED

Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes will be seen for the first time in Washington in the stellar roles of First National's picture of Owen Davis' stage success, "Forever After," at Crandall's Ambassador theater the first three days of next week, beginning this afternoon at 3 o'clock. In this subject is set forth the story of a poor youth in love with a rich girl and the impediment placed in the way of a successful consummation of his romantic dreams. The supplementary features of the program also will be varied.

"The Count of Luxembourg," a screen rendition of the opera of the same name will be shown at the Ambassador on Wednesday and Thursday with George Walsh in the title role. The story is of an actress who weds an impoverished count for the sake of his title in order that she may subsequently marry a duke. The supplementary comedy will be Mack Sennett's "A Sea Dog's Tale," and added subjects.

A special added attraction of noteworthy importance will be contributed to the bill by Esther Cutchen, Washington's concert pianist and Knabe-Ampico recording artist, who will appear on the stage in person Wednesday and Thursday.

On Friday Johnny Hines will occupy the Ambassador screen in "The Brown Derby." The story is of an actress who weds an impoverished count for the sake of his title in order that she may subsequently marry a duke. The supplementary comedy will be Mack Sennett's "A Sea Dog's Tale," and added subjects.

"The Campus Flirt," announced as chief feature of the bill for Saturday only, will bring Belle Daniels to the screen in one of her most engaging characterizations. Lise Conley will contribute a two-reel laugh maker, "Solid Gold," to the program, in addition to which a new release of Screen Snapshots will be shown as well as the latest installment of the mystery chapter play, "Snowed In."

"Ukulele Ike" Needs No Introduction

"Ukulele Ike," alias Cliff Edwards, to be presented as the special added attraction on the stage at Crandall's Metropolitan theater this week, needs no introduction to the National Capital. Mr. Edwards has long been a favorite of Washington's amusement lovers as a phonograph artist, a radio attraction and a star of the stage. He has appeared frequently on other Washington stages, but is particularly well cast at the Metropolitan this week since, in the early scenes of the picture which he will immediately precede, Hiram Cooley, in support of Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in First National's picture of Owen Davis' stage success, "Forever After," is an inveterate strummer of the Hawaiian national instrument. Could Mr. Cooley gaze from the screen upon Mr. Edwards' performance, he undoubtedly could learn a lot.

John Gilbert, who has the title role in King Vidor's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of the Rafael Sabatini romance, "Bardeley, the Magnificent," is featured in a new picture, "The Big Parade," which is being shown at the Metropolitan this week since, in the early scenes of the picture which he will immediately precede, Hiram Cooley, in support of Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in First National's picture of Owen Davis' stage success, "Forever After," is an inveterate strummer of the Hawaiian national instrument. "College Days," a picture of college life with a cast headed by Marceline Day will be the screen feature at the Strand theater commencing Sunday, November 14. She will then be featured in a picture of the same title, "College Days," which will be shown at the Strand theater commencing Sunday, November 14.

HOW SOUSA WRITES HIS HIT MARCHES

Must great work await upon inspiration or can it be done upon the spur of necessity? Lieut. Comdr. John Philip Sousa should know, because he has been the March King for the better part of a half century and without much question he is the master of the march form. But the famous band-master, who this season is making his thirty-fourth annual tour, says that almost as many of his famous marches have been written because he had to write a march as upon pure inspiration. And occasionally there has been a march which has been the result of a combination of the two circumstances.

Let us take a few examples. "Stars and Stripes Forever," without much doubt is the greatest of the Sousa marches. It was written aboard the S. S. Teutonic, in New York harbor, on a snowy day in 1896, when Sousa was returning from a long trip in Europe. "For two days I walked around the boat with a 200-piece brass band in my head," says Sousa. "When I got off the boat, I wrote it down as I had conceived it, and it is played to this day as it was first written."

On the other hand, there is "Semper Fidelis." It was written while Sousa was director of the United States Marine band, and it was written from necessity. At military reviews and formations like in Washington, it is customary for the Marine band to play "Hail to the Chief" as it marches past the presidential reviewing stand. Now "Hail to the Chief" is short and fast, and having been originally a Scotch "boating song," it has no "give" to it. So Sousa asked permission of President Arthur to write a new composition to take its place.

"Semper Fidelis" was the result and it was deliberately written so that the trumpet band and drums would be playing the precise moment that the band passed the reviewing stand. "Semper Fidelis" is now the official march of the United States Marine Corps, and heard here on all State occasions. An example of the combination of necessity and inspiration is "Liberty Bell." Sousa, who was spending the summer of 1893 in Philadelphia, preparing for his first tour at the head of his own organization, was seeking an idea for a new march to be featured during his tour. Mrs. Sousa brought him the news that his son, John Philip Sousa, Jr., now a New York business man, that day had marched in a procession of school children in Independence Hall, to see the Liberty Bell. Sousa sat down and wrote a march.

"High School Cadets" was written for a local military organization and brought $25. "The Washington Post" was written to be played at the awarding of prizes in an essay contest for school children, conducted by this paper. "Imperial Edward" was written upon the inspiration of a "recommence" performance before King Edward VII. of Sandringham, and was written and played in two days. "King Cotton" was six months in the writing. "Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" was written when Sousa was initiated into the order and "United States Field Artillery" was written for first liberty loan parade at the beginning of the world war. John Philip Sousa and his band will give two concerts here in the Washington auditorium the afternoon and night of November 19.

Musical Hours

Changed at Metro

In response to numerous requests from the portion of the theater going public which finds it difficult to reach a playhouse at 11 o'clock in the morning, the first session played at Crandall's Metropolitan theatre by the Metropolitan Ramblers under the leadership of Milton Davis has been set back to 12 o'clock noon in order that it may be enjoyed by a maximum number of patrons. Instead of playing from 11 to 1:30 p. m., the Ramblers now are heard from 12 to 2:30, which brings them to the hour when the Metropolitan symphony, under the conductorship of Daniel Breeskin occupies the pit. This change offers patrons of the Metropolitan six hours of de luxe entertainment. With the Ramblers playing the first two hours and a half of the afternoon and the Metropolitan symphony the ensuing hours up to 5 p. m., when the Ramblers resume until 7:30, the matinee sessions provide continuous orchestral music and two presentations of the de luxe performances, including the stage attraction. The stage offering is presented at approximately 3:30 and 5:30 daily, thus providing what is termed in the vernacular the "supper show" the same wealth of enjoyment as characterizes the mid-afternoon and mid-evening performances.

Old Silver Tea Balls

Once Used for Perfume

When the modern hostess uses a silver tea ball on her perambulating tea wagon, she's just copying the dandies of Paris 80 years ago. Only—they used the same apparatus for perfume.

This was discovered with the arrival from Paris of the outfit of a French aristocrat of the times for "La Boheme." Lillian Gish's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, which opens at the Strand today. Among the relics is an exact counterpart of the modern appliance for making tea.

It is a small silver container, hanging by three silver chains to a finger ring. The owner wears the ring, the little ball dangling down. It is filled with perfume, and tiny holes release this, much on the principle of an atomizer.

Roy D'Arcy as Paul, the boulevardier, wore this in the new Gish picture, as well as other sartorial splendors. The new picture, based on the famous story from which the opera was composed, plays Miss Gish as the tragic Mimi, with John Gilbert as Rodolphe, her poet lover, and a large supporting cast, including Renee Adoree, Edward Everett Horton, Gino Corrado and other well-known players.

WISE CRACKS COMEDY STAR

W. C. Fields, the former "Follies" comedian, and "Shorty" Hamilton, his former comedy partner on the stage, nearly came to a parting of the ways after a close friendship of years standing, during the making of a sequence for Fields' latest Paramount comedy, "So's Your Old Man," which comes to Loew's Palace this afternoon for a week's engagement.

In "So's Your Old Man" there is a comedy golf sequence and in order to get full comedy value out of it, Fields persuaded "Shorty" to act the part he acted with Fields on the stage.

The two of them lined up at the first tee. Alice Joyce, one of the featured players, hovered in the background and Director Gregory La Cava stood beside the cameras. "Shorty's" countenance was undisturbed by anything except a set of deep wrinkles, a squint, and more than a slight growth of beard.

"There's something funny about your face," commented the star. "You never won any beauty prize yourself," responded his caddy.

"I didn't mean it that way," explained Fields. "You don't look right. Your nose is all shiny."

"Nothing new about that," was "Shorty's" reply.

Fields looked again. "Why, you haven't any make-up on!" he ejaculated.

"Shorty" gazed up and repressed a smile. He seemed undecided as to whether Fields was serious or just joking. Then Director La Cava broke in.

"Fields is right, 'Shorty,' you need a little powder. If you leave your nose that way there's sure to be some halation in the camera."

Hamilton dropped his golf clubs and remarked:

"Now I know we're making a comedy. Too bad there isn't an audience to applaud these wise cracks."

London Liked Jack Smith, The Whispering Baritone

Perhaps the adjective which best describes the voice of Jack Smith, that "whispering baritone" voice which is somehow so different from all other baritones in the world, is "persuasive."

And perhaps this quotation from the London Daily News will more definitely explain the sudden popularity of this engaging young man, the season's latest celebrity:

"It was half-past one in the morning. Most of the supper parties in the restaurant were thinking of going home. A pink carnation that had begun to look tired around the edges seemed to symbolize one's feelings. Then a brisk man—youngish rather than young—stepped across the floor space cleared for the dancers, and sat down at the piano. He began to play and sing——quiet little ditties that didn't seem to matter much. But there was something about the man absurdly attractive. He had a jolly kind of smile that suggested a boy on a fishing expedition. His voice was persuasive, which singing voices seldom are. He freighted his frail barque of sentimental song with just as much emotion as it could carry without going under, and then—how can one explain these things—he sets every one singing after him. Not blaring, but singing softly and, so to speak, sincerely. Real community singing at 1:30 a. m. in the West End. One might have been tired, but forgot it."

That is what Mayfair thinks of Jack Smith, appearing this week at B. F. Keith's theater.

One Comedy "Bit."

One of the laughable bits of comedy relief injected into King Vidor's production of "Bardelys, the Magnificent," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is presenting for a second week at Loew's Columbia this afternoon, is afforded by John Gilbert and George K. Arthur in which the latter, as a boastful, bantam-like aristocratic firebrand, challenges John Gilbert, as Bardelys, to a duel, and is disarmed by Bardelys with only a walking stick for a weapon.

Camera Tricks.

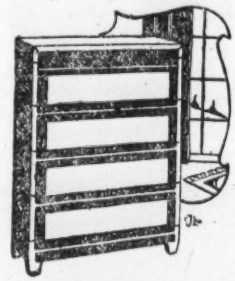

The same clever camera trickery that King Vidor employed in "The Big Parade" to give John Gilbert the appearance of having lost a leg in action was employed again by Vidor in his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Bardelys, the Magnificent," which starts its second week at Loew's Columbia this afternoon, to produce the illusion of John Gilbert running his sword through Roy D'Arcy, who has the role of the villainous Chatelleraut in the picture.

MONTH SEES ART SEASON MAKE DEBUT

By ADA RAINEY.

WITH the beginning of November the art season is well started. Three new exhibitions have to be chronicled this week. The Phillips memorial gallery was opened to the public Tuesday. The large gallery remains the same as when it closed last June. But in the "little gallery" there are to be seen paintings by George Lusk, which will be on view until November 29, every Tuesday, Saturday and Sunday afternoons from 2 until 6 o'clock.

A "Sinking Boy" is one of the finest pieces of figure and still life painting that one could find many a long day. The white against white of the boy's suit against the table cloth is managed with a sure touch not often met with. It is strong, yet mellow with a convincing realism that one wants to see more of. "The Blue Devils on Fifth Avenue," with its brilliant strokes of light cutting across the street and the blue of the uniforms of the "devils," the French "tricolor" and the Stars and Stripes as important spots of color is a dramatic transcript of a picturesque occurrence.

The blues, greens and violets of this canvas, the portrait of Col. Bridau and "Ducks—Morris Canal" form a group of three that is rich in color values and in harmony. Through all the paintings one is gripped by a strong individuality that is not to be set aside. Lusk has humor, bravura, vitality and imagination.

Special interest attaches itself to him at present as he has just received again the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Loran prize given at the Chicago Art Institute exhibition of American painting and sculpture for his painting, "The Player."

Second Time. This is the second time Mr. Lusk has been the recipient of the Loran prize. He received it in 1920 for the portrait mentioned above of Otis Skinner in his great role.

Mr. Phillips in his excellent forward says: "Of Dutch stock, Lusk was born in a coal town of Pennsylvania, where he himself worked as a breaker boy. In recent years he has returned to the scene of his boyhood to paint the stark desolation of mining towns yielding him grim humor and dramatic suggestion. He studied first at the Pennsylvania academy and later in Dusseldorf, Paris and London."

"Even in his student days he was a dazzling executant when in the right mood. For little children he has a genuine affection and a humorous understanding. He has painted walls and witches, adventurers and derelicts, with the stylistic caricature of a Charles Dickens, the same smiling artifice and imagination. When in full swing he can paint as well as Courbet, surpassing him in space composition and his rival in rich impasto, pond-rable form acceptance of life for its own sake, and hold commentary from the self-centered painter's point of view."

More Beautiful. The other paintings in the Phillips memorial gallery are equally beautiful the more one sees them. There are gems here that should be seen again and again. For instance, the lovely Corot, "A Dairy Farm," is an exquisite example of the great Frenchman's genius. "Marguerite Gerard," sister-in-law of Fragonard, and painted by him, is an unusual side to Fragonard's art.

The famous Renoir still dominates the room, presumably the most important of the artist's paintings, and here are two typical examples of Claude Monet and Paul Cezanne, "Road to the Valley Vellin" and "Mount St. Victor," which are representative of these famous artists at their best. The three wood and metal altar pieces of the sixteenth century, and other carved wood mirrors of the Louis XVI period.

Unerring Taste.

All Miss Bartlett's selections in the arts and crafts, as well as in the larger pieces, are chosen with discrimination, and she has an unerring taste in crafts work. She has been a member of the Arts and Crafts society several years.

In her new shop at 1603 Connecticut avenue can be seen some silver jewelry of Florentine design. There are crosses, chains, pendants and rings of modified designs of the Renaissance by Peruzzi Pini, a Florentine silversmith who is an excellent craftsman. Some of the pieces are set with lapis and carnelian and other semiprecious stones which add color interest.

The pottery of Newcomb college in New Orleans has attracted well earned praise for the excellent lines of the pieces, the original designs and the color of the ceramics. There are here a few choice pieces by Leona Nicholson, who is a master craftsman and proves her worth to the title in some lovely bowls of turquoise blue and related hues that suggest the old color of the early Chinese potteries.

Opens With Tea.

The first exhibit at the Arts club opened with a reception and tea last week. The work shown is that done by painter members of the club during the summer. This will be on view until November 13. There are several new artists who are showing here for the first time. It is good to welcome new artists who have done good work, and so increase the interest.

Has Good Color.

In the lower room is an excellent painting by L. Sleeth, "Cicilian Village, Moveland." There is good color and construction which holds the interest. There is much more solid construction in this than in the paintings previously shown by Mrs. Sleeth. A free and spontaneous water color, without a title, over the mantel, by Margaret Lent is pleasant.

There is a water color by Will Hutchins that also shows much more freedom than usual with this artist. The two works by Mary S. Lukens Myers are attractive in color and design. Annie D. Kelly has "The Bridge at Antietam Creek," which also shows increased interest and skill.

In the upper room the painting hung in the place of honor is "In the Path of Man," by Margaret Zimble. This is rather lifeless in color, but good in composition, while her "The Turn of the Road" has a soft quality that is attractive. Mrs. E. J. R. Smith, one of the new exhibitors, has "Keewaydin Haven, Maine," which has much color interest. "Rocks and Pool," by Della Mae Hyde, is vital. "The Octagon House," by May Marshall, lacks atmosphere, and the black and white sketch by Marian Lane, "Rocky Highlands—Ogunquit," is well drawn.

Three Small Oils.

The three small oils by Arthur F. Musgrave are vivacious, brilliant in coloring and well composed. This opening exhibition is a pleasant record of the result of the summer's work, which the painters have accomplished, and shows that the autumn's exhibitions have begun auspiciously.

There is to be a sketch club to be started and to which all the artist members of the club may have the advantage of joining. Miss Hattie Burdette can be communicated with for further details. One of the club, which will be held in the club rooms.

Mrs. George Cabot Lodge recently gave a bronze statue to the club. It is by Grady. Mrs. C. L. Veerhoff, chairman of the art section of the Twentieth Century club, will conduct a party of the club members to the Sesqui-centennial in Washington, D. C., which will depart Friday. The foreign building will be the first one visited and the party will see the panels painted by Violet Oakley for the Pennsylvania building. The panels by Miss Oakley are attracting a great deal of interest and are remarkable work. The party will return here the same evening.

ORIGIN OF REPUBLICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT. By Oscar S. Straus. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

It is always a keenly interesting matter to trace a government to its source, and sometimes the roots are found to be in strange soil. In "Origin of Republican Form of Government" Oscar S. Straus brings out the little-known fact that the Hebrew commonwealth of Biblical times was the first federal republic. As Mr. Straus justly claims, "The book will be of value to the student of political history and to the general reader as well."

With considerable ingenuity Mr. Straus has traced reflections of the Mosaic code in the early constitutions of the New England colonies. He is philosophy wrapped in the student of political history and to the general reader as well.

STAR GATHERER. By Jamie Sexton Holme. (Harold Vinal, New York.)

The lyric poem appears to be coming into its own again after a weary season of verse libre and the quasi-narrative poem. This is well, for there is a true poetic quality about lyric verse that redeems even mediocre examples from absolute uninterest. "Star Gatherer" has the element of poetry—that elusive will-o'-wisp of literature which so many almost but never grasp.

The themes are not elaborate and uninteresting, just the ones that usually attract the poetic eye and seem as music to the ear of the poet, great and small, who is attuned to the fine harmonies of the soul. There is philosophy wrapped in this sweet form of verse can be seen in the poem entitled "Escape."

A hint comes now and then of Rupert Brooke as one turns the pages of "Star Gatherer." It is a kinship of spirit between these poets—rather than any actual literary resemblance. Mrs. Holme, like Brooks, must have faced life else how could she have written such gleams of thought. There is poignant sadness in this one.

AFTER.

All is said and done now, our time of love is over—

We have kissed and said farewell, you and I—

But I can not hear a lark sing in the clover,

I can not hear a meadow-lark and keep my eyes dry.

I will find a new love, the old one forsaking—

I will shed no tears for what was so sweet—

But I can not keep my wilful heart from breaking—

When I see young moon above a field of wheat.

AROUND THE WORLD IN 28 DAYS. By Linton Wells. (Houghton Mifflin Co., New York.)

As interesting and fascinating as any novel, this story details the events of the epic race around the world against time as undertaken last June by Edward S. Evans, Detroit business man, and Linton Wells, reporter and adventurer. Happily the author has hit upon the theme of the Mexican war period, in which he gave an account of himself, du Pont continued to acquire himself well. His big opportunity came in the civil war, however. As commander of the south Atlantic blockading squadron he received the thanks of Congress—which never are lightly given—and was appointed a rear admiral to rank from July 16, 1862. In the naval attack on Charleston, S. C., which he led, du Pont again displayed genius of a high order, even though it was not entirely successful. Out of this issue developed the controversy with Secretary Welles.

The civil war cost Rear Admiral du Pont his life, for on June 23, 1865, he died, regretted by his countrymen and certain of a high place in American history.

The author has written dispassionately and with a firm regard for historical values. His volume will take its place with leading books on the history of the American navy.

J. DOWD GIVES DISTINCT CONTRIBUTION TO STUDY OF AMERICAN NEGRO LIFE

A distinct contribution to the study of the negro is "The Negro in American Life," by Jerome Dowd (The Century Co., New York). The author is professor of sociology of the University of Oklahoma and his book is the result of his studies and mature judgment on the matters involved over a period of 25 years.

First of all, Prof. Dowd paints the background of the negro race in Africa. There as in America they showed remarkable aptitude to assimilate civilization. He traces the rise of the slave trade in the Dark Continent and calls attention to the fact that from the earliest historic times slaves had been transported from that land into other countries.

Prof. Dowd, speaking of slave-owning days in the United States, recalls that the South alone did not hold slaves in colonial times, but that "at the close of the seventeenth century negro slavery had become an established institution in all of the original thirteen colonies except Georgia." Its introduction was due to the same cause in all the colonies, the impossibility of obtaining free labor.

Cites Industrial Life. The author discusses the industrial life of the negro in the North, and states that "wherever negroes have come to be employed in skilled labor it has been to the interest of the unions to admit them, or at least to encourage them to organize unions of their own."

As a political factor Prof. Dowd comes to the conclusion that the negro loses much of his potential force by the fact that "negroes always vote one way." He declared that the present negro vote is large enough to hold the balance of power in Indiana, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and Delaware, and could turn the scale of the presidential vote in any of those States.

Nor does Prof. Dowd lack for an explanation of the current belief that "the negro commits more crime in the North than in the South." He says this discredits neither the North nor the negro, because "it merely illustrates the truth that black and white alike are influenced unfavorably by the city environment."

Chicago Crime Told.

He analyzes the report of the Chicago commission on race relations. And points out "in the first place, Chicago is the most criminal city in the civilized world. It harbors 10,000 professional criminals and has more murders each year than England and Wales with its 38,000,000 population," and that even as Chicago attracts white criminals it also attracts negro criminals.

It is pleasant to look on the other side of the picture and discover that the negroes are chiefly engaged in cultivation of the soil. For in 1924, 74.7 per cent of them lived in the country, 10 per cent less, however, than 34 years before that time. Of these negroes engaged in agriculture, 76.6 per cent are tenants and 23.2 per cent owners. The value of the land owned by negro farmers of the South in 1920 was $522,178,137. The negroes raise 39 per cent of the cotton crop of the United States, 3.5 per cent of the corn, 9 per cent of the rice, 21 per cent of the sweet potatoes, and 10 per cent of the tobacco.

The situation as regards education also is encouraging.

Are Less Illiterate.

In the matter of literacy the negroes have done well. Between 1880 and 1920 the negroes reduced their illiteracy from 70 per cent to 22.9 per cent. This is a record any race might be proud of. Institutions for higher learning are creating a group of negro leaders and the author states that from the standpoint of numbers "negroes of the South are better provided with institutions of higher learning than the whites, many of them being supported by the negroes."

Religious feeling and membership among negroes compares most favorably with the same matters where other races are concerned. Independent negro churches have been organized in some of the denominations, notably in the Baptist and Methodist, with 3,000,000 members in the negro Baptist churches and 1,000,000 in the negro Methodist churches. About 600,000 negroes belong to white denominations. Most of the negro members of white churches reside in the Northern States, except the members of the Roman Catholic church, who are mostly residents of Louisiana.

The world war record of the negro also is discussed in detail.

Book Notes

A prize of $100 offered by the woman poets under the auspices of the Poetry Society of America, for the best book of poems written by a member of the society during 1925, has been awarded to Lew Saret for his book, "Slow Smoke," published by Henry Holt & Co. The judges were Daniel Henderson, chairman; Mrs. May Riley Smith and Harry Sampson.

The membership of the society, of which Arthur Guitman is president, includes most of the leading poets of America. The woman poets is an affiliated group. Of the four books of poetry finally considered by the judges, three were by Western poets. They were Nelard's "Song of the Indian Wars," Leonard's "Two Lives," and Saret's "Slow Smoke." The remaining book was Torrence's "Hesperides."

Saret's book, the chairman of the committee states, "appealed to the judges as the highest and even excellence of its lyrical and narrative poetry, its intimacy with earth, its singing quality, limpid beauty and tenderness."

"Also 'Slow Smoke' seemed to the committee a book of outstanding significance because in it the poet has so freshly and charmingly interpreted wilderness life."

"The Present War in Germany" by Friedrich Engels is another book on the fall list of International Publishers. In this graphic treatment of the neglected phase of German history the author analyzes the social and economic forces which brought about the peasant revolts and their relations to the reformations. The lessons drawn from this book throw a revealing light upon present-day restlessness among the farming and peasant classes in various parts of the world. This is the first time the book has been translated into English.

On foreign service young du Pont had some interesting experiences, meeting many notables. He rose steadily in the esteem of his fellow officers, and in rank, and in due time fell in love with his first cousin, Sophie Madeleine du Pont de Nemours, whom he married June 27, 1833. The match was a happy one, but there were no children.

In 1838 Lieut. du Pont was ordered to the U. S. Ohio, then regarded as one of the finest vessels of the navy. He served on it until 1841, when he returned to the United States. In 1842 he was promoted commander and his rise was rapid after that.

Passing through the Mexican war period, in which he gave an account of himself, du Pont continued to acquire himself well. His big opportunity came in the civil war, however. As commander of the south Atlantic blockading squadron he received the thanks of Congress—which never are lightly given—and was appointed a rear admiral to rank from July 16, 1862. In the naval attack on Charleston, S. C., which he led, du Pont again displayed genius of a high order, even though it was not entirely successful. Out of this issue developed the controversy with Secretary Welles.

The civil war cost Rear Admiral du Pont his life, for on June 23, 1865, he died, regretted by his countrymen and certain of a high place in American history.

The author has written dispassionately and with a firm regard for historical values. His volume will take its place with leading books on the history of the American navy.

Yesterday's Luxuries are Today's Necessities

Practically Every Family Will Find the Second Car Today Almost as Essential as the First One Was When They Bought It. Automobile Prices Are So Low....Today.... and Values So High, That Economy Suggests Keeping a Car Only Three or Four Years Old in the Family.

YOU have driven the old car only three or four years . . . still lots of good in it. Why trade it in? No matter how good it is, in view of the present-day prices for good automobiles you will not get a great deal for it. Keep the old car . . . and get a new one, too! The new ones are a delight and inspiration to handle—with mechanical refinements and engineering perfections that are simply beyond comparison.

Incidentally, if Friend Wife hasn't been driving, it is no small advantage to have her learn on the old car. Two cars in the family now, probably at less cost . . . figuring the old one at what you would have secured for it in a "trade-in" . . . than the old car cost originally. The family can market or visit or go on picnics or where they will—and you have the pleasure . . . transportation speed . . . the business advantage of the new one.

Automobile values are undoubtedly the highest today in the history of automobiles—and prices the lowest. The engineering and merchandising marvel of all ages is in present automobile prices . . . lower, always lower . . . despite mounting labor costs and other costs in all directions. The advertising columns of The Washington Post are an exceedingly sound guide to the best values in old cars and new ones. Watch The Post for the real values in motordom.

To the Family Without a Car—

An automobile is an advantage to you, both in the health of your family, in its greater enjoyment and pleasure of life, and more than likely to yourself from many business angles. Beyond doubt the family "furnished" with an automobile get very much more out of life. If you, like the wife mentioned above, would rather learn and cut your "automobile eye-teeth" on a used car, you will find the classified columns of The Washington Post a dependable guide.

Hints to Local Dealers—

Readers of The Washington Post—the large majority—are financially able to buy the automobiles, tires or accessories which their fancy and judgment dictates. In tens of thousands of homes this great morning newspaper has been an intimate friend, practically counselor and advisor, for nearly 50 years. The prestige, character and general type of The Post helps acceptance of its advertising messages in the homes which it serves.

Consequently it is to your interest to see that advertising of automobiles, equipment or accessories which you sell be consistently placed in The Washington Post.

PRECIOUS METALS VITALLY IMPORTANT TO ELECTRICAL ART

Platinum, Gold and Silver Have Helped Growth of Phone Service.

250 ALLOYS TRIED OUT FOR CONTACT MATERIAL

Large Saving Is Effected Through Adoption of Standard Product by Industry.

Gold, silver and platinum—three of the world's most precious metals—play an important part in telephone service. Gold and silver have been of service to mankind since time immemorial, but platinum is a newer metal, not having been generally known until early in the nineteenth century.

Notwithstanding the fact that gold and silver are two of the oldest metals known, platinum was the first one to be used in the electrical business. This metal has been used for the making and breaking of electric circuits practically from the very beginning of the electrical art. In the museum of the Bell Telephone Laboratories there is a telephone key manufactured prior to 1859, which is equipped with platinum contacts, and in the very first telephone equipment it was used for a similar purpose.

The rapidly increasing demand for platinum during the last quarter of the century in the jewelry, dental, chemical and electrical industries, in which the telephone industry took its part, was attended by a rapidly rising price. This emphasized the fact that it was highly desirable to have a platinum substitute for contacts which would be available in greater quantities and could be purchased at a lower price. Accordingly, as early as 1906, and in 1907, fundamental work on the problem of satisfactory substitutes was started in the telephone laboratories.

250 Alloys Investigated.

In this investigation, approximately 250 alloys covering various combinations of gold, silver, platinum, representative of the so-called noble metals, and iron and nickel, representative of the so-called base metals, were developed and individually investigated. Some of the alloys were made up of two and some of three metals in various proportions. The method employed was first to form alloys, each composed of metals whose physical constants satisfied one or more of the requirements for a contact metal, and then to test contacts made of these alloys under circuit conditions corresponding to those which would be met in practice. Observations were made on contact resistance, pitting and erosion.

Out of a long series of tests with these metals and alloys came an alloy of gold, silver and platinum in specified proportions having desirable features, and an alloy of gold and silver alone, and still another involving the metal palladium. Service trials of the gold, silver and platinum alloy were made in representative machine switchboard circuits and also in portions of machine switching equipment.

Large Savings Expected.

The result of these field and laboratory investigations was an accumulation of important fundamental data on electrical contact phenomena. The success of the gold, silver and platinum alloy—No. 1 contact metal, as it is called—warranted its wide use, and at the present time is being used in approximately 95 per cent of all phone relays and keys.

Comparing what is today with what was yesterday is the obvious method of determining such progress as has been made. If the telephone engineers do this in the case of contact metals and compare the actual cost to date with what would have been the total expense, provided cheaper contact metals had not been developed and spot-welding methods devised, it is estimated that the savings which have accrued from these developments in the interval since 1914 to be about $30,000,000. In each tiny contact, smaller than the head of a pin, the individual saving is of course inappreciable, but on account of the great numbers of relay and key contacts necessary in the telephone plant this large saving becomes possible.

Siberia Gets Giant American Dredge

A monster American dredge, weighing 3,000 tons and filling 75 freight cars when it left the factory in this country, is now on its nine-month journey by sea, rail and boat and by 200 miles of overland portage to a spot in the heart of Asia, where it will begin next summer scooping gold-bearing earth out of the Lena river in Siberia near the Mongolian border.

This giant digger will operate by electric power, gnawing at the bottom of the stream with its endless chain of 101 steel buckets capable of excavating 17 cubic feet of sand and gravel in each bucket at a depth as great as 80 feet. It will increase the speed and lower the cost of mining to a point that will make it economically possible for companies to operate in the Lena river Siberian mining field.

Current Cost Falls.

The cost today of electricity for illumination is about 1 1/2 per cent less than it was in 1915, in spite of the fact that equipment, labor and fuel that go into the manufacture of current all cost more. The price has dropped because more current is used and it is made in greater quantity by larger and more efficient plants, with a demand of greater diversity, and spread over more hours of the day.

Electric League Briefs

By N. H. BARNES, Assistant Secretary

The executive committee of the Electric League will hold one of the most important meetings of its career, tomorrow at 12:30 p. m., in dining room B of the City Club. Members of the executive committee are L. T. Souder, J. C. Harding, Joseph Kirchner, E. R. Bateman, R. P. Gibson, P. A. Davis, C. D. Kenney, A. Dressner, F. B. Dillon, F. T. Shull, C. P. Hill, H. R. Carroll, G. P. Mangan and J. H. Potts. One of the matters to be taken up at this meeting is the presentation of recommendations from the business promotion committee from H. P. Foley, its chairman. These recommendations involve the future activity of the Electric League's business promotion work, and will profit of the very great interest to all of the members of the executive committee as well as to the full membership of the league.

Various groups and committees of the Electric League have had one of the most active months of their career. At least six meetings of the electrical interests of the city have been held, and all of them are indications of activity.

The Electric League fixture dealers' group, which has increased in three times its former size within the last month, held a meeting in the office of P. A. Davis, its chairman, Tuesday night. All of the fixture dealer members of the league were represented at the meeting.

The nonunion contractors' group of the Electric League last week elected new officers and representatives on the executive committee. L. L. Hayes, retiring chairman, has announced that R. P. Gibson has been elected as chairman and Bob Smith secretary of the group. Names of the executive committee members will be announced later.

On Thursday night the Electric League will hold a general meeting, which will be the last one for this year. The league has progressed far during the past year, and it is expected that its 1927 plan will be even more aggressive and important than those that have gone before. All group chairmen, committee members and officers are urging every one to be sure to attend the meeting Thursday night. It is to be full of the most interesting information and reports of action that have been given for some time.

At the meeting each of the groups of the league will announce the election of their executive committee members for 1927. At the next meeting in December, officers for the coming year will be elected.

No merchant in Washington who aggressive would let his show windows become dirty, nor his store-front to be unattractive. But every merchant is pushed to be looking after a large number of different matters, and it is sometimes that the detail of proper maintenance of the electric sign is overlooked. Electric signs, it is generally conceded in business fields, draw business. The proper care of these silent salesmen is essential. With these thoughts guiding him, L. L. Hayes, electrical contractor, who has for years specialized in electric signs and their erection, has organized the Washington Sign Service Co. for the purpose of taking care of electric signs. Mr. Hayes says that his sales organization in this work is being received with open arms by most merchants.

The Electric Bowling league is enjoying one of the most successful seasons of any of the leagues in the city. There are some rather good bowlers in the league, but none of the city's outstanding good bowlers are in it. It is in no way a commercial or professional project. Electrical men get together each Wednesday night to participate in the activities of bowling for the social intercourse with their fellows in business, and there is much joy derived.

The union contractors' group of the Electric League held an important meeting, which was one of the best attended so far, on last Wednesday. L. T. Souder, chairman of the group, will make a report of the actions taken and which are of interest to the league at large at the meeting of the executive committee tomorrow.

Telephones between Washington and the New York office of the Society for Electrical Development have been somewhat hot during the last few weeks. H. P. Foley, chairman of the business promotion committee, has been after full information concerning the market development plan.

The Home Electric closed last Sunday, after having all of the builders in the city and a large number of others as visitors. E. S. Cassidy happily supervised the removal of the equipment, with the assistance of R. P. Harrington, who was in charge of the electrical devices in the home. The various subcommittee chairmen are making their reports to G. P. Mangan, chairman of the Home Electric committee, and all reports point to the complete success of the operation, although there was some bad weather during its display.

J. C. Harding, Charles H. Evans and several of the other members of the Electric League, with fine electrical stores, are starting to announce the importance of giving something electrical for Christmas. There are many fine electrical appliances that will prove ornamental, make beautiful gifts, and prove useful every day in the year, for ever.

DECLARES ELECTRICITY KEEPS FOOD FRESHER

Modern Methods Change
Summers: Cooks Desserts to Last Two Days.

By SHIRLEY ELEANOR DAVE.

"Well, of all questions to ask me, a perfect stranger, what I know about electric refrigeration! I do know something about it, though," an Illinois woman told me when I met her in a small town hotel.

"Our farm is six miles from Rockford, on a dirt road that gets hubbiped with mud in the spring thaw. I go into town twice a week for fruit, meat and staples, and enjoy it, but before I had this refrigerator I'm going to tell you about I always hesitated to get more than we could use in a few days because it gets mighty hot and food spoils quickly.

"Each year it has been harder to get ice. We have lots of company through the summer, and I'm rather proud of my reputation as a cook, but it takes good fresh food to turn out good victuals.

"Last summer one of my grandchildren got sick. She likes snow pudding so well I made a special dish of it for her and she'd go to the ice box a couple of times a day and help herself. I guess, without any one noticing it—you see, I had so much food in the box that the temperature wasn't low enough to keep it all in good condition. Lots of folks don't know that you must have steady cold to preserve food. It took typhoid fever and special nurses to teach us that.

Then Came the Electric.

"Well, the power line goes near our place, so my boys had my ice box fitted up by the electric company with machinery that keeps a steady cold, no matter whether there is much or little food in the box. When every shelf is full it takes a little more 'juice,' I guess, but I never worry about that. I'm thankful that after all these years all I have to do is to press a button and wink at the foxy old sun.

"You should see the quantities of food I buy now and keep a week, ten days and even longer. If my box were bigger I'd buy more—especially meat, for it's better after aging awhile.

"I make frozen desserts from recipes in the book that the power company gave me, and I plan to cook enough one day to serve the next couple of days dressed up with a different sauce or changed some way.

"As a rule I'm not excitable, but in answering your sudden question I wanted you to see for yourself how completely electric refrigeration has changed the summers for me. It used to mean endless work and scheming just to get food and care for it. Now I'm as near being a lady of leisure as I ever want to be."

ELECTRIC LIGHT GROUP AIMS AT BETTER WIRING

Association and Electragists Hold Joint Meeting to Aid

IS ALONG RED SEAL PLAN

The service which people get out of electricity depends to so large an extent on the wiring in house and office and factory walls that several new movements have been started lately to improve wiring generally. The latest of these is the joint committee activities now in progress between the National Electric Light association, which is made up mainly of power and light companies, and the Association of Electragists, whose membership consists of wiring contractors and dealers.

The joint committee met recently in New York city to investigate present trends in wiring and to propose methods for improvement along the lines of the Red Seal plan for house wiring which now is spreading throughout the country to assure house owners of adequate wiring and outlets for proper lighting and the full use of electric appliances. The Red Seal plan is sponsored by the Society for Electrical Development.

The Electragists independently also are making a committee study in order to set up a definition of quality standards of wiring. The National Electric code, enforced in most parts of the country, already covers questions of safety, the Red Seal plan assures adequacy and the Electragists hope to create some sort of scale by which a builder or property owner can specify quality in the wiring he buys.

Why Is an Outlet?

Illustrated in the upper right and lower left hand corners of this advertisement you see them—convenience outlets. And thereby hangs a tale—a truthful one!

It's a story of foresight and progressive-ness which has always distinguished the electrical industry. At one time the housewife was willing to undertake what almost approached acrobatics in order to connect electrical appliances to a lamp socket. Gone forever are those days—few as they were. Each individual convenience outlet—whether it decorates wall, baseboard or floor—creates comforts in astounding array for all who use it!

For you, outlets make it easy to "plug in" appliances which permit you to cook, clean, wash, sew, iron, be entertained. They bring service of the highest order at the lowest cost possible.

Have plenty of outlets arranged conveniently throughout your home in which to "plug-in" the many electrical appliances which have become ESSENTIALS for every home. Your neighborhood electrical contractor will surprise you agreeably with his low estimate for this work. ## PLUMBING COURSE AT ABBOTT SCHOOL BACKED BY TRADE

Employers and Unions Aid
Day and Night Classes in Vocational Training.

PRACTICAL WORK LINKED TO THEORETICAL STUDY

Enrollment Adjusted to Meet Demand for Workers in Various Lines.

The age-old problem of finding out what one is best suited to do for a lifetime, now termed vocational guidance, is being solved in a very matter-of-fact way daily at the Abbott Vocational school, Fifth and New York avenue northwest. Plumbing, painting, sheet metal work, printing and drawing are a few of the trades which may be studied at this school. Classes are held both day and night and any pupil 14 years old who has completed work in the sixth grade may enter this school. If the boy finds that he does not like the trade he has elected to study for, he can change to another trade or he can leave the school and return to the regular grade school from which he came with no loss of credit and a negligible loss of time.

Plumbing is the latest trade taught at the school. This class is taught by Louis Conradis, 221 Rhode Island avenue northwest, who for 30 years has been head of the plumbing firm that bears his name. Mr. Conradis retired from the business to teach the plumbing class that was opened last February. A night class in plumbing was started last month.

There are 34 boys in the day class and 80 men and boys in the night class. The night class is for those actually engaged in the plumbing trade and the instruction offered there is largely theoretical, while the instruction in the day class aims to be practical.

Better Plumbers Sought.
"The purpose of the school is not so much to make plumbers out of the boys as to give them an opportunity to find out what they are best suited to do," Mr. Conradis explained. "If a boy does find out that he likes plumbing and has aptitude for it we give him all of the practical instruction he is able to impart and do our best to place him in a position where he can use our school. We do not want more plumbers, but better ones."

Mr. Conradis explained that there were a greater number of different kinds of pipe fitting, elbows, joints and tools with which a plumber when starting out in his work must be familiar.

"All of these must be learned," he said, "and we teach the boys how to distinguish between them here."

Large classes divided into sections, with all the different kinds of fittings, are in the classroom in addition to oil heaters, gas burners and bathroom fixtures. All of the shop tools, stocks, dies, cutters, saws, bits, wrenches and the like are used daily in the classroom. The boys do sample jobs of fitting and learn to use the tools in doing it. The simpler rudiments of pipe fitting and a working knowledge of the tools is all the school tries to teach the boys. This, however, is sufficient to give the boys the equivalent to one year of practical work as a plumber's helper, Mr. Conradis estimated.

All Studies Related.

The boy who takes the classroom instruction in plumbing, however, is further ahead at the end of the two-year course than his companion who has worked as a helper during those two years. The vocational student learns not only the practical rudiment of the work, but he studies it from its scientific standpoint. All of his academic study is arranged so as to give him a wider knowledge of his work. Thus in studying history and civics, the industrial phases of those subjects are emphasized.

In the same way the study of science is made "relative" to the trade in which the pupil expects to earn his living. The composition of alloys, which go into the metal with which the boy will work is studied. All of the academic subjects taught in the regular graded schools are taught at the vocational school, so the pupil loses nothing in credit or time by entering the vocational school. English compositions are written on subjects allied to the trade that the pupil is studying, thus giving him training in expression and at the same time greater knowledge of his trade. In a similar fashion other subjects are tied up with the vocational work.

Two hours and 40 minutes are spent in the shops daily and the rest of the day is devoted to academic study. The hours of the vocational work.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL STUDENTS TAKE UP PLUMBING

Students studying to be plumbers at the Abbott Vocational school. Louis Conradis, Washington plumber, is the teacher of this class. Instruction is given in plumbing at both the day and night school classes.

ational school are the same as those of the regular grade schools in the city. There are 140 pupils enrolled in the day school and 205 in the night school. All of the vocational subjects are taught at both the day and night classes.

Mr. Conradis emphasized that the boys attending the plumbing class learned a great deal more than one who went out as a helper without the vocational training. "A plumber earning $11 a day has no time to teach his helper the fine points about plumbing," he said.

Another obvious advantage of the school pointed out by Mr. Conradis was that the instruction not only saved the boy a great deal of time but it saved both time and money for the employer. If the boy does not like plumbing he will find it out at the school at the expense of no one. If he does like it and studies plumbing for two years at the school, he will be an asset to his employer rather than a liability. Naturally his knowledge gained of plumbing at school will help him to advance in his work out of school. This will mean faster advancement with larger pay.

Employers Seek Students.
W. F. Smith, principal of the Abbott school, is enthusiastic over the support the school has received from the manufacturers, employers and plumbers unions. He said that much of the equipment has been furnished by the manufacturers and that the employers were only too glad to hire boys who have studied at the school. The school has increased in enrollment from 32 boys when it was first opened, in September, 1925, to 140 boys this year. A careful check on the local demands for boys in the various trades is kept by the principal, and the classes are adjusted to meet this demand.

"We feel a responsibility for placing our boys," Mr. Smith said, "and we therefore can not train more boys in one trade than there is demand for them."

The capacity of the Abbott school is now taxed to the limit, and more shops will have to be made available to the school before more students can be enrolled. All of the nine classrooms are being used both day and night. Mr. Smith is planning to open classes in electrical and automotive work next year.

MUSSOLINI EVOLVES SYSTEM FOR CALLERS.

Conveys Exactly the Type of First Impression That He Wishes.

Rome, Nov. 6. (By A. P.)—Mussolini has worked out a system of giving the thousands of persons who visit him at his office in the Chigi palace exactly the type of first impression he wants them to have.

The premier's office is a vast, lofty ceilinged room with the desk at the far corner diagonally opposite the entrance from which one must walk 20 or 30 seconds to reach it.

If Mussolini wants to create a warm impression, he walks almost to the door and proffers his hands in cordial greeting. If he wants to be particularly ferocious, he remains behind his desk, almost unseen, writing and then raises his huge glaring eyes at the necessarily intimidated caller.

Between the two types of receptions there is a series of variations with the premier's facial expression playing the major role.

Speakers to Tell How Selling Methods Bring Increased Profits.

C. W. Wanger, president of the Woodward-Wanger Co., of Philadelphia, and president of the Sales Manager's club of that city, will address the Master Plumbers' association of the District on "Merchandising Methods for the Master Plumber," at its meeting Tuesday night in the Oyster building.

Wanger, who was an apprentice 25 years ago, now is head of a house which employs 52 salesmen and stretches across the continent. The success of this organization often has been attributed to Wanger's sales ability.

After serving his apprenticeship with one of the large Philadelphia shops, Wanger worked some time as a journeyman. Later he entered the office, figured the jobs and sold them. Leaving this concern, he went into the business of selling plumber's supplies for a large manufacturing jobber in Philadelphia, and later went into business for himself.

During these years of service Wanger came in contact with every department of the plumbing business. The Sales Manager's club, of Philadelphia, recognized his experience as a merchandising salesman by electing him president, a position he has held for two years. In his talk before the Master Plumbers' association he will explain how salesmen's methods applied to the plumbing business can result in increased profits.

Owner of first American bathtub almost jailed

The first American bathtub on record was used in Cincinnati 80 years ago. Adam Thompson, the owner, brought back the idea from England, where on a visit he met Lord John Russell, inventor of the bathtub.

Thompson had a bathtub made of mahogany, lined with sheet lead. It weighed nearly a ton. A tank in the attic supplied water to the tub. One pipe, coiled down inside a chimney, supplied warm water.

Thompson was so proud of his bathtub that he gave a party, inviting his guests to bathe. Newspapers decried it; politicians thundered against it; even doctors predicted dire consequences to bathers—and Thompson was almost sent to jail! Philadelphia wanted to ban the bathtub, and Boston actually passed an ordinance that made bathing unlawful except upon medical prescription!

Today! There are still too many homes with a lack of facilities for bathing! These make Thompson's bathtub of the 1842 vintage seem luxurious. There's no excuse for this at today's low cost of modern plumbing fixtures.

No home may justly be called modern unless it has sanitary, up-to-date bathing and toilet equipment. Personal hygiene depends largely upon frequent bathing. Bathe frequently—daily if possible—and you'll enjoy life more! The bath-a-day habit is a health habit—increases the pleasure of living.

The kind of modern plumbing equipment that adds to the pleasure of bathing is sold by the plumbing dealers named below.

SPANISH VETERANS' CHAPTERS ADD NEW MEMBERS TO ROLLS

Two Camps Welcome Ten More Recruits; Auxiliary to Celebrate.

PLANS MADE FOR BALL TO BE GIVEN ON DEC. 18

Infantry Association to Observe Mustering Out of Regiment in 1898.

Five new members were added to the rolls of Gen. Nelson A. Miles camp, No. 1, United Spanish War Veterans, at a meeting of the chapter Thursday night. Those inducted were Frank L. Bickerton, Louis Waple, Harry S. Mause, Edward M. Miles and Dallas R. Bowman.

The present membership of the camp is 315, a net gain of 71 members for the year. Department Adjutant William I. Jenkins addressed the members on recruiting matters. Others who spoke were Past Department Commander C. A. Belknap, Adjutant A. E. Pierce and Past Commander D. J. Leahy.

Department Commander E. J. Nolan addressed a meeting Monday night of the Gen. Henry W. Lawton camp, No. 4. The names of ten new members were added to the roster. Brief talks were made by Senior Vice Department Commander Albert M. P. Reynolds, chaplain of Horden camp; Past Commander Daniel Foley, of Horden camp, and Past Department Commander A. H. League.

The fourth anniversary of the organization will be observed by the Col. James S. Pettit auxiliary, No. 6, with a birthday party armistice night in its hall in the Potomac Bank building, Wisconsin avenue and M street northwest, at 8:30 o'clock.

In connection with the party, a reception will be held for the department commander, Nolan, and his staff, and the department president, District of Columbia auxiliary, Edna R. Summerfield, and her staff. All members of the Spanish War Veterans and auxiliaries have been invited.

Arrangements were made Wednesday night for a ball December 15 at the Franklin Square hotel at the third council meeting of the department of the District of Columbia, United Spanish War Veterans, at 321 Pennsylvania avenue.

Plans for a banquet November 20, commemorating the mustering out of its regiments in 1898, were made at a recent meeting of the First District of Columbia Volunteer Infantry association. W. O. Ohm was appointed chairman of the committee on arrangements for the banquet. Final steps will be taken at a meeting Wednesday night in room 325, Southern building.

Meetings of Spanish War Veterans scheduled this week are: Col. James S. Pettit camp, Tuesday; Gen. Nelson A. Miles camp and Col. James S. Pettit auxiliary, Thursday, and Admiral Dewey naval camp, Friday.

Dances to Be Given By New York Society

A series of six dances will be held in the ball room of the Willard hotel as part of the social program of the New York State society. A short program of entertainment arranged by Carlton Van Valkenburg, chairman of the entertainment committee, will precede each dance.

The program of the first meeting, which will be held next Saturday, will be divided between Emanuel Wad, pianist, and Heinrich Meyn, barytone, accompanied by James Russell Barr. Later events will include the Arts Club Players, the Shakespeare Society Players and several well-known artists. A spring festival in April will close the season with the McKinley dancers in an interpretation of modern music written for the occasion.

At a meeting of Equality-Walter Reed post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in Pythian temple Thursday, it was voted to purchase a box at the annual Veterans of Foreign Wars Armistice ball to be held at the Willard hotel, November 11. Members of the post are enthusiastic over the ball.

Capt. Edwin S. Bettelheim, Jr., was presented with a souvenir post department senior vice commander badge for services in the District of Columbia department Veterans of Foreign Wars. The presentation was made by Post Commander Birdsall.

Nominations were opened for the election of all post officers for 1927 and the following nominations were made: Commander, E. J. St. Jacques; senior vice commander, Frank G. Thomas; junior vice commander, Karl K. Kasheer; officer of the day, William I. Snyder and Thomas H. Deckelman; quartermaster, Jay D. Coulter; trustee, Guy H. Birdsall. The nominations will remain open until the night of elections, December 16.

Ordnance Officers To Hear Lectures

Arrangements are being made by Maj. Gen. Clarence C. Williams, chief of ordnance, for a series of lectures to be delivered by officers of the department and other branches of the service, for general instruction and information of the ordnance personnel. Washington. One lecture will be delivered every week.

As a result of recommendations of the chief of cavalry, following tests of various types of cavalry sabers by the cavalry board at Fort Riley, Kan., a modified saber will be manufactured for experimental use. The technical committee of the ordnance office has approved specifications for a pocket watch, for issue in limited quantities to troops requiring them for special purposes.

Army Completes Latest Design of Infantry Guns

37-mm. and 75-mm. Mortars Will Be Tested Soon; Adequate Supply for Entire Service Depends on Appropriations.

The army has completed and in course of manufacture three of each of the latest designs of the 37-mm. gun and the 75-mm. mortar, and recently orders were placed for manufacture of four more of the mortars. Although these new infantry weapons still may be considered to be in the experimental stage, they represent vast improvements over similar weapons now in the hands of troops, and, with the exception of minor modifications, they are likely to be adopted as the infantry cannons of the future.

They will be given extended field tests by the howitzer company of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga., at an early date, and thereafter suitable training regulations pertaining to their technique and tactical employment will be prepared by the infantry board at that post.

The four additional mortars, when completed, probably will be sent to another regiment. The supply for issue to the infantry service as a whole will depend on whether appropriations for that purpose are made.

The chief of infantry has decided to discontinue further experiments in the matter of dismounting the machine gun from tanks and using it for supplementing the organic machine guns of infantry units. The serious tactical objections to separation of the weapons from the tank led to this decision.

If the machine guns were removed and used from a ground mount, the chances are that they would not be returned when the tank was to be used, and without its machine guns the tank virtually is of no value. It also was found in the experiments that the tank machine gun had several unfavorable characteristics when used as a ground gun.

Experiments with the rear sight of the Browning machine gun have led to many suggestions and corrections, but the final solution for an improved gun has not been reached. The chief of infantry recently recommended to the ordnance department a maximum of 2,500 yards range for the rear sight, and for a battle sight with a range between 500 and 700 yards. He particularly noted the point that for machine gun use the rear sight need not be elaborate, but that it should avoid features that become damaged easily. The present type of lead screw frequently jams.

With progressive increase in the cost of the army ration, it will be difficult to maintain present strength with funds available during the coming fiscal year. If increase of food costs continues, it is manifest that there will have to be larger appropriations for the next fiscal year if the army is not to suffer reduction of personnel.

This means that there not only will have to be no decrease in funds appropriated for next year, but there also will have to be some increase, if the military establishment is to be kept in the way of personnel as it is now.

Personnel at Bed Rock.

Combat units already are down to bed rock so far as concerns personnel. Any further reduction in strength necessarily most affects severely accomplishment of the army's mission in so far as association training of civilian components is concerned.

The training season just concluded probably has been the experienced since the war. A system of parent units has been developed in connection with training citizens' military training corps candidates that has proved to be highly satisfactory. The candidates are sent directly to existing units of the regular army.

With the highly trained and interested personnel of these units available, the organization process is simplified greatly. The instruction proceeds with minimum loss of motion. An appreciable reduction in the strength of these regular army units will render them incapable of function as parent organizations, and there must be a reversion to the old system of cadres, which proved to be unsatisfactory and was discarded in favor of the parent unit system.

Important for Training.

Moreover, the strength of the regular army units is an important factor in the training of the organizations, and there must be practical experience in the actual handling of men, both on the drill field and in the execution of tactical exercises. There is nothing that may be substituted for that work.

It is here where the reserve company officers have opportunity to act up to their full capacity and practical experience in the actual handling of men, both on the drill field and in the execution of tactical exercises. There is nothing that may be substituted for that work.

MORE FUNDS NEEDED JOINT MANEUVERS TO BE PRESENT STRENGTH OF ARMY BEING WORKED OUT

Lack of Money in Next Fiscal Year Would Bring Serious Disarrangement.

PERSONNEL OF COMBAT UNITS REACHES MINIMUM

Regular Service Is Important Factor in the Training of Organized Reserves.

Unless sufficient funds are provided to feed, clothe and otherwise maintain the military establishment at its present enlisted strength during the next fiscal year, it is apparent to the military authorities that there will have to be serious disarrangement of present organizations.

Admiral Hughes Is Confering With Staff in Operations' Division Office.

WILL SEE FIRST CORPS GENERAL NOVEMBER 18

Exercises Will Be Held at Narragansett Bay From May 15 to 21.

Although the general scheme of the navy operations next year, with grand joint army and navy exercises in the Narragansett bay area from May 15 to 21, and the dates for movements of vessels, were decided by the Navy Department some time ago, the details of the program are being worked out during conferences of Admiral Charles F. Hughes, commander in chief of the United States fleet, with army and naval officials.

Admiral Hughes, accompanied by Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh, his chief of staff; Capt. George F. Neal, assistant chief of staff; Commander William T. Smith, gunnery officer; Commander Patrick N. L. Bellinger, aviation officer, and Commander Albert T. Church, engineer officer, is in Washington for about a week, and he has his office in the operations division of the Navy Department.

Virtually all components of the fleet, with exception of certain submarines and auxiliaries and vessels at yards in accordance with overhaul schedules, and with exception also of the battleships of the scouting fleet, will participate in the exercises. The army's part in the joint exercises will depend largely upon available funds and the schedule previously determined for movements of various components of the fleet, which contemplate that the battle fleet and train squadron 2 of the fleet base force shall be en route from the Puget Sound, March 14 to 19, that they shall engage in minor joint army and navy exercises at the Panama Canal, March 1 to 5, and that they shall leave Panama March 9.

They are due to arrive at Guantanamo March 15, where they will join the scouting fleet, control force and train squadron 1 of the fleet base force, and engage in tactical, upkeep, and gunnery exercises. On that date, the combined fleet will leave for New York, where the ships are due to arrive April 30 and to remain until May 15, when they will leave for the Narragansett bay area for the joint exercises that will continue until May 21.

The battle fleet and train squadron 2 of the fleet base force will leave May 23 for Panama, where they are scheduled to arrive June 7 and to remain until June 14. They will be en route from the Canal Zone to the San Pedro-San Diego area between June 12 and 24.

After completion of the joint army and navy exercises, the scouting fleet and train squadron 1 of the fleet base force will remain in Narragansett bay until June 27, with exception that the battleships Texas, Florida, and Arkansas will start on the midshipmen's practice cruise June 2. The control force will be in the New London area from May 21 to the end of the fiscal year.

Armistice Luncheon By Military Order

The monthly luncheon of the Military Order of the World War will be held at the Hotel Lafayette on Armistice day, Thursday, at 12:30 o'clock. The luncheon will follow memorial exercises at Arlington.

The principal speaker will be the Hon. William Tyler Page, clerk of the House of Representatives, and author of America's Creed. April 22 will deliver one of his interesting talks on Armistice day.

For studies the requirements will be assigned to a tactical division in the capacity of division commanders, brigade commanders, or chiefs of staff G-3 and G-4; they should be between 40 and 48 years old (except in the case of general officers) and they must have completed subcourses 1, 2, 3 and 4 of correspondence course D. It is the desire of the militia bureau to detail one officer from every infantry and cavalry division, the staff of which has been organized and is functioning. Applications to take the course should be forwarded by State adjutant generals to corps area commanders not later than January 15.

The course primarily will involve command instruction, particularly with relation to a division. Recognizing the difficulty of giving all division commanders the course through inability to attend in many cases, it is deemed essential that certain of the division staff officers have the training, so that the division commander will have its results available to him. It also is the policy of the militia bureau to extend eligibility to the course to regimental commanders qualifying in other respects as soon as the headquarters of divisions and brigades have some graduates.

The course will comprise a brief review of military organization, methods of map problem solution, map reading, field fortifications, tactics, technique, tactical principles and legislation.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the cause of advancing age. He did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stuffed" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowels, muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity."

It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

NATIONAL CLASSES AND CLUBS FEATURE WEEK IN ELECTIONS

Law School and Cy Pres Organization Name Officers for Year.

NEW HEADS OF DOCKET HAVE ASSUMED DUTIES

Students Await With Interest Article by Pergler in American Bar Journal.

Class and club elections featured the last week at National university.

William F. Martin has been chosen president of the senior class at the law school. Other officers elected by the seniors are: Vice president, Edward H. Watson; secretary, Constance D. Fogie; treasurer, Jerome G. Kaufman; sergeant-at-arms, Elmer W. Erickson; class historian, Richard T. Joy; and class orator, E. H. Nye.

Another election of interest to students is that of the Cy Pres club, the women's organization that for several years has been prominent in the affairs of the school. At the semiannual election held Tuesday Mrs. Ann Webster was chosen president. Other officers are: Vice president, Miss Lida L. Kendall; secretary, Miss Anna B. Leach; treasurer, Mrs. Anne Sasuly; reporter, Miss Elizabeth Prender; and sergeant-at-arms, Miss Ellen Kathryn Reedy.

Mrs. Webster will be hostess to members of the club at a tea in her home, 419 Judicial square, today.

Seeley Is Editor.

New officers of the Docket, the year book of the law school, have assumed their posts. Douglas A. Seeley is editor-in-chief; Joseph Ingraham, business manager, and Jerome G. Kaufman, treasurer.

Of interest to students of both the law school and the school of economics and government is the forthcoming publication of an article by Dean Charles Pergler in the journal of the American Bar association. Mr. Pergler's article represents an extensive study on "International Law, Its Acceptance and Enforcement in the United States."

Mr. Pergler deals not only with the various decisions of the courts declaring international law a part of the common law of the United States, but also has made an exhaustive investigation of the origin of that clause in the Federal constitution which confers on Congress the power to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas and offenses against the laws of nations.

Takes Up Statistics.

The article contains a discussion of the theory recently advanced in an authoritative publication that where statutes and even constitutional provisions conflict with international law, the latter should be enforced by the courts. Mr. Pergler takes sharp issue with this point of view and goes deeply into the problem in defense of his stand.

Judge Charles S. Loblins, professor of Roman law and modern civil law, returned last week from a brief visit to his old home in Omaha, Neb., where he attended the session of the Supreme Council of Thirty-Third degree Masons. The object of his mission was to present to the Supreme Council the plan which he had been commissioned to prepare, providing for an official history of the order. The plan was approved.

While in Omaha Judge Loblins addressed the bar association of that city, of which he is a charter member.

Beta, the National University chapter of Phi Beta Gamma, literary fraternity, held its initiation ceremonies last night in the chapter house, Cabin John, Md. Twenty-five were admitted to the fraternity.

Dancers of Central High Training for Fall Revue

A fall revue, featuring interpretative, clog and special dance numbers, is now in the rehearsal stage and will be presented in the near future by Central High school dramatic interests as their premier stage production of the season. It was announced last week.

The script for the revue was written chiefly by Dorothea Lewis, Peggy Croissant, Gwen Norton and Fred Haskin. Miss Katherine Knechtel, assisted by Ivy Stevens, is training the dancers. A one-act play, "Her Chance," is also in preparation. The Banjo club, the school orchestra, and Barnet Breeskin's Conewago Club band, will furnish the musical accompaniment. Bob Lawrence and his brother Willis will be featured in a piano and whistling number and various songs.

Rodney Hatcher was elected president of Central's senior council at its first meeting October 25. Others elected were Dorothea Lewis, vice president; James Sweet, secretary; and Roberta Wright and Stewart Barker, members at large. Warren Moore was elected president of the junior council; Dorothy Saunders, vice president; Frances Edelin, secretary; Joseph Howard, treasurer; and Minor Hudson and Betty Bergman, representatives at large. Fourteen post graduates are attending Central now. They are Ross Popkins, Mina Crocchia, Marian Louise Towle, Mary Hudson, Dorothy Hargrove, Esther Jenkins, Virginia Keyser, Nathaniel Ward, Eugene Young, Josephine Ross, Mary Koons, Elizabeth Greenleaf, Doris Fisher and Maxine Schwarz.

Eva Carlson, editor-in-chief of La Chronique de Central, has announced her staff as follows: Pauline Shoenaker and Mary Querin, associate editors; Spencer Pollard and Burden Hastings, advertising.

DEBATE SCHEDULE AT G. W. UNIVERSITY BIGGEST IN HISTORY

13 Men Selected for Squad to Represent School at Contests.

5 PICKED FOR MEETING WITH CAMBRIDGE TEAM

Election of Vice President Expected at Trustees' Session Wednesday.

The selection of thirteen men to represent George Washington university as a squad from which the debating teams are to be chosen is not seriously considered as an omen of bad luck during the season. This is the largest squad ever to represent the institution and the length and strength of the schedule of debates also is the heaviest in the history of forensic encounters.

Five men already have been selected to represent the university in the coming international debate with Cambridge university here November 29. William F. Sullivan, James B. Kirkland, John T. Trimble, W. R. Ogg and Edward Gallagher have been picked to bear the colors of the Colonials against the Cantabs the latter part of the month.

The thirteen selected for the other engagements are W. A. McSwain, W. Vernon, Lyle Ohlander, Joseph Levinson, R. Harris, Frank Smith, Cyrus Hogland, John Seymour, G. Sanders, W. E. Weigle, J. H. Vesey, and W. I. C. and. In all, 25 debates are scheduled, which will take them North, South and West. The big trip will be later in the year when the team chosen to represent the United States abroad, goes to England for eight engagements with English and Scottish universities.

The stated meeting of the board of trustees of the university will be in Corcoran hall Wednesday. It is expected a vice president will be selected to take the place of the late Col. Archibald Hays of the late President William Mather Lewis will attend the meeting of urban universities to be held at Providence, R. I., Thursday under auspices of Brown university. Dr. Lewis will lead the discussion on one of the problems of this group and will deliver a paper on "The State of Undergraduate Instruction."

New Teaching Course.

Announcement of interest to Teachers college students as well as Washington teachers is the introduction of a new course in the teaching of reading, which began yesterday. The course is being presented by Miss Laura Zirbe, of the first nine grades, and will cover the first nine grades of the system. Outstanding advances have been made in the psychology and pedagogy of reading in the past ten years. Miss Zirbe will bring these advances to the teachers.

Dr. John Palmer was the speaker at chapel exercises Friday, and Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, former secretary of Yale, spoke on Wednesday. Dr. Stokes spoke on "The Life and Work of Walter Camp." Yesterday the George Washington and Ursinus college football teams played the Walter Camp memorial game.

Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, of the department of arts and sciences, will give an illustrated lecture in Corcoran hall on archeology November 7. Mrs. Carroll spent the summer abroad, where she had contact with leading archeological authorities.

The first of the drama course lectures by Prof. Albert Gilmer will be given November 15 in Corcoran hall at 11 a. m. The second lecture will follow that night and the third the night of November 16.

The night lectures start at 8 o'clock. Prof. Gilmer is an authority on the drama and has been a student for 25 years, teaching at the University of Chicago, Harvard and Tufts college. Last summer he studied with Prof. Gilbert Murray at Oxford during 1925, spent the summer visiting the capitals of Europe.

Prof. Edward Secht, of George Washington, read a paper at Johns Hopkins university last week on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the institution.

Receives 165 Books.

At the first meeting of the Faculty club Prof. Elmer Louis Kayser spoke on "Origins of the Modern University." Prof. E. C. Arnold was elected vice president of the organization to take the place of Prof. Clarence T. Underhill, who now is at Iowa University.

By the courtesy of the Argentine government, George Washington university recently received a representative collection of 160 books. The volumes are a notable addition to the university library.

The university cross-country team, composed of Horace, Dominick, Ralph Brown, Sherman Johnson and Robert Volland, will be sent to Philadelphia November 11 to take part in the national cross-country meet.

The team has made a first-class showing in the cross-country runs this fall. Practically all athletic activities in the university are in full swing now. Football is at the height of the season and preparations are under way for a big gathering Thanksgiving day in the annual game with Catholic university. The football hop has been scheduled for December 1.

All women's sports are booming and basketball as well as tennis and field hockey are drawing more than a full quota of candidates. Intercollegiate athletics for both men and women have taken a firm hold in the student body under the direction of H. Watson Crum and Miss Virginia Hopkins.

Communist Deputy Is Among Wealthiest

Paris, Nov. 6 (By A. P.).—Camrad Berthoin is considered one of the noisiest communist deputies in the chamber. He also is one of the richest. A lawyer by profession, he has appeared at some of the most important trials.

When acting on behalf of a very rich woman, suing her husband, a Siamese prince, for 2,000,000 francs as a settlement after divorce, one of Berthoin's constituents happened to be in the audience room. During a suspension of proceedings, he approached "his" deputy.

"You are not on the level," said the workman. "In the meeting for the cause you excite us against the bourgeois and you come here in court and fight tooth and nail for their money."

GEORGETOWN DRAMA CLUB WILL PRESENT THREE BARRIE PLAYS

Group, Under New Plan, Will Offer Productions Each Month.

HONORS FOR MEMBERS OF DENTISTS' FACULTY

Big Medical School Freshman Class Divided Into Two Sections.

"A Night of Barrie" is to be the theme for the first presentation this season by the Mask and Bauble club of Georgetown university, when three of the popular one-act plays of James M. Barrie will be offered the night of November 17 in Trinity Parish hall.

The Mask and Bauble club originally was organized to stimulate interest in Shakespearean productions among the students. Each season one of the dramas of Shakespeare was produced and it was planned to stage "Julius Caesar" as the initial offering this month. Shakespeare, however, has been abandoned, temporarily at least, and the Mask and Bauble club will devote its attention hereafter chiefly to modern drama.

The plays to be presented November 17 are "The Three-Pound Luck," "The Will" and "The New Word." The casts have been chosen and rehearsals have begun. A judges' committee comprising Henry Landvoigt, dramatic critic of the Evening Star; Leonard Hall of the Washington Post; Harold Phillips of the Washington Times and L. Somers, of the Washington Herald has been invited to pass on the merits of the performances and select the student actor to whom will be awarded a gold medal for the best interpretation of his role.

To Offer Monthly Programs.

Instead of limiting the season to one performance, the dramatic club is arranging to offer a series of monthly programs and a movement is afoot to arrange an outdoor pageant in connection with the June commencement. It is possible a Shakespearean production will be given later in the season.

The casts for the three plays were announced as follows: "The Three-Pound Luck," Frank Moran, John Laughlin, Thomas Ward and Paul Lyons. "The Will," William O'Neil, Philip Call, Augustus P. Kane Jr., and Dean Benson. "The New Word," Joseph Mullens, John Legler, Joseph Garner and M. Walker.

Day Students club at the Hilltop, comprising mostly Washingtonians, has elected James S. Ruby, Jr., president, and is working on a program of activities. Other officers of the club are Elliot Wiglesworth, vice president; Aloysius P. Kane, Jr., secretary, and James F. O'Donnell, treasurer.

Among two early social events in which the Hilltop students are interested particularly are the senior class party on the afternoon of November 12 at the Mayflower hotel and the annual junior smoker Thursday night. Many students made the trip to Syracuse, N. Y., for the football game yesterday, and those less fortunate received the returns by special arrangement at the college.

Honor for Dentist.

Announcement was made that Dr. Michael L. Mullaney, graduate of the school of dentistry, and a member of the dental faculty, was elected a fellow of the American College of Dentists in Providence, R. I., October 23.

Dr. Mullaney is the first graduate of the Georgetown school to receive this position in recognition of his advanced work and contribution to the profession. He also will be given the Proctor's Alumni association of Georgetown, and lectures on radiology at the dental school.

At a recent election held by the sophomore class John W. Dudley was chosen president. Other officers are Donald D. Brewster, vice president; Ernest E. Bohys, secretary; D. Joseph Gallagher, treasurer; and Joseph Mendel, historian.

The present freshman class at the medical school, said to be the largest in the history of the school, has been compelled on account of its small size to drop the tradition of the foreign service school. It was announced by the assistant dean, Dr. Thomas H. Healy, have been placed in the government service or promoted to a Washington position for several years has served as assistant trade commissioner of the Department of Commerce at Rio de Janeiro, has been promoted to trade commissioner. Cremer recently completed an itinerary which included practically all the large industrial cities in the United States and soon will return to Brazil.

Service Men Step Up.

Ernest Tutt, another former student, is district manager of the Houston, Tex., office of the Department of Commerce. He was formerly cotton adviser to the Argentine government, having been lent to that government two years ago by the department. On account of the shortage of personnel in China, Richard Butrick, a recent graduate, has been transferred to that country. John B. Faust, newly appointed vice consul, has reported to the foreign service school in the State Department.

Dr. Healy has received several communications recently from Charles F. Kunkel, student at the school, who is touring the country in the Josephine Ford, Fokker monoplane that carried Commander Richard E. Byrd to the north pole. Kunkel is the personal representative of the Gugenheim foundation which is financing the trip in the interests of aviation. They are now in the West.

Five New Altars of Onyx Placed in Catholic Shrine

Five new altars of perfect Algerian onyx have been placed in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception. They are richly carved and rank among the finest specimens of this costly work. One of them is dedicated to St. Bright, the famous abbot of Kildare in Ireland.

The fifteen altars of the crypt now are in place and by Christmas the high altar, also of Algerian onyx, will be in position. It is a double altar, and will be dedicated to Our Lady of the Catacombs. It will have mosaic of the Twelve Apostles, on the front, rear and sides. Each mosaic figure will be 2 feet high. The figure of Christ, also in mosaic, will be in the center front.

Among recent acquisitions of the university library are a complete set of the valuable archives of the Province of Quebec and 100 mathematical volumes from the estate of the late Martin J. Browne, of New York, among them the two rare volumes of the Enchiridion translation of the mathematical works of Maria Agnesi, a famous eighteenth century professor of mathematics at Bologna.

The entrance of the John K. Mullen Memorial library is approaching completion. The main corridor of the first floor, 140 by 40 feet, now is ornamented with 28 colorful Italian marble, probably unsurpassed in this country for delicacy and variety of color. They were selected by the late Dr. N. N. McBride, one of the foremost connoisseurs of the quarries of Italy. The vestibule and the main staircase of the Mullen library also are of marble throughout and are enriched with fine columns.

An elaborate program for education week has been prepared. The exercises will take place in the auditorium of the Maloney chemical laboratory at noon tomorrow, Wednesday, and Friday. All classes will be suspended so professors and students may have an opportunity to join in the exercises. Three papers will be presented on each day, as follows:

Tomorrow, Dr. Jordan, "Education and Moral Development;" Dr. Foran, "Catholic Opportunities in Educational Research;" Dr. Stock, "The Constitution and Freedom of Education."

Wednesday, Dr. Lennox, "The Function of Literature in the Development of Character;" Dr. Edwin Ryan, "Cardinal Newman's Idea of an Educated Man;" Mr. Deering, "The Educational Value of the Drama."

Friday, Dr. Landry, "Religion and Exact Science;" Dr. Ward, "Some Catholic Chemists;" Dr. MacKavanagh, "What Can the Catholic College Do for Its Graduates?"

The choral is under the direction of Mrs. Carrie Byram, assisted by Miss Mary L. Wood, while Isaac B. Simon, of the physical training department, is rehearsing the dancers. The show is to be given with a double cast and a chorus of 80. The scenes are laid in England during the time of George III.

The new cadet uniforms, different from those formerly used, will be delivered this week. Like the new army uniforms, the blouse is made with a long roll collar and the coat with a lapel style collar.

The Girls' Rifle club has a number of recruits this year, many of whom have shown marked ability. Helen Seitz, the manager, has announced several matches will be scheduled with high schools of other cities.

The Alpha Epsilon fraternity will give its first open dance at Denlee's November 19, while Epsilon Mu Sigma will hold its fall dance a week later at the Washington hotel. The Merrill club held its dance Friday at Denlee's. The Lee Cadettes club is making arrangements to dress a doll to be sent to Japan for the Doll festival.

COMRADES OF POST TO BE BUDDIES NOW

Veterans of Foreign Wars Believe Greeting Will Foster Memories.

Front Line post, No. 1401, Veterans of Foreign Wars, voted to discard the salutation, "Comrade," in favor of the more popular "Buddy" as a form of address at post meetings, at a recent session of the members. The opinion was advanced that "Buddy" would serve to keep alive memories of the stirring days of 1917 and 1918 more than the old greeting.

The post shortly is planning to launch its winter recruiting campaign. Val Brandon, W. J. Wilkins, Abram Grubb and Frank Topash have been named members of the recruiting committee. Plans for an active winter season of entertainment are nearing completion.

Wednesday members of the post will visit the Baltimore Veterans of Foreign Wars, attending the latter party in their honor in Baltimore. Thursday they will participate in the fifth annual ball of the District Veterans of Foreign Wars department at the Willard hotel. A banquet to Grand Team Seattle, V. N. Brandon and another trip to Baltimore with the T. N. T. No. 1 Cooties, are scheduled to take place in the next few weeks.

BALLSTON GIRL WINS APPLE WEEK PRIZE

Contest Committee Announces Awards for Honors in School Essay Competition.

Twelve-year-old Elizabeth Martin of the Washington Lee junior high school, Ballston, Va., carried off first honors and a prize of $10 in the school essay contest conducted by the Washington Apple Week. A banquet to Grand Team Seattle, V. N. Brandon and another trip to Baltimore with the T. N. T. No. 1 Cooties, are scheduled to take place in the next few weeks.

Emilie Payne, 15 years old, also of the Washington Lee high school, was awarded the second prize of $5. Awards of a box of apples each were made to Elizabeth Smith, 13 years old, Langley junior high school; Hester Waldron, 13 years old, Brookland school; and Gertrude Geller, 11 years old, of the Bryan school.

In her essay Miss Martin traced the origin of the apple to the Garden of Eden, terming it the oldest fruit known. All of the present 1500 varieties originated from the crab apple, she said. She concluded with, "Apples are recommended by all doctors for health; indeed, apples are the king of fruits."

DR. DEVINE DEPARTS FOR MIDDLE WEST ON SPEAKING TOUR

Various Institutions to Hear Dean of Graduate School of American U.

PROGRESS BEING MADE ON NEW GYMNASIUM

Probably Will Be Completed About Dec. 1; Women Form Athletic Group.

Dr. Edward T. Devine, dean of the graduate school of American university, who for years has been lecturing throughout the country, in addition to his scholastic, governmental and Red Cross activity, has left Washington for a tour of the middle West during which he will speak at several places before returning next Saturday. His program also calls for trips later.

On this tour Dr. Devine already has spoken at Lindenwood college, a Presbyterian women's college in St. Charles, Mo., from the topic "Mexico Today." The Wisconsin Teachers association will be addressed next from the subject "The Social Aim of Education."

Other audiences on this trip will be at Beloit college, Beloit, Wis.; Elmhurst college, a Lutheran institution for men, near Chicago; Earlham college, an institution of the Society of Friends, at Richmond, Ind.; Kiwanis club of Richmond, and the Women's club of Richmond. His subject of the last address will be "Citizens of the World."

During the first week in December Dr. Devine will go to Trenton, N. J., and Bethlehem, Pa.

Lucius C. Clark, chancellor of American university, has returned from Philadelphia.

Miss Elizabeth Drew, prominent English woman, lecturer on literary subjects, will give an address the night of November 18, at the women's residence hall on the campus, from the subject "Modern English Humors." The lecture will be open to the public.

The students' council has elected officers as follows: President, Hugh Speer; vice president, Vera Stafford; and secretary, Catherine Edwards.

Progress is being made on the new gymnasium, and the structure, which also is to be used for dramatics and other college affairs, probably will be completed about December 1. While details of the dedication have not been completed, it is understood the first three affairs to be held there will be a basketball game, a musicale and a play.

Girls of the college have been playing hockey on the campus under direction of Miss Julia Pennington, director of women's athletics. The first interclass game resulted in a victory over sophomores for the freshmen Thursday by the score of 5 to 6. Miss Sara Martz was captain of the freshman team and Miss Beulah Widstrand led the sophomores.

The Women's Athletic association has been formed, with election of the following officers: President, Aileen Vlahis; vice president, Mary Chadwick; secretary, Ruth Rinkel; treasurer, Ruth Rinkel; and social secretary, Helen Edwards.

Mrs. Warren Dudley, formerly of West China Union university, addressed the college chapel Tuesday on the work of that university.

CHILDREN CRY FOR

Fletcher's CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity of digestion from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

To avoid imitations always look for the signature of Dr. J. C. Fletcher. Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

AUTOMOBILE VITAL FACTOR IN GROWTH OF FILM INDUSTRY

Motor Car Provides Movie Director With Means of Producing Thrills.

TRUCKS CARRY BULKY PROPERTY TO LOCATION

Cars Provide Patronage for Rural Theaters, Bringing Farmers From Far Away.

By EDWIN GREER,
President Greer College of Automobile and Electrical Trades, Chicago, Ill.

Can you perceive a motorless world producing any kind of a motion picture? Without motor cars there would be no motion pictures, for the two industries are just wrapped up in one another.

The automobile might merely take your favorite star to location, but again it might be the whole plot of the piece, as in a motor racing story.

You say, "Give us a thrill." They reply, "Get us a motor car!" There is that usual automobile race—when you grip the arms of the seat while your hero tears madly around curves and slyly dodges the villain.

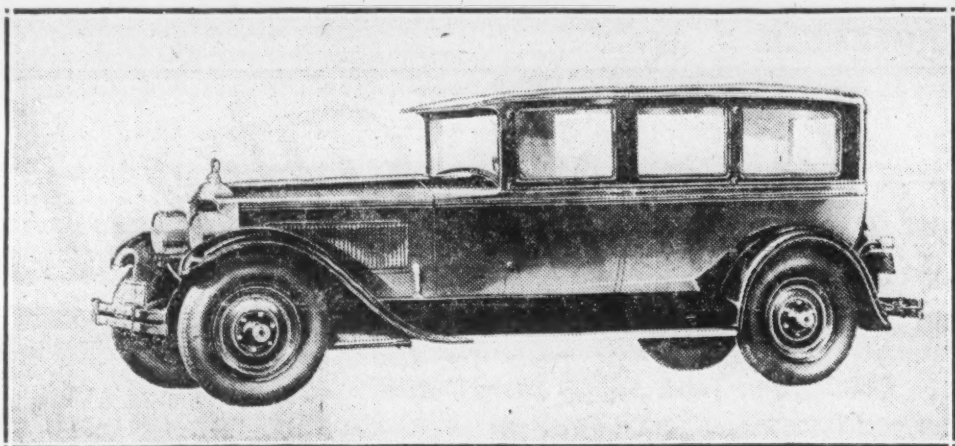

You know he must win—he always does—but nevertheless you get just as much enjoyment as he tears past the goal, ahead by the merest fraction of an inch! Then how would we get rid of unnecessary wives and husbands, and still more unnecessary villains, if we could not conveniently roll the cars over cliffs or run into trains?

Motor Car Makes Thrills.

It is not only convenient—it is also a most thrilling announcement. If I went on to enumerate all the tense moments we get out of motors, you would find that almost every interesting situation holds one from the famous "flapper petting parties" and the probable walk back to "the hero's chase after the villain" in the last reel. Yes, we will hand it to the car when it comes to thrills.

There are many other uses for cars that are peculiar to the pictures. One huge truck had to carry a motor generator for power down in Florida. This generator developed power enough for a city of 10,000 population, so you can imagine the size.

Autos Insure Patrons.

In the smaller cities and towns, however, the audiences at the movie houses are largely motoring folk. Look at any movie house in one of the smaller towns during a performance and you will find adjacent streets and byways cluttered with cars. In what government statistics call "rural towns," places with 5,000 or fewer inhabitants, the movie house showing first-class films could not live without the patronage of farmers and their families from the surrounding district. I have seen numberless cases in middle Western towns—in Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska and other States—where the cars parked around the movie theater during a performance were numerous enough to have brought in every person attending the show.

And what a blessing the movies have been to rural America. The farm family, which traditionally lives in isolation, content to make the interests of its own acres the motivation of its entire life, is now able to step from the narrow round of the humdrum into high life in European capitals or the thrills of melodrama, or any other phase of life that its nearest movie house chances to be presenting.

Check Wheel Alignment.

If your car tends to run to one side of the road or steers hard, see that the air pressure is even in both front tires. Then have the front wheels checked for alignment and the front axles for a possible bend. Wheels may be thrown out of alignment or an axle bent from a jolt against a curb or from striking a large obstruction. The number of cars seen running on the road with the wheels out of line is surprising.

DUESENBERG FACTORY PURCHASE STIRS RUMORS

E. L. Cord Answers Inquiries as to Future of Great Motor Plant.

HIGHEST PRICE FOR CARS

Probably nothing has transpired in recent years in the automotive industry that has created the widespread interest and multiplicity of rumors as the recent purchase of the Duesenberg factory at Indianapolis by a group headed by E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co.

Mr. Cord has received so many letters and telegrams that he feels a public explanation is necessary. Bankers, automobile dealers and prominent members of the industry have written him for verification or denial of many rumors.

"I never dreamed that this would attract the attention that it has," said Mr. Cord. "I want to answer some of the many questions. It positively is not the first step of a proposed combination of factories as rumored. Auburn dealers will not handle the Duesenberg line. There is absolutely no connection between the Auburn Automobile Co. and Duesenberg, Inc. Wall street is not behind this deal. Fred Duesenberg will remain in the organization as vice president, in charge of experimental engineering. We will continue to originate and build racing cars and expect to announce some radical changes soon. We will not exhibit Duesenberg cars in the New York automobile show this year, but instead will have a private exhibit at some hotel. We will exhibit this fall at the foreign car salon in New York and Chicago. Duesenberg cars will be the highest priced in the world, all strictly custom built. We are already at work on plans for extensive additions to the factory. We intend to definitely and completely establish America's leadership over all European competition in design, power, speed, refinements, and, in fact, in every phase of a motor car's construction and quality."

Mr. Cord said his reasons for acquiring Duesenberg were simply to avail himself of the greatest automotive engineering genius made, to be able to give Americans a finer car than can be procured in Europe.

Light Lock Washer Sometimes Needed

Lock washers can be a help or a hindrance, depending upon how tightly the nut is drawn up. In one instance a very heavy washer was used to hold a nut that could not be drawn up very tight because of the difficulty of applying wrenches.

Thus the split ends of the washer were free to scrape against the side of the nut and the frame of the car, causing a noise that was difficult to locate. The remedy was to use a lighter washer.

Exhaust Packing Important.

Keep all connections on the exhaust pipe packed tight. Otherwise the exhaust gases will come through the floor boards, resulting in headaches and often more serious results. Carbon monoxide gases are dangerous and give no warning.

ONE COAST-TO-COAST ROUTE REACHES 97 PER CENT IMPROVED

Federal Report on Highway
From Washington to San Diego, Calif.

BEST ROADS ACROSS COUNTRY ARE SHOWN

Pleasant Transcontinental Driving Replaces Hazards of Ten Years Ago.

A recent report of the Federal aid highway system shows that there is one transcontinental route which has reached a status of 97 per cent improvement. T. H. McDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, cites this as indication of the general interest taken in highways.

This almost completely improved road extends from this city through St. Louis, Texarkana and El Paso, Tex., to San Diego, Calif. Of this entire length, 93 per cent is surfaced and 4 per cent is graded. Of the surfaced portion, more than half is bituminous macadam or better, and the remainder gravel. From Washington to St. Louis the entire road is improved. This road to San Diego is more nearly complete than any transcontinental route. Its total length is 3,133 miles, and of this distance 2,907 miles are surfaced and 131 miles are graded.

68 Per Cent Improved.

Among the other Eastern and Western transcontinental routes, the one from Norfolk, Va., to Los Angeles is 68 per cent improved. The one from Chicago to Los Angeles, partly by the same line, is 63 per cent improved. The route from Boston to Seattle through the northern tier of States is 73 per cent improved and 69 per cent surfaced.

According to the report, these comprise the best routes across the country, and though with one exception none is more than about two-thirds surfaced, the present condition is so much better than that existing ten years ago, when the Federal aid road act was passed, that the situation is taken to indicate remarkable progress.

It is pointed out that today there are 25 States having continuously improved highways entirely across them in at least one direction. Sixteen of these have completed such trans-State roads in two directions.

That motor tourists appreciate improved highways is indicated in the check of cars arriving in southern California by the Automobile Club of Southern California. This big motoring organization, in comparing the arrivals of the first eight months of 1926 with the same period last year, shows that there has been an increase of more than 16 per cent in this period. There were 119,419 cars entering the borders of the State, the majority of which came in over the most highly improved transcontinental routes.

The fact that the southern route is the most highly improved makes it popular, in addition to its being free from winter storms frequently blocking the northern routes. A motoring trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific ten years ago was an adventure, while today it merely is a pleasurable sightseeing expedition.

Hupmobile Eight has outsold and is outselling cars of comparable price because it offers far more in beauty and luxury as well as in impressively finer performance.

And it has successfully invaded the field above its price, for motorists have found that higher investment can bring no greater return in the essentials that constitute sound value.

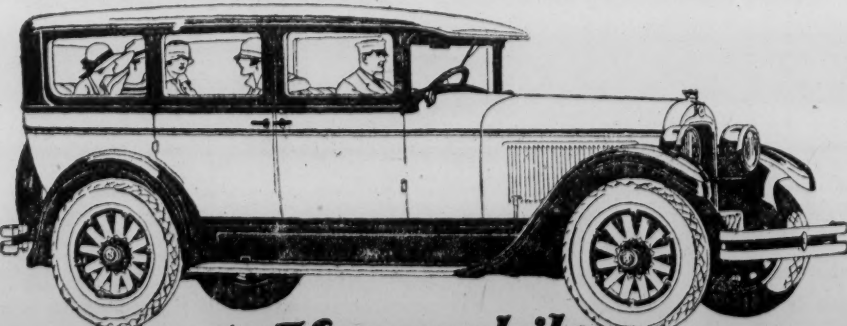

Public appreciation of a new and finer development in motoring was never shown more conclusively and promptly.

Announced two years ago, Hupmobile Eight attained immediate leadership as the ultimate perfection of the straight-eight principle. It has steadily increased its prestige and its hold on popular favor every month since.

The reasons for this striking success lie within the car itself. For Hupmobile has brought to the Eight new smoothness and agility, new engineering superiorities, and new ease of handling that literally place this car in a class apart.

We could detail at length the advanced engineering features which have contributed to Hupmobile's greatest achievement. But only a ride in the Eight will convince you that this car possesses in an enhanced degree all the virtues of the most costly cars of other types, at a price which immeasurably broadens the eight-cylinder market.

COURTESY AS MEANS TO STOP ACCIDENTS IS URGED BY HAYNES

Dodge Brothers' Chairman
Also Emphasize Education at National Safety Congress.

RECEIVE HIS PRAISE

Pledges Fullest Efforts of Auto Industry: Outlines Guide for Motorists.

W. J. "BUCK" HARVARD, who has been appointed a metropolitan dealer for Hudson and Essex automobiles.

Pointing to the human factor, as the crux of the traffic problem, Frederick J. Haynes, chairman of Dodge Brothers, named education and courtesy as the chief ways of preventing accidents, in addressing the National Safety Congress in the Book-Cadillac Hotel, Detroit, held there recently.

If every one can be taught what to do, and train himself in courtesy, 95 per cent of the accidents would not occur, Mr. Haynes contended.

The rules are simple, and consideration for others requires no great sacrifice, the speaker said.

As a director of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, speaking before the congress on behalf of the automobile industry, Mr. Haynes pledged the fullest efforts of that business on behalf of accident prevention work. He paid tribute to the work of safety councils, the schools, the press and public officials, but he looked for the best results to come from school and adult education and from a sense of responsibility on the part of the individual citizen.

While emphasizing the fact that one fatality is too many, that the nation can not rest until the yearly toll is reduced to a minimum, he pointed out that those working for safety are entitled to encouragement. Had the number of accidents in 1917 in ratio to the number of vehicles continued at the same rate today the annual toll would have been 44 per cent higher than it is. This 44 per cent cut in the rate has taken place in the face of an 8 per cent increase in the population.

As a guide to safe motoring, he suggested these three points:

1. Never drive at a speed in which you can not stop in the clear space ahead of you.
2. When passing parked vehicles watch the ground under the vehicles for feet. If there are no feet, then no one can step out on you unawares. If there are feet, you must be ready for any emergency.
3. When passing trucks or commercial vehicles watch out for possible children catching a ride.

Recognizing that much remains to be done in the way of improving traffic conditions, the speaker made the following recommendations:

1. A uniform system of traffic laws for the entire United States.
2. Widening of streets wherever possible and to the greatest extent.
3. Removing all bottle necks in all arteries.
4. Removal of shrubbery and hedges tending to obscure crossings.

FUEL RECTIFICATION PROCESSES REFINES OILS IN CRANKCASE

Impurities Are Boiled Off and Viscosity Maintained at High State.

ENGINEERS' DEVICE WONDERFUL INVENTION

Motorist Is Absolved From Making Daily Tests, Packard Man Says.

Mother Nature and motordom both have reaped enormous advantages from the genius of the engineer in the last few years. Prominent among these recently gained advantages are those resulting from the oil rectification processes that have been developed by the engineer into so valuable an adjunct to the motorist's pleasure and so helpful to his purse.

This point is made by Oscar Coolican, local Packard dealer, who declares:

"Although millions of motor cars are being added each year to those already on the streets, Nature is not producing a single additional gallon of gasoline to propel these vehicles. This presents a pretty problem to the oil refiners; but, thanks to their ingenuity, various processes have been invented which make the old-time gallon of gasoline go farther and serve more."

"With fuel in plenty and at a reasonable price, came, however, some liabilities for the motorist. These liabilities varied with the owner's use of the car. The man who drove winter and summer alike with short runs and frequent stops found that present-day fuel, necessarily less volatile, was diluting his crankcase oil. The man who drove long distances at high speeds, found the same trouble, but in a lesser degree."

Daily Test Impossible.

"Obviously, it is impossible for the average motor car owner to test, daily, the viscosity or 'body' of his crankcase oil. Hence, there was evolved the motor oil rectifier, a device which automatically keeps tab on the motor oil and maintains its lubricating qualities."

"By the oldest system known to nature, that of boiling, the oil rectifier constantly refines the crankcase oil, boils off its impurities and maintains its viscosity at such a high state that only infrequent changes and refills of the crankcase now are necessary."

"Motorists are deeply indebted to the engineers who have invented and developed this marvelous device."

Used Car Causes Anxiety To Dealer in Automobiles

Extent of Business Depends on Old Units That Can Be Moved; Owner Becomes Salesman; Only 15 Per Cent of Sales Involve New Cars.

Like every line of business, the automobile has its drawbacks, and the principal stumbling block in the selling of motor transportation is the used car.

It is this particular piece of merchandise that causes greater anxiety upon the part of the dealer and his factory than all the other features of the business, because the number of new units that can be sold depends almost entirely upon the number of used units that can be moved. This can be best realized when the fact is borne in mind that more than 85 per cent of all automobile sales involve the handling of a used machine.

It is in the used car end that the dealer becomes the customer and the owner the salesman. The owner has the dealer somewhat at a disadvantage because he is trying to sell a piece of merchandise which has no fixed price and at the same time is trying to buy an article of a predetermined price. Naturally every one thinks that what he owns is worth money, more money, perhaps, than the true market value. It is worth more money to the particular individual who is the owner in question, but its value to another is a different matter.

The dealer on his part must consider what the car will bring on the market and how much he must spend upon it to put it in salable shape. To this must be added the cost of doing business, which in most every case results in an offer far less than the owner in his rashest moments had expected. He, the owner, many times puts himself up as an expert on automobile values, when as a matter of fact his experience is very limited. He sets out to sell his old automobile rather than to buy a new one, with the result that somewhere up and down the row he will find a dealer that perhaps will come somewhere meeting the allowance asked.

All thought upon the part of the buyer is lost as to whether the automobile he can buy with a big allowance is suited to his needs and whether the company behind the product is financially sound.

Perhaps the big allowance will not show itself until such time as the owner is ready again to go in the market for a car. He will then be sadder but wiser, for he will learn the true value of the car he bought.

Dealers are in business to make money, and with constant increase of overheads they must watch every opportunity to save money. At the best their margin of profit on new merchandise is not sufficient to enable them to throw any of it away and still remain in the field. The better dealers, and these are the successful ones in every city, are today scanning the used car allowances with an eagle eye and prefer tussling up deals that are not profitable rather than accept them for the sake of having another car on the street.

Timing Gear Noise May Mean Good Fit

Car owners might do well to endure a slight humming for a few days after new timing gears have been put in the car. It means the gears will fit better after they have worn in.

The motor owner who demands quietness in this part of the car frequently makes his appeal so strong that a smaller camshaft gear is installed to humor him. When the gears begin to wear they make more noise than ever.

Tests Show Tires Worn by Macadam

Tests made at the State College of Washington show that an average touring car, traveling 1,000 miles over a macadam road, wears away one-half pound more rubber per tire than when traveling the same distance on a concrete road.

the Costly Cold Weather "Choke" Habit to which automotive authorities attribute 50 to 75% of all premature motor wear

IT'S the "choke" habit, say automotive authorities, that brings the damage done to motors in cold weather.

Flooding your motor with raw gasoline is a costly "warming-up" process. It washes cylinders and cylinder walls clean of the oil film of protection. Metal to metal contact follows. Scoring, pitting and rapid cylinder wear result. Extreme carbonization and corrosion follow. Gasoline consumption is increased at a tremendous rate.

It can be installed while you wait without changes to your car. Delay is costly—don't wait for severe weather. At 60° Fahrenheit your motor needs Winterfront protection.

This New Jewett Brougham

is a Style Car, too!

FORTUNATE, indeed, are those who prefer the 2-door enclosed car! For in this beautiful new Jewett Brougham they can obtain the smartness and luxury and custom-exclusiveness of Paige built cars—at a cost no higher than they would expect to pay for an ordinary car.

Much of the charm of this Brougham is due to its exceptional roominess—its extra-wide doors—its inviting rear seat—to the comfortable chair seats in front, adjustable to the driver's size—to the smart and tasteful trimming.

This new Brougham is powered with a larger Jewett motor. It retains all of Jewett's remarkable ease of handling, quick acceleration and complete reliability. It retains, of course, the perfected Paige-Hydraulic 4-Wheel brakes. But it adds to these features a new smartness and style that you simply must see to appreciate. Come in—a demonstration will entail no obligation whatsoever.

There are in the charming new Paige and Jewett line, fourteen body types and color combinations (style leaders every one!) at factory list prices ranging from $1195 to $2245.

BEAUTY

never knew a Castile soap exquisite like this!

For six hundred years Beauty has acknowledged the supreme virtue of Castile Soap. In Spain, where Castile first was made; in Spain, land of the most gorgeous complexions in all Europe, the flower of Race and Luxury, will use nothing else!

There is nothing else that can approach the delicious blandness of Castile! But how little it looks the part. Nameless! Shapeless! Clumsy! Small wonder many dainty women do not include this impossible object among the exquisite indispensables of their toilette!

But—at last—we have made for you an exquisite Castile. Doña! Molded in Cameo perfection for the intimacy of your hand. In a charming dress. And we have added these virtues: Instant lather, even in cold water; instant rinsing, too. What a blessing to women with delicate skins! Delicious, too, for the shampoo! Doña is "hard-milled," firm, it will last!

Plain, is it not?—the reason why millions of women who would not use Castile, now use—and love—Doña? What feminine woman could resist its feminine perfections? Not you—if you use it once! Buy it where you buy your toilet soap. Armour, U.S.A.
